HIGH SCHOOL GIRL ELOPES WITH TECH STUDENT

Tearful Confession of Wedding Clears the Mystery of Pearson's Quitting Studies—Her Parents Have Forgiven Her.

The mystery of why Catherine Parsons, senior in Dorchester High School, left school and studies about ten days ago was explained yesterday when it was learned that she and "Jack" Heller of Waltham, a Tech graduate, eloped and were married just about that time.

They were engaged, with the approval of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Frank S. Parsons of No. 167 Adams street, and were to be married a year from this June. The parents had planned to take Catherine abroad after her graduation next month, but the young people couldn't wait a year.

The bride admitted the wedding at the Parsons home last night. Schoolgirls, speculating upon "Kittie" Parsons' leaving school, just at the eve of graduation, remarked: "Maybe she's married to 'Jack' Heller." Their engagement was known to her chums.

ADMITS MARRIAGE.

This led to reporters going to the Parsons home last night. Miss Parsons—or Mrs. Heller, to use her name now—came to the door and, when asked if she was married, smiled and said:

"Well, yes, I am married."

"To 'Jack' Heller?"

"Yes."

"Do you mind telling when and by whom?"

"Oh, about two weeks ago, by the Rev. C. W. Huntington, the Congregationalist minister in Waltham."

That was all the bride would tell, but from friends of the family more details were obtained. The elopement story runs this way:

ON SHOPPING TOUR.

Between ten days and a fortnight ago Mrs. Parsons and her daughter came in town for shopping, as the mother thought. In one of the department stores the daughter said she would go out to take a little walk. She didn't come home until night. When her mother questioned her she finally wept a little and confessed that she had met "Jack" by appointment and gone to Waltham, where they were married.

Dr. Parsons was told and Heller was sent for the next day, with forgiveness and blessings all around.

The bridal couple are living now at the Parsons home, but will leave next month for Helena, Mont., where Heller's father, Francis Heller, lives.

MET FRIEND'S SISTER.

The romance dates back to the time when the bride's brother, Frank Parsons, brought his friend, "Jack" Heller, out to one of the Allen Club socials at Dix Street Unitarian Church in Dorchester. There Heller met his friend's sister.

Heller is an electrical engineer about twenty-two years old. His father is an insurance manager of considerable means.

Interstate Board Stands 5 to 2 for R. R. Rate Increase

Advance to Be Ordered on May 25, It Is Expected.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—Five of the seven members of the Interstate Commerce Commission favor an increase in the freight rates requested by the Eastern railroads in the Eastern classification territory, and will so decree in the decision which it is expected will be handed down May 25. The average increase to be granted will range from 3½ to 4 per cent.

This information was obtained from exceptionally reliable sources here tonight, and in addition it was learned that the commissioners favoring the increase are Clement, Clark, Harlan, Hall and Daniels.

Ends Life in Grief Over Wife's Death

M. A. Kindred Found Asphyxiated in Worcester.

WORCESTER, May 16.—Manley A. Kindred, retired business man, who had grieved over the death of his second wife for three years, was found dead today in his lodgings at No. 41 Pleasant street, a victim of asphyxiation by illuminating gas. Medical Examiner Baker pronounced the case one of suicide.

Mr. Kindred was sixty years old. Miss Minnie Johnson, landlady, says:

"Mr. Kindred said to me several times: 'I don't care about living since Mary died.'"

One of the lodgers smelled gas late this afternoon. It was traced to Mr. Kindred's room. The police forced the door. Mr. Kindred had been dead about ten hours.

The police are looking for his stepson, said to live in this city, to have him take charge of the body, now at the City Morgue.

Argentine, Chile, in Embassy Rank

WASHINGTON, May 16.—At a brief ceremony at the White House this afternoon President Wilson signed the bills, raising the Chilean and Argentine ministries to ambassadorships. The President said that the action by the United States in elevating the diplomatic representation of the two countries was a fitting recognition of their services in trying to establish peace in Mexico.

Train Kills Man Chasing Baseball

AVON, May 16.—While chasing a baseball across the railroad tracks late today, Cornelius Lynch, sixty years old, was struck by a Brockton bound express train and instantly killed. Lynch was a shoe-worker by trade and was playing baseball near the Howard Street Bridge.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The House today passed the diplomatic and consular appropriations bills, providing $4,496,000 for the expenses of the diplomatic and consular service for the next fiscal year.

HELD AT RENO FOR DESERTING HIS WIFE HERE

Frank L. Patch Faces $200 Fine or Year's Sentence or Both.

CRUSADE AGAINST NEGLECT

Frank L. Patch, a traveling salesman, was arrested yesterday in Reno, Nev., charged with deserting a wife in Cambridge. The arrest was made by State Detective Silas P. Smith on an indictment warrant.

Patch's capture is the first in a country-wide hunt which District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County is making for wandering husbands who forget wives and children at home. Mr. Corcoran was amazed when he succeeded District Attorney Higgins to find so many complaints against husbands.

He decided to put a stop to the evil and to punish fugitives. He lost no time exercising the authority vested by Section 1, Chapter 456 of the Statutes of 1911, providing that any husband who deserts a wife or children or absents himself from the State without providing his flock with support, can be fined $200 or given a year's imprisonment, or both.

That was why Corcoran did not balk when he learned that Patch was in Reno, where he was reported to be contemplating divorce. News from Reno also stated that Patch arrived with a "woman friend."

District Attorney Corcoran had Patch indicted and then he sent State Detective Smith, who is attached to his office in East Cambridge, with another officer, out to the famous divorce settlement for the salesman. It didn't matter that the distance was 2,500 miles each way.

Detective Smith wired back yesterday that the Governor of Nevada had signed Patch's papers and that the habeas was returnable yesterday, when the trio started for Cambridge. Patch was astounded when confronted by officers from home.

Said Mr. Corcoran last night:

"This home-wrecking by irresponsible or careless husbands has got to stop. I'm not going to permit drummers and others to settle down here and leave a wake of neglected wives. There isn't a meaner creature than the man who abandons wife and minor children."

RUSH WORK ON WAR PLANES AT MARBLEHEAD

Government Experts Watch Tests of Machines by Burgess Firm.

BIG ORDER FOR MEXICO

Climbing tests and other hydroaeroplane "stunts" were watched all day yesterday by three United States government experts at Marblehead where the W. Starling Burgess aeroplane plant is working upon what is declared to be one of the largest rush orders ever given by the War Department at Washington.

Captain A. S. Cowan of the United States Army Airship Corps and Lieutenant Richardson and Lieutenant Herbster of the Navy watched every maneuver with the keenest interest.

"It is true that we are rushing work night and day upon a lot of hydro-aeroplanes ordered by the government," Mr. Burgess said last night. "I will not say when the order was given nor how many have been ordered. We are hurrying the work as fast as we can."

It is generally understood that thirty airships have been ordered presumably to be sent to Mexico for service with the troops there. Tests were made yesterday with the Dunne Hydro-aeroplanes, two of which were used for climbing. Mr. Burgess himself went up in one; Clifford L. Webster handled the other. Webster proved himself a daring adept, at one time locking his hands behind his head while he soared with a passenger high in the air. Trials with water machines yesterday are believed to have impressed the government experts. Inquiries for twenty to 30 motors ready for immediate delivery in the United States for use by the government have recently been made among foreign manufacturers.

STORY COOKED UP TO COVER KILLING OF PRIVATE PARKS

Mexican Federals Hasten to Capital with "Reasons" for Shooting American Soldier in Cold Blood

VERA CRUZ, May 16.—A Federal major last night took two Federal lieutenants and four soldiers from Tejeria to Mexico City to make a full report of the killing of Private Parks at Tembladera.

It is rumored that they will report that the Federal outpost saw Parks riding a black horse and leading another, and that when Parks saw the outpost he reached for his pistol, whereupon they shot him.

The horses, which were in a box car on Thursday at Tembladera, were sent up the road yesterday.

Officers talking among themselves at Tembladera decided upon this story as the one they would tell in Mexico City as a plausible reason for killing Parks.

BULLETINS

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The administration tonight entertains grave fears for the safety of a band of American refugees at San Quentin. Minister Cardoza, Brazilian representative in Mexico City, who is in charge of the United States embassy, expressed to the State Department this afternoon his alarm for the group.

Minister Cardoza has asked the nearest British consular office to investigate and render any assistance necessary to the imperilled Americans. The Brazilian's message did not state whether the Americans are menaced by armed forces or rioting citizenry. Men, women and children are in the American party.

VERA CRUZ, May 16.—Admiral Badger, whose tour of duty ends June 1, will ask the Navy Department to allow him to stay in Mexican waters. "I want to see this thing through," he said.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Bearing a cargo of ammunition, the steamship Panaman, which was recently chartered by the War Department, sailed for Galveston today. Fourteen ordnance experts from the Springfield arsenal sailed on her to join General Funston's staff in Vera Cruz.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—These significant developments occurred in the Mexican crisis today:

1—The State Department indicated that it will make no terms with Huerta—in other words, no "conditional" retirement will be acceptable to the United States.

2—The State Department said also that the action of the British admiral, Sir Christopher Cradock, and his entire staff, in making a formal call on the Constitutionalist general, Gonzales, may be regarded as a recognition by Great Britain of the belligerency of the Rebels. A similar step on the part of the United States is expected in a few days.

$1,200 Damage Results on Corner of St. James Avenue.

Scores of persons residing in the James avenue were awakened early this morning by fire engines brought to fight a brisk fire in the four and a half story brick building at the corner of Berkeley street and St. James avenue.

The fire started in the third floor and worked its way up to the roof. The building is occupied by the Berkeley Preparatory School, Adalian Oriental Rug Company, Barley & Marten, caterers and The Deutschman Company, tailors. The cause is unknown. Damage will not exceed $1,200.

Aeroplane Drops Package on Cetric

When the steamship Cetric of the White Star line, bound for Mediterranean ports, got outside Boston harbor yesterday afternoon the passengers aboard here were startled to see a hydroaeroplane, speeding from Marblehead, centre overhead the ship and dropped a package representing a mail pouch squarely on the deck. Following this achievement the airship turned toward the shore.

Not to Name Field for Hero Haggerty

Also Plan Statue in Place of Name on School.

Cambridge Field will not be renamed Haggerty Field in honor of Corporal Daniel A. Haggerty, the first American soldier to give his life at Vera Cruz, according to a statement made by David J. Nelligan, Park Commissioner last night. The City Council asked that the name of the field be changed in honor of Haggerty and the Park Commissioners have practically decided to revoke the order.

School Committeeman John J. Gadsby yesterday stated his intention of asking the Cambridge City Council to plan a statue of Haggerty to be placed in the centre of Cambridge Field in the place of having the recently planned Mt. Auburn School house named for the young soldier.

Thaw to Visit Camp of Clark D. Stevens

CONCORD, N. H., May 16.—Harry K. Thaw is scheduled to leave his hotel here next week and go to Lake Massasecum, near Bradford, where he is to be the guest of Clark D. Stevens of this city at the latter's camp. Stevens has been Thaw's constant companion and roommate. Sheriff Holman A. Drew of Coos County, Thaw's custodian, will be with them. Later they will visit W. A. Halsey of Newark, N. J., at his Summer home on the shore of Lake Sunapee. Thaw, Drew and Stevens will be located at the hotel at Gorham on June 1.

WAKEFIELD READY TO QUELL ALL RIOTING

To Have Large Force of Police on Hand Tomorrow at the Rattan Works to Put Down Any Attacks by the Strikers

The town and police authorities of Wakefield are prepared to squelch any strike rioting which may be attempted at the opening of the rattan factory of Heywood Brothers & Wakefield Company tomorrow morning.

Police Chief Pollard said last night:

"The lid is on now to stay. Arrangements have been made so we can get at least 100 extra police from surrounding cities and towns on an emergency call, in addition to the thirty-five local and Metropolitan Park police that are now on duty in the town.

"We will not let anything get under way. All disorder will be checked at the start."

The Selectmen made a formal requisition upon Governor Walsh for more Park Police, if they should be needed. The Governor, after a conference with Chairman de las Casas of the Metropolitan Park Commission, authorized the commission to place its entire body of officers at the disposal of the Wakefield Selectmen, if necessary. The town will bear whatever expense is thus incurred.

JUDGE ISSUES WARNING.

A stern warning given by Judge Charles M. Bruce in Malden District Court against strike rioting has had marked effect. The judge said, at a hearing given seven men and one woman charged with rioting, that any convicted of this offence will get a year in jail, the maximum penalty.

All defendants pleaded not guilty and, at the request of Police Chief Pollard, were held for continued hearings Friday. Bail was fixed at $200 each, which was furnished. They were represented by Charles W. Walsh of Wakefield.

Chief Pollard asked for $500 bail. Then Judge Bruce gave his warning to rioters, saying:

"In my opinion there will be no further trouble. I was in Wakefield last night and talked to them. I told them—the same as I am going to tell you strikers and those of your followers who are here in court—you go about among your friends and neighbors and tell them that this court will not stand for any rioting. If any of you are brought before me for taking part in any of these outbreaks you are assured of a fair trial but, if you are found guilty, I will impose the maximum penalty of one year in jail."

Then, answering Police Chief Pollard's request for higher bail, the Judge added:

"Some of them before me have reminders that there has been trouble and I believe they will hereafter keep away from it."

The judge was referring to the bandaged bruises and cuts of four of the defendants, received in their encounters with Wakefield and Metropolitan Park police.

WOMAN BEFORE COURT.

The seven men were arrested the day before. Five of these are strikers. The other two men are sympathizers.

The woman defendant was Mrs. Filomena Gregorio, wife of Rocco Gregorio, a striker. She was arrested at the factory gate at the opening time today by Park Officer Blodgett, charged with assault on a workman who was about to enter the factory.

Mrs. Gregorio was lugged, kicking and shrieking, to a police auto, while twenty other officers, with clubs drawn, held in check a movement by strikers who threatened to attempt a rescue.

Harvard Debaters Divide Peace Prize

The fifty-dollar prize offered by the Massachusetts Peace Society for the best address on Peace was divided between John Bowington, '15, and G. P. Pennoyer, '15, by the judges who made the award at the meeting of the Harvard Speakers' Club last night following addresses in competition by six Harvard students. Each of the winners received $25. The judges were Professor L. J. Johnson, Dr. James L. Tryon and Mr. Chanworth.

MRS. ERNINEE SPEAR.

Back Bay Woman Making Brave Fight for Share of Maine Estate.

Boston friends of Mrs. Erminie B. Spear of the Back Bay and Revere are interested in the fight she is making in the Maine courts for a share of the estate of the late D. Howard Spear, former Mayor of Bath. Mrs. Spear claims she was secretly married to the wealthy former Mayor, that they had one child, and that the ceremony was witnessed by John Bibber, the victim in Lewiston's great murder mystery of two years ago.

Mrs. Spear, who is well known in Boston, seeks a widow's share of the estate. At the trial of the case in Bath yesterday, Frank A. Schuber, a waiter in the English room at the Hotel Thorndike, testified that Spear introduced Mrs. Spear to him as his (Spear's) wife, and had asked the waiter to do what he could for her.

Another witness was Mrs. Myra Spear Dean of Dorchester, sister of the former Mayor and the administratrix of his estate.

"Ten days before his death," testified Mrs. Dean, "my brother denied to me that he had married this woman or that he had married a second time at all. He told me he wanted his friends to overlook and forgive his short-comings."

Frank L. Hodgdon, Mrs. Nina Higgins, Warren E. Bartlett and Orville Bartlett testified they knew Mrs. Spear, but that they never heard she was married to Spear. Late yesterday afternoon the case was continued until Tuesday.

On the stand Mrs. Spear had said her maiden name was Clinkard and she declared she was married to Spear in the city hall at New York, on May 22, 1909, and that the ceremony was performed by a Mr. Hollister, who she thought was an alderman. She said she refrained from making the marriage public at Spear's request and that she had been unable to find the surviving witnesses.

"My husband wanted to keep our marriage a secret owing to his prominence and the fact that it followed the death of his first wife by only three weeks," testified Mrs. Spear. She said that on April 17, 1912, while living on Westland avenue, she gave birth to a daughter whom she named Sadie Mildred Spear.

TAXES GO DOWN, IN A PIG'S EYE

And in a Pig's Eye Curley Is a Reformer and a Goo Goo.

While the figures are not available at the moment, it became known last night that the Mayor has been saving a lot more money. If he keeps on, the Mayor will save more in six months than the New Haven has lost.

Mr. Curley having disappeared from the newspapers for a couple of days, the folks at City Hall knew he must be up to his new tricks. There was, therefore, no great surprise at the hall when he came to the surface yesterday chortling with glee.

Every time Curley chortles with glee somebody has been reduced from $1,800 to $1,500 a year, or a girl piano player has lost her city job.

However, what the Mayor has done this time, they say—this is a "they say" story, meaning that it will not become official for a day or two—is to devise a plan whereby the city yards will be abolished and the entire plant consoladated at a central station.

This, Mr. Curley says, will:

Increase effeciency.

Make it easier to check up supplies an hand.

Obviate teaming and hauling back and forth from one yard to another.

Cut out duplication of plant and apparatus.

Permit him to sell the land now occupied for division yards and apply the money thus obtained to a reduction of the city debt.

And then the story gets the human touch. "Bill" Lowe, they say, is to be placed in charge of the central plant.

Mr. Lowe—William F.—is closer to Martin Lomasney than Martin's brother Joe. He is the ablest corporal of the leader of Ward 8. Since 1900 he has been in charge of the South Boston and Roxbury sewer yard. Under Fitzgerald he received $1,800 a ear. Curley sliced it to $1,500. If the Mayor places William in charge of the proposed central plant, Bill may get $8,500.

Of course it is still a "they say" story, but if it eventuates it will demonstrate the fact that Martin L. and James C. are no so far apart as some have supposed.

And it will further suggest to some skeptics that when Martin L. jammed through the Senate the other day his scheme for seventeen City Councillors elected from twelve districts—instead of nine chosen "at large"—the Curley opposition may not have been so heartfelt as the Goo Goos appeared to believe.

So that politics is still politics in this town and in a pig's eye we are saving slathers of money at City Hall and the first thing you know the divvle a cent anybody will have to pay in taxes except them that's rich and can afford it.

In a pig's eye.

More Pay for Help at City Hospital

Maurice Ginsberg, operation room orderly, at a salary of $35 a month was promoted yesterday by Mayor Curley, to chief operating room orderly at the city hospital, at a salary of $50 a month. The following hospital employees also have had wage increases: John F. Youngquist, laundryman, $11.50 to $14.50 the week; Antoni P. Zubiel, laundryman, from $10 to $11.50 the week; Margaret Higgins, from chambermaid at $15 the montr to ward assistant at $5 the week; and N. The police have recovered nearly half of the plunder.

King Victor's Aunt Lauds Boston Opera

Henry Russell's Company Scores New Paris Triumph.

PARIS, May 16.—Another triumph was achieved by the Boston Opera Company when Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" was given at the Theatre Des Champs Elysees tonight. Again there was a brilliant audience, the Duchess of Aosta, King Victor Emanuel's aunt, occupying a box.

Emmy Destinn, the star of the cast, as Amelia, was in magnificent voice. Her success was shared by Maggie Teyte as Oscar. It was her first appearance in Paris since her debut at the opera Comique. The tenor, Martinelli was much applauded as Riccardo. The Boston company chorus again won honor, and the mounting of the opera delighted Paris no less than that of Othello.

There was long continued applause when the final curtain was rung down upon another success of Henry Russell's Paris venture. At the close of the performance the Duchess of Aosta sent for the impresario, whom she congratulated, declaring she had never heard the ballo in Maschera so well given, even in Italy.

Bird Addresses Worcester Moose

Declines to Commit Himself on Candidacy for Third Time.

WORCESTER, May 16.—Following a secret conference of Progressives of the Third and Fourth Congressional Districts at the Hotel Bancroft this afternoon, Charles S. Bird, head of the State ticket last Fall, was asked by reporters whether he would be a candidate for Governor this Fall.

"Nothing to say," replied Mr. Bird.

Pressed for an affirmation or denial of the report of his intended candidacy he added:

"I stand exactly where I stood months ago. It is too early to cross any bridges."

The conference, which began with a luncheon, was attended by 125 men and 25 women. Chairman Matthew Hale of the State Committee presided. Mr. Bird addressed the gathering at the conference following.

The organization went on record as being in favor of lowering of infant mortality by osteopathic treatment.

Warren Will Accept Federal Position

Mr. Warren said last night: "I shall accept the position providing I am confirmed. I have as yet, however, received no official notification of my nomination by the President."

WILSON SAYS COLORADO MUST SETTLE STRIKE

Federal Troops Will Be Withdrawn Quickly as Possible, President Asserts.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—President Wilson today made it clear that Colorado must quickly solve its own difficulties growing out of the strike situation and that the Federal troops now on duty there would be withdrawn as quickly as possible.

He telegraphed Governor Ammons that the State Legislature should not adjourn without taking steps to control the situation and received a reply from the Governor stating that everything possible was being done.

At the White House tonight it was stated by officials close to the President that he does not plan to withdraw the Federal troops if anarchy is to break out again, but he feels there is no excuse for the Legislature adjourning and leaving the problem up to the Federal government.

Members of the Colorado delegation in Congress were alarmed by the President's telegram to Governor Ammons and said anarchy would reign again if the troops were taken away before the strike was settled. They declared that although orders for the disarming of the contending factions have been issued, only a small proportion of the arms have been turned in and that virtually an armed truce exists at present.

President Wilson's telegram was as follows:

"Am disturbed to hear of the probability of the adjournment of your Legislature, and feel bound to remind you that my constitutional obligations with regard to the maintenance of order in Colorado are not to be indefinitely continued by the inaction of the State Legislature.

The Federal forces are there only until the State of Colorado has time and opportunity to resume complete sovereignty and control in the matter. I cannot conceive that the State is willing to forego her sovereignty or to throw herself entirely upon the government of the United States, and I am quite clear that she has no constitutional right to do so when it is within the power of her Legislature to take effective action.

A Reliable Treatment For Superfluous Hairs

(Beauty Culture)

A new and highly satisfactory method has recently been found for the quick and painless removal of objectionable hairy growths, and it is so simple that anyone can use it in the privacy of her own home and enjoy the pleasure of a clear, hairless skin.

To remove hair or fuzz from lip, chin or cheek, a thick paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is then spread on the hairy surface for about two minutes and then rubbed off, after which the skin is washed to remove the remaining delatone and it will be found to be free from hair or blemish. No danger or inconvenience attends this treatment, but to avoid disappointment or failure, see that you get the delatone in a small original package. Any good drug store can supply you.—ADVERTISEMENT.

MRS. BARTLETT SPURNS LUND'S "BALM" OFFER

Her $100,000 Suit Against a Member of Ancients Goes to Trial Tomorrow.

REJECTS "PALTRY SUM"

Counsel for both sides in the $10,000 "heart balm' suit brought by Mrs. Carolyn Stella Bartlett of No. 1 Pinckney street, Beacon Hill, against Arthur Graves Lund of Boston and Washington, member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and son-in-law of United States Senator Bankhead of Alabama, admited yesterday that efforts to settle the suit have failed and that it will go to trial here tomorrow as scheduled.

The trial of this suit for alleged breach of promise gains public interest on account of the prominence of both principals. Mrs. Bartlett, formerly the wife of L. H. Bartlett, a Western oil man, is a descendant of a London knight, Sir Thomas Boynton, one of her great-grandfathers. Another ancertor was Major General Sullivan Smith of Revolutionary fame.

LIVED IN BACK BAY

Mr. Lund lived formerly in the Back Bay. On May 12, 1912, he married Mrs. Louise Bankhead Perry, widow of the late Congressman William Hayne Perry of North Carolina, and daughter of Senator Bankhead. The following July Mrs. Bankhead filed her suit against Mr. Lund, who was just going to London with his bride to attend the festivities tendered by the London "Ancients" to their Boston comrades.

Regarding the efforts of settlement, Herbert L. Baker, attorney for Lund, said yesterday:

"We made Mrs. Bartlett a reasonable offer if she would withdraw the case because Mr. Lund did not care to be troubled by the necessity of coming to Boston and defending himself from the charges.

"Mrs. Bartlett, however, did not seem pleased at the amount mentioned and refused to let the matter drop for that sum. We have since withdraw the offer and are ready for trial. If Mrs. Bartlett is looking for publicity, she may rest assured that she will receive more than her share of it before this case is finished."

OFFER TOO SMALL.

Thomas E. Flannagan, of the law office of Lieutenant-Governor Edward P. Barry, who is representing Mrs. Bartlett, said:

"Yes, the other side made us an offer to settle the case, but Mrs. Bartlett would not think of accepting such a paltry sum. We believe we have a good case against Mr. Lund and are prepared to begin the trial on Monday morning. Mrs. Bartlett is in a highly nervous state over the approaching trial and cannot be disturbed by reporters.

"She has been busy the past few days arranging the letters and other data upon which we shall base our case against Mr. Lund, and has denied herself to callers until after the trial.

"We are prepared to push the case to the limit and have no fear but that the Court will award Mrs. Bartlett a sum vastly in excess of the small figure named in Mr. Lund's offer to settle the case."

Foresters to Meet in Boston Tuesday

Expect 400 Delegates to Attend State Convention.

The State convention of the Foresters of America will be held in the Quincy House, Boston, on May 19, 20 and 21. Delegates will begin to assemble on Monday evening, and will come from all parts of the State. It is expected that at least 400 delegates will attend the convention, which will open at 9 a. m. on Tuesday morning.

A reception committee of Boston members of the order will receive and care for the comfort of the delegates. An open house will be maintained in one of the large rooms of the Quincy House for the reception of delegates from Monday evening, May 18, until the close of the convention.

Mayor Curley and Governor Walsh have both promised to attend.

City Pensions in 1913 Totalled $460,207

Curley Fears Figures for his Year Will Be Over a Million.

Pensions, in all city departments, of Boston, according to figures furnished by the corporation counsel to the Mayor, a total of $460,207.19 last year, as against $187,649.44 in 1903, $96,894.03 in 1893, and $29,626.24 in 1883. At the present rate of increase Mayor Curley is afraid the total this year will be over a million.

Of last year's pensions, the police got $153,085.34, fire department $124,[illegible]9.44, school teachers $72,893.19 and all other departments $109,929.32.

Horseshoes Bring Bad Luck to Trio

Horseshoes are not always the bearers of good luck or at least, Timothy Sullivan, John Strachan and John McAlpin think so because when they were found with several in their possession and could not give a good account of where they got them they were arrested. At the same time William Wild of Friend street told the police that he had lost some. Judge Murray, in the city police court continued the cases of the three men until May 19.

Miss Sears, in New Romance, Acclaimed "Girl of Superlatives"

◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆

Yachtsman Cochran's Attention to Athletic Miss Interests Society

Millionaire Owner of Cup Defender a Real Rival to Harold Vanderbilt.

ELEONORA SEARS, society's real "girl of superlatives." At top, Miss Eleonora in horse show togs and in street attire; below, with Grahame-White in his aeroplane, and as a tennis girl.

Miss Eleonora Sears, America's best known bachelor girl, has added another clasp to her title: "Girl of Superlatives".

Her latest superlative is Alexander Smith Cochran of Yonkers, New York and his America cup class yacht Vanitie, just launched at Neponset. Cochran is a bachelor, worth many millions. He is well-known in society in the fashionable clubs of New York, Newport and Boston. He is the one of very few men who ever undertook to finance a yacht alone that will make a try for the honor of defending the America cup against the invasion of Sir Thomas Lipton, next September. This little outlay of Mr. Cochran's wealth will amount upwards of a quarter of a million.

It may be the gameness of Mr. Cochran to match his money against two syndicates composed of some of the wealthiest men in the country, including the Vanderbilts, Morgans and others that put this fair athletic Boston society girl on board the Vanitie on its launching day, or it maybe that it was a long acquaintance with Mr. Cochran. However, her presence aboard the Vanitie, has started some interesting gossip among her large circle of friends, and its sound a little like romance.

Miss Sears has sailed the big racing yacht Vagrant, owned by Harold S. Vanderbilt. Their engagement has been hinted at time and time again.

BRAVES PERILS OF SEA AND AIR.

When Claude Grahame-White came over here from England several years ago and scooped up about all the American honors he could in a flying machine, Miss Sears was in his company very much and took a couple of trips in the air in the White machine. Again gossip linked the names of these two in an engagement.

When Paul J. Rainey, the Cleveland millionaire, some years ago, had a very fast yacht called Mirage, Miss Sears came to the front, and one day at Newport took the wheel in a race and beat Alfred G. Vanderbilt and his boat Walthra. Then, again, when Rainey, a couple of years ago, sailed away for a hunting and exploring trip to Labrador, Miss Sears was on the dock to say goodbye, and then came the rumors of an engagement.

Yachting and aquatic sports seem to have the call with this clever outdoor society girl, and when the new Vanderbilt schooner was racing at Newport two Summers ago it was Miss Sears that piloted the boat across the finish line a winner, much to the surprise of a few highly paid professional skippers on millionaire's yachts.

Fast automobiles of Vanderbilt she has driven until aeroplanes seemed to go faster, and now comes Mr. Cochran with his wealth and his yachts.

If young Vanderbilt intends to keep up the pace in the yachting game he will have to travel fast, for Miss Sears has certainly picked out a man that likes fast boats as well as she dues.

COCHRAN HAS WON SUCCESS.

Vanderbilt, two years ago, had his new steel schooner yacht built down at Lawley's works at Neponset. He christened this yacht Vagrant, a name much like that of his former racing schooner, which wasn't large enough or fast enough. Miss Sears was present at the launching of this boat, and it was said at the time that it was at her suggestion that the name was given to this new boat.

The Vanderbilt yacht is no small affair. It is 109 feet long.

Up to the present young Mr. Vanderbilt seems to have been the favorite. In the yachting game he has had it all his own way.

Now comes Mr. Cochran. He is prominent in the yachting world. He is a member of the New York Yacht Club and a former owner of the big racing schooner Westwood, which created such a record in England a couple of years ago and was finally purchased by a yachtsman abroad.

He is estimated to be worth from $50,000,000 to $70,000,000. He is a carpet manufacturer.

Already over at the Neponset ship yard where the Cochran cup class boat, Vanitie, was launched Thursday, with Miss Sears and Mr. Cochran aboard, is another big auxiliary schooner yacht being laid down for this same young man. It is estimated that in a year he will have $750,000 tied up in two yachts.

Much secrecy surrounds the building of this second yacht. The orders at the yard are that Mr. Cochran will not allow any [illegible] the work on his boats; hence the street guard at the gates of the plant.

SETS YACHT RECORD.

The Vanderbilt yacht is schooner rigged, has two masts and is of steel. The boat is luxuriously furnished and can make an ocean voyage.

The new Cochran private yacht may take at least a year to complete. It will be the biggest schoner yacht ever built in this section. No exact dimensions have been given out, but it is understood that it will be three-masted and that the masts will be so tall that they cannot get under Brooklyn bridge. It is to be constructed of bronze, and a number of rolling mills in the country are at work getting this material out.

The schooner will be nearly 215 feet long with a waterline length of 165 feet. The keel will have 200 tons of lead. Captain Edward Sherlock of South Boston will command the boat when it is completed next December.

The furnishings will be as luxurious as was ever attempted for any boat in the country.

The appearance of Miss Sears and Mr. Cochran at the launching of the Vanitie, Thursday was a distinct surprise to many of her friends who were present. They had never been seen much in public together.

His sister, Mrs. H. N. Bowen and his litte eight-year-old niece, Dolly Bowen were present from New York, and the little girl christened her uncle's boat.

Miss Sears and Mr. Cochran walked about the yard and spent most of the day together. Miss Sears climbed down a ladder in the Vanitie and jumped aboard the boat as it was slipping down the ways before Mr. Cochran could stop her.

The new yacht's name, it is understood, will be Sea Call. Mr. Cochran is to take a long foreign cruise immediately after the launching.

At the launching of the cup class boat Vanitie, it was said that Miss Sears suggested its name and now her friends along the North Shore and at Beverly are wondering if she will be sponser for the new Cochran private yacht, Sea Call.

"DAKOTA DAN" ASKS CORCORAN TO ARREST HIM

Russell Claimant Promises to Spring Surprise if Tried as an Impostor.

Dakota Dan Russell declares that, if District Attorney Corcoran of Middlesex will only have him arrested as an impostor, Dakota Dan will "spring a surprise" and convince any jury that he is the real Daniel Blake Russell.

The Dakota claimant says:

"I did not get a square deal. The Middlesex County ring was against my side from the start. I have confidence that Mr. Corcoran will treat me right.

"I have left a letter at Mr. Corcoran's office, asking me to act as my own attorney. If he will only arrest me as an impostor and bring my case before a jury, I promise to spring a surprise. It will not be long before Mr. Corcoran and the jury wil formulate an opinion as to who is the real Daniel Blake Russell.

"Why did Mr. Almy telephone the police to come to the Melrose house and quiet Fresno Dan? Think of that, a man getting the money Fresno Dan is said to be getting, interfered with in his 'own house.'

"I'll make Fresno Dan take a slide down hill from his 'own house' with Almy before I'm through with them.

"If they allow me one dollar, I'm entitled to all. If they want to fight the matter out in court, I stand ready; if they want to settle outside of court, I'll settle decently."

Dakota Dan made the above statement and some more of the same nature to the Sunday AMERICAN the latter part of this week.

Yesterday, however, District Attorney Corcoran came out with a statement on his own account, in which he said that Dakota Dan asked Friday for permission to testify before the Grand Jury and to question "certain persons." The District Attorney added that Dakota Dan was warned he would have to waive immunity from possible prosecution.

Mr. Corcoran added that he gave Dakota Dan until 10 o'clock yesterday morning to make up his mind, but that he had not heard from the claimant up to the time set.

Whereupon the District Attorney issued his statement.

Roxbury Exchange 'Cut Over' by Mayor

Greetings Sent to White House to Which President Replies.

Mayor Curley at 10 o'clock last night effected the first "cut over" at the new $175,000 Roxbury telephone exchange at No. 28 Waverly street in the presence of State and telephone officials. The "cut over" was made by Miss Margaret J. Hogan, an operator at the exchange, and extended to the office of Secretary Tumulty at the White House, Washington.

Mayor Curley told Secretary Tumulty that Boston "extended its best wishes to President Wilson and was prospering under the Wilson policy."

Secretary Tumulty replied that the President extended his best wishes to the telephone officials in its new enterprise.

The new exchange gives employment to 135 girls. It has 10,500 lines and 23,718 underground cables.

Brookline Boy Is Hurt by Runaway

Alexander McCullough, fourteen and living on Aspinwall avenue, Brookline, was probably fatally injured yesterday afternoon when a horse he was driving ran away on Harvard street, Brookline, and threw the lad to the ground. At the Massachusetts General Hospital his skull was found to be fractured. The police said the boy's mother was seriously ill in a hospital.

Hold Cretic for Tardy Passengers

The sailing of the White Star liner Cretic from the Boston & Albany terminal in East Boston, was delayed to accommodate any passengers who might have gone to the Hoosac Tunnel docks in Charlestown, the regular terminal of the line, in ignorance of the change. The Cretic carried 242 tourists in her cabin accommodations and 400 steerage passengers. The Leyland liner Winifredian sailed today for Liverpool with forty cabin passengers and a big cargo.

Miss Whitcomb Is Bride in Roxbury

The wedding of Miss Anna Manning Whitcomb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harriet Whitcomb of "Greenbank," Jamaica Plain, and Wadsworth Bayler of Washington, D. C., took place yesterday afternoon at St. John's Episcopal Church, Roxbury. The Rev. Frederick W. Fitts officiated. Miss Marguerite Avis Whitcomb was maid of honor, and Armistead Bayler acted as best man.

'LEFTY LOUIE' IN DEATH CHAMBER NAMED BECKER

Gunman's Widow Tells of Rosenberg's Confession Made Just Before Execution.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Mrs. Lillian Rosenberg, widow of "Lefty Louie," the executed gunman, declared today in an interview before quitting New York permanently, that on the day before his death her husband told her that former Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker and Jack Rose were responsible for the death of Herman Rosenthal.

"When he told me this I promised him I would tell everything when I went on the witness stand in the second Becker case," said Mrs. Rosenberg. "Louis told me while he was in the Sing Sing death house that Becker sent notes to him and to the other boys giving them false hope. Louis told me he did not shoot Rosenthal but that two of the other boys did. Under no circumstances will I reveal their names.

"Louis also told me that he and the boys were afraid of Becker and that is why he got them to kill Rosenthal.

NOTES HIDDEN IN BOOKS.

"While the boys were in the death house with Becker, Louis said the former police lieutenant would send them notes hidden in a book. The keeper would take the book to the boys without finding the notes. In these notes Becker told the boys to keep up their courage, that they would get out.

"In June, 1912, Jack Rose came to our house and had a talk with my husband. After he had left, Louis said to me: 'What do you think of that, that Dutch copper named Becker wants to frame me up.'

"I am going to leave New York now for good. I have been bothered by Becker's people and I want no more of it. Just a few days ago, after I saw the District Attorney, a man representing himself to me as a reporter, came and said:

"'If you testify against Becker you will be the sorriest girl in the world.'"

SULLIVAN SEES PERIL OF STATE EXTRAVAGANCE

Corporation Counsel Opposes Bill for Commonwealth to Retain Franchise Tax.

GIVES FIGURES IN LETTER

Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan, who as chairman of the Finance Board attempted to point out the lack of economy of the city under Mayor Fitzgerald, is now gunning after the same faults in the State government.

In a long letter to Richard Knowles of the Committee on Taxation of the State Legislature, in opposition to the House bill which provides that the State retain corporate franchise taxes instead of redistributing them to the cities and towns where shareholders reside, he explains how the prosed legislation would increase the State's extravagance.

"It is argued," he writes, "that if the State had retained the $1,602,271 of such taxes in 1913, instead of distributing it to the cities and towns, we could now have had a State tax of 6,400,000 instead of $8,000,000.

NO LIMIT TO STATE.

"According to this argument, the State would have been no better off, nor would the cities and towns, taking them as a whole, and the only thing accomplished would have been the perfection of a theory of public accounting.

"I submit that experience shows that the additional money would be spent by the Commonwealth; that the State taxwould not be lowered, and that the proposed legislation would invite extravagance.

"Appropriations almost invariably approach, if they do not equal, the limits. These limitations upon municipal appropriations and loans have kent municipal tax budgets and municipal debt from soaring to indefinite heights.

"There are no such limitations upon the Commonwealth. Hence State expenditures are increasing in greater proportion than municipal expenditures.

"The tendency of the State to outrun municipalities in increase of debt is illustrated by a comparison between the State and the city of Boston—a city noted for liberality in its financial operations."

STATE AND CITY FIGURES.

"Debt—State, direct, net for 1904, $15,576,595, and for 1913, $24,280,454; per cent. increase, 55.8. Debt—Boston, net, $62,427,219 in 1904; and $78-961,-370 in 1913; a per cent. increase of 26.4. Debt—Boston, net, exclusive of rapid transit loans, which are self-supporting loans, $51,501,159 in 1904; and $57,393,927 in 1913; a per cent. increase of 11.4.

"Expenditures—State, general purposes, $8,619,603 in 1904, and $17,-352,214 in 1913; a per cent. increase of 97.8. Boston—Regular departmental expenditures, $16, 088,825 in 1904, and $21,534,843 in 1913, a per cent. increase of 33.8.

"The tendency of the State to spend every dollar in sight is further shown by the increase in the State tax: $2,500,000 in 1904 and $8,000,000 in 1913, a per cent. increase of 220.

The State tax for 1904, as estimated by Former Auditor John E. White, $10,000,000 and over, and as estimated by House Chairman of Ways and Means Thomas White, $11,000,000.

Providence Drug Peddlers Hard Hit

PROVIDENCE, May 16.—Drug peddlers are finding it difficult to ply their trade since the cocaine law went into effect. Three men, William F. McCarthy, Frank A. Fanning and Walter Conlon, have been arrested and convicted. Other peddlers, who in the past have openly defied the efforts of the police to stop the sale of drugs, will now be rounded up unless they go out of business.

The Great Constantino Had to Sweep Out His Cell

Famous Tenor's Own Story of Six Hours in Jail

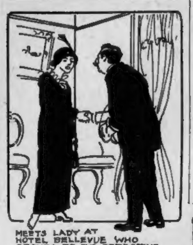
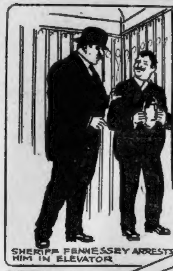
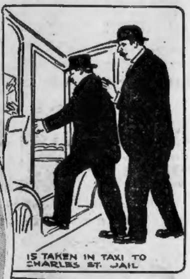
CONSTANTINO



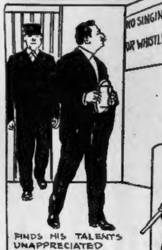
MEETS LADY AT HOTEL BELLEVUE WHO PROVES TO BE DETECTIVE



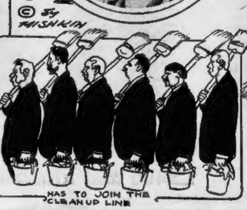
SHERIFF FENNESSEY ARRESTS HIM IN ELEVATOR



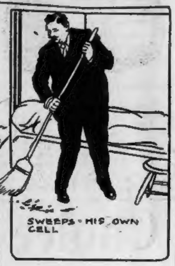
IS TAKEN IN TAXI TO CHARLES ST. JAIL



FINDS HIS TALENTS UNAPPRECIATED



HAS TO JOIN THE CLEAN UP LINE



SWEEPS HIS OWN CELL

Compelled to use a broom and sweep out a cell in the Charles street jail, where he was detained for six hours on a mesne process warrant, Florencio Constantino, the Boston opera tenor, who has earned as high as $175,000 a year by his wonderful voice, is recovering at the Bellevue Hotel on Beacon street from a nervous shock which followed his laborious task and "indignity," as he termed it.

Constantino never before wielded a broom, never! He says the "indignity" of being in jail has preyed on his nerves ever since. It has interfered with his sleep. And the thoughts of the broom and snoring prisoners now haunt him, sleeping or waking.

He shudders at the thought of having rubbed shoulders with the inmates of the jail; the feelings which overcame him as he sat in his cell thinking of his triumphs in the opera world; the rounds upon rounds of applause which greeted his entrance before the footlights, and last, but not least, that tremendous salary.

"Ah!" as he exclaimed, "the horror of it all makes me sick at heart!"

CATCHES A $10,000 COLD.

Constantino caught cold at the jail from the beads of perspiration which trickled down the outside of his throat from his massive forehead. The sensation of being under lock and key for the first time in his career had a tendency to open every pore in his body. The dampness and foul air of his surroundings gave him such a chill that he is now suffering from a $10,000 cold.

"Poor Florencio would be at the jail yet were it not for the kindness of Ida M. Feener and Henry Friedman," said Constantino's faithful valet, Edward Charles. "They put up a bond for $5,000." This was the amount Judge Jenney decided upon after Constantino had been arraigned before him.

Constantino's arrest was sensational. He was tricked and trapped, he says, by a woman. She betrayed him into the hands of the attaches of the sheriff's office. She made an appointment with him. She was in the employ of the Watts Detective Bureau, run by former Chief Watts of the Boston police department, a man who knows how to catch criminals. Constantino is no criminal; far from it. He is merely an alleged dodger—a man who felt that he could not meet Mr. Hammerstein and pay over to him the sum of $30,000. Hammerstein had been awarded that amount in court against the great tenor singer.

JUST A SWEET SOPRANO.

This woman had a sweet voice. She got Constantino on the telephone. She told him she wanted to hear him sing. She represented she was from a woman's club in Dorchester, and had been authorized to call and see him, and wanted to engage him to sing before Dorchester women. An interview for arrangements, she informed the great tenor singer, was imperative, and that interview could be held in the ladies' parlor of the Bellevue Hotel.

The woman's voice was in high C, it is said, and appealed to Constantino, as did also the prospects of being paid several thousand dollars for the use of his voice to charm the women she said she represented, and so he met her by appointment in the place she specified.

"Her voice was like the Seraph's note," and appealed to Constantino, and he told her how pleased he was to have her call. Then they parted, she for her home and he for the quietude of his bachelor apartments upstairs in the hotel.

He did not get there. He got as far as the elevator. There he met Jeremiah J. Fennessey, deputy sheriff of Suffolk County, who placed him under arrest. What followed is best told by Constantino.

By FLORENCIO CONSTANTINO.

"Are you Florencio Constantino" a big man asked me in a gruff way.

"Yes, I'm Constantino," I said.

"Well, I place you under arrest," he said.

He allowed me to go to my room. I met my secretary. I met my valet. I tell them I'm under arrest. My secretary ask what for? The big man tells him. He reads a paper to my secretary. It was Greek to me. My secretary understand languages. He tells me something about Hammerstein. I nod my head. The big man talks. My secretary talk back to him. I did not want to go to jail. My secretary told him so. I got awful nervous.

My secretary got busy on the telephone. He called up several persons about—what you call it in America—yes, bail. No success in that line. We wait a long while. It was after 12 o'clock. The big man tell me to come along. I obey him. I go to a stone house in the lower end of the city. It's near a river. I smell the river breeze. It's cold and damp.

We walk from our cab to a big door. The door gives me what you Americans call the creeps. I see a round hole in the door. The big man knocks. The door opens and I see a big cage, same as they use for animals. I think of my dog

REAL PRISON SCENE.

A man say how de do to us. Then he opens a door in the cage. My captor steps behind me and I go in. The man who opened the door ask me my name. He got it. Then this man opens another door leading to a yard. I get awful nervous. The big man tells me to come along. I obey. I walk across the yard. We come to a flight of stone steps. I look around. There is a garden. I get a whiff of the jail yard air.

We go up the steps. The big man looks at me. He says something in English to another man. I cannot understand. This man looks at me. He gave what you call the "once over." Then this man and the big man talk awhile. I stand near them. Then they turn around. They look at me They talk some more. I get what you call a "rise in temperature."

By and by the jail man opens a big door. I walk inside. "My, my," I mutter. It reminds me of a prison scene in an opera. I find, though, this was a real prison scene. I was a real actor. The audience was not there to greet me. I became indignant. I perspire freely. I take one find a cot, table and chair in the look at the cells. Then I take another. Then I give a sigh. My heart beats fast. The men with me do a lot of talking. They said to put me in such and such a cell.

I walk across the corridor. Yes, that is what they called it. I'm led like a sheep to a cell. I hear the man with me rattle the keys. He looks at me and says something to himself. I see dark forms in other cells. I hear some of them say Ha! Ha! Just like that. I say to myself that they are giving me the Ha! Ha! And then I am put in a cell. I cell. The man closes the cell door from the outside. He did not bid me good night. My thoughts were many.

I look around. I see some signs. One read: No singing allowed. Another said: No whistling. I shrug my shoulders. I find myself in restraint, great restraint. I sit on the bed. Next I sit on the chair. There was no light in the cell. I could not sleep. I heard the jail clock strike one, two, etc. Then I put my hands on my knees. I do a lot of thinking. First I see myself before the crowned heads of Europe. I see them clap with their hands. I hear others say "Bravo, Constantino!" I am in sort of reverie.

Suddenly I think of where I am. I listen. I become interested. I hear the sound of sleeping human beings. I listen again. What's that, I say to myself. I answer: "It's a man snoring." I ask myself what key does the man snore in. I say: "He sleeps and snores in high C." Then I listen again. I hear another loud snore. I say: "That fellow sleeps and snores in basso." Another fellow sleeps like a spinning top. Others resemble a steamboat whistle in distress. I laugh to myself. I talk. I shrug my shoulders. I cry in my rage. Finally I doze off.

I awake with a start. It is daylight. A man comes to my cell. He tells me to get up and clean up. He hands me a broom after he opened the cell. He motions to me to sweep out the dirt from the cell. I grasp the broom. I drag it over the floor several times, and get the dirt into the open space outside the cell. There I meet other men. They also have brooms. No one knew me. I am surprised.

After that I am allowed to go home.

NEW $3,000,000 FISH PIER TO HAVE A RIVAL

Dealers Who Have Plunged Heavily in Market Place Are Worried.

A war between the forty odd fish concerns, who recently pulled up stakes at T Wharf on Atlantic avenue, and now occupy quarters at the new $3,000,000 South Boston fish pier, and the T. Wharf Supply & Rental Company which has just organized to establish another fish centre in the old location, was disclosed yesterday. Elements in the war are:

The Fish Exchange at the new fish pier demands that the fishing captains land their fish there. If they attempt to go to the old wharf to supply dealers there they will be ostracized by the new pier dealers.

The men who have moved to the new quarters are so "tied up" there that they cannot get back to the old quarters.

OLD WHARF NEGLECTED.

The rentals at the old pier are less, and with a few dealers to take the supply of a fishermen or two, the beginning of the battle will be launched.

H. D. Malone, of the firm of E. A. Malone & Co., ship chandlers, at No. 189 Atlantic avenue, said yesterday:

"If the dealers who left here (the old T wharf) had sepnt as much money here as they have at the new pier they would have had a palace here. Many of them would be glad enough to get back, but they are tied up at the new place. When enough dealers locate here to take the supply of the captains so that they will not be obliged to go back to the new pier crowd T wharf will certainly become a fish centre again.

"Business can be done more expeditiously and more cheaply here. The vessels prefer to come in here."

The backers of the new project are all well known in the fish trade and have formed a corporation with a capital of $30,000 to lease and repair the old T Wharf and sub-let stores thereon. The incorporators are Thomas McManus, the best known designer of fishing vessels in New England; Francis C. Welch, wharf trustee; Elias A. Malone and Sylvester Whalen, vessel owners and outfitters; Arthur E. Rowe, a prominent Gloucester fish dealer; Jay O. Richards of Lexington, L. Holbrook Tourtellotte of Marlboro and G. Rio of Boston. The name of the corporation is the T Wharf Supply and Rental Company.

READY FOR BUSINESS.

Already the new concern has made a beginning in repairing the old stores on the wharf and improving the sanitary conditions, which have been very bad for years. One store is already occupied by the T Wharf Fish Company, a branch of one of the houses at the new pier, and has been doing business for some time. A detached building at the upper end of the wharf has been fitted up as a market for the shore fishermen, for the most part Sicilians, of the famous motor dory fleet.

Business Women Listen to Zueblin

"The strength of militancy is its picturesqueness," said Professor Charles Zueblin in his talk on "Militancy and Morals," before the Business Women's Club at their Saturday luncheon at No. 144 Bowdoin street. "Life is a dull gray for most working people and for women. Capitalists, managers, politicians, scientists are getting all the fun out of the present system. Conventional religion is disappointing; society is disappointing; trade unionism is disappointing. Hence the Salvation Army, suffragettes and syndicalists."

Sell Wild Flowers to Aid Church Fund

Twenty-five little girls are selling wild flowers to help along the building fund of the Episcopal Church at Roslindale. The club is called by the rector, Rev. Philip E. Osgood, "Spring Flower Agency." The flowers are gathered by the girls in neighboring country towns.

Jilted Girl Given $3,500 Heart Balm

A verdict of $3,500 was returned in Judge Lawton's session of the Superior Court in favor of Rosie Werute, twenty, of No. 181 Gold street, South Boston, in her $10,000 breach of promise suit against Gabrijolius Aukstikalnis, fifty.

FRANKLIN SQUARE GIRLS CHEER NEW CORNER STONE

Mayor Attends Dedication of Work on Addition to Home.

Several hundred hatless maidens, all smiles and with their hair a-glint in the sunlight, did the cheering as the cornerstone was laid for the new addition to the Franklin Square House late yesterday afternoon. And they led the singing too, a thousand or so other grownups and children joining in to round out a chorus that could be heard for a block or mre.

The exercises started at 4 with a salute to the flag by everybody and a band as young George L. Perin, Jr., son of the president of the House, hoisted Old Glory on a flagstaff. Then the hatless maidens of the House sang:

> In days of peace, in days of strife,
> In days of storm or fair,
> You'll find a welcome always waits
> At the good old Franklin Square.

Neither Governor Walsh nor Mayor Curley appeared on the platform. Later, when everybody the informal linner, Mayor Curley arrived, praised Rev. Mr. Perin, the president, and the house, and said Boston was justly proud of the house. President Perin said:

CURLEY PRAISES HOUSE.

"For more than a quarter of a century we had seen money poured out without stint to defnd young men from the dangers and temptations of city life. Yet amazing paradox, up to a few years ago nobody seemed to have thought of the temptations and dangers of the young women alone in a big city.

"Will you compare the risks. Temptation to a young man is likely to pass as youthful indiscretion, to a young mowan it is almost certain to result in deep degradation. To a young man it may mean temporary inconvenience. To a young woman it may mean unspeakable anguish

AMAZING OVERSIGHT.

"We have every reason to thank God for the interest that has been taken in young men. We would not divert a single dollar of the millions that have been spent to make for them a better environment. But it seemed to us an amazing oversight that so little thought had been given to the creation of a better environment for girls alone amid a sea of temptation in our great cities."

Others who took part in the exercises were: Frank A. Schirmer, Rev. Dr. Charles Conklin, John Livingstone Grandin, Miss Castine C. Swanson, Miss Leila Smith, Miss Stella Richards, J. R. Estabrook, Fred M. Jamson and Mrs. Maude Elliott, who made an address.

Militants Start Riot in Courtroom

FELIXSTOWE, Eng., May 16.—Riotous scenes were enacted in the courtroom here today when Hilda Burkett and Florence Tunnks, two members of the militant suffragettes' arson squad, were held for trial on the charge of arson. They are charged with burning the Bath Hotel. The women tried to make a personal attack upon the judge and it required six wardresses and policemen to hold them in their seats. They kept screaming at the court throughout the hearing, interrupting the proceedings half a dozen times.

Kipling Denounces Home Rule Measure

"Breaks Faith of Generations," Declares Author in Speech.

TURNBRIDGE WELLS, England, May 17.—Rudyard Kipling, whose imperialistic beliefs inspire immeasurably less admiration than do his novels, made one of his rare appearances on the political platform here today at a big anti-home rule demonstration and delivered a perfervid diatribe against the government for its efforts to pass the Irish measure.

Kipling declared that the King and the government were not independent of the Irish vote, so the support of the Nationalists was bought with the Home Rule bill, which, he said, "breaks the faith of generations."

"This measure," the author continued, "officially recognizes conspiracy and rebellion. It seizes the forces of boycott, outrage, intimidation and murder, and it creates a stronghold in which all these forces can work together. Civil war is now inevitable unless Home Rulers can be brought to realise that they must refer to matter to the judgment of the people."

Cambridge Man in Eugenic Wedding

MONTCLAIR, N. J., May 16.—Miss Bertha Andrus, daughter of Alfred U. Andrus, and Harry La Burton Gale, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Gale of Cambridge, Mass., were married this evening at the home of the bride by the Rev. Henry E. Jackson, pastor of the Christian Union Congregational Church. The Rev. Mr. Jackson is an advocate of eugenics, and in this instance, as at all marriage ceremonies he has performed since he declared in favor of the innovation a year ago, both bride and bridegroom furnished a certificate of good health.

Women in "Nighties" Flee Waltham Fire

Six persons, among them three women, ran frightened and in their night clothes into the street about midnight last night, following the discovery of a fire on the top floor of a three-story lodging house at No. 16 Mechanics street, Waltham, conducted by Mrs. Mary Breen. A lodger left his lamp burning and went downstairs. A passer saw flames through the upper window and turned in an alarm. The contents of the bedroom were destroyed.

Officer Risks Life in Burning Stable

Four Horses Are Lost in South Quincy Blaze.

Police Officer Thomas Malone risked his life last night in an attempt to save four horses valued at $1,400 belonging to Clark & Martin in a fire which destroyed the interior of the stable of the Empire Polishing Company of South Quincy.

Two of the animals were already dead, and to save the other two from inevitable suffering and death, the officer drew his revolver. The damage to the stable was estimated at $2,000.

Homicide Charge for Mme. Caillaux

PARIS, May 16.—Announcement was made today by Theodore Lescouven, procurator of the Republic, that Mme. Caillaux, who shot and killed Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, is to be tried on the charge of "homicide with premeditation." No date has been set for the trial

Barges Go Through Canal Tomorrow

PANAMA, May 16.—Water borne freight will begin passing through the canal on Monday at noon, when five barges carrying about 2,100 tons of miscellaneous cargo will be towed from Balboa, at the Pacific end, to Cristobal, at the Atlantic end of the canal. The preparations for the passage of the barges have been completed. They are now at Balboa, where they are being loaded for their trip.

Three Alarms for Somerville Fire

Two horses were suffocated, considerable excitement prevailed and a damage of $2,000 resulted from a fire early today in the two-story wooden stable owned and occupied by John Locapelli in the rear of Dante Terrace, Somerville. The stable is in the centre of a row of tenement houses, which the flames threatened, causing the sounding of three alarms, one of which was unnecessary.

Fire Three Shots to Capture Fugitive

Arrest North End Man for Shooting.

It was necessary for Patrolman Hennessey of the Hanover street station to fire three shots from his revolver early this morning before he captures Giovanni Marongondi of 14 Unity place, whom he chased for several blocks through the North End after it is alleged Morongondi cut Pasquale Palmozani of No. 3 Canney place several times about the face, hands and neck. The assault took place on Canney place. Palmozani was treated at the Relief Station. Marongondi is charged with assault with intent to kill.

Squantum Vacation House in Flames

A $3,000 fire of supposed incendiary origin destroyed the upper part of the twenty-room structure known as "Vacation House," formerly occupied by girl vacationists of the Boston Women's Industrial and Educational Union in Squantum at about 1:30 this morning. The police are already investigating the cause of the fire.

Why Do Girls Leave Brooms? 'No Brains'

Problem Solved for Association by Domestic Specialist.

NEW YORK, May 16.—"Most girls haven't the brains to do housework; they would rather go into factories and do the same things over and over," Miss Anna C. Hedges, formerly director of domestic arts, told the Vocational Guidance Association.

"Housework is unsocial, and girls are gregarious. The real reason why housework is left to colored girls who can't get into any other work is that girls prefer work where the bundle that they have to finish is handed out to them and no initiative is required."

"Let's not talk about whether the girls prefer monotonous work," said a member. "There is such an immense field for bettering conditions in the factories. I have found that the girls complained not of the work, but of the administration. And in housework they complain that the mistresses do not know how to direct and they are never sure of their evenings."

Judge Comes to Defence of Divorce

CHICAGO, May 16. — Municipal Judge Gemmill is not alarmed over the annual number of divorces in the United States. He considers it a sign of progress and of the elevation of women and the home. So states his article in the current number of the Illinois Law Review, called "Divorce as a Sign of Degeneracy or of Progress." He says:

"Just in proportion as women have emerged from servility to equality with men, and as the home has become elevated and become the centre of the state, have the grounds for divorce been liberalized and the number of divorces increased.

"In 21 per cent. the cause was cruelty. The divorce was only the helping hand civilized and Christian society held out to the unfortunate victims of man's brutality.

"It is a curious thing that the States that have the lowest percentage of illiteracy and are the most progressive in their lawmaking show the largest percentage of divorces."

Dr. Remsen Awarded Willard Gibbs Medal

CHICAGO, May 16.—Dr. Ira Remsen, president emeritus of Johns Hopkins University, has been decorated with the Willard Gibbs medal, in recognition of achievements in chemistry, at a banquet in his honor by the Chicago section of the American Chemical Society. He is the third American scientist to receive this honor.

Linoleums Bought and Sold by the Carload

The reason W. & A. Bacon Co. sell so much linoleum is because we buy and sell at carload prices.

All of our linoleums come direct from the mills to our store. No jobbers' profits in between and we are always ready with the cash for any special advantage that comes along for our customers.

We expect to sell a carload of linoleums Monday and Tuesday because prices will be about half.

TUXPAM CAPTURED BY REBELS, FEDERAL GARRISON NOW IN FLIGHT SOUTH

HUERTA'S TROOPS ROUTED; HUNDREDS SLAIN IN BATTLE AT BIG OIL CENTRE ON COAST

Hand to Hand Struggle Marks Desperate Encounter That Ends in Rebel Victory

ta to explain the fate of Consul Silliman, Correspondent Doster and Private Parks has brought about a situation so acute that orders for the mobilization at Galveston of more troops for Vera Cruz are expetced, notwithstanding Huerta's positive promise to get the facts in Parks' case at once.

4—The feeling in Washington is strong that the President is about to address a communication to Congress on the subject, although Secretary Bryan holds that nothing should be done at present to interfere with the mediation proceedings.

The news that the Constitutionalists have ordered a Dutch cruiser out of the Panuco River, adds a new complication to the Mexican situation. The navy department regards this development with great concern. The Constitutionalists now insist on the withdrawal of the Dutch marines who were landed at Tampico.

Concerning reported compromise proposals by Huerta, the opinion of the administration is that Huerta is in no position to "dictate terms" to anybody. He must get out, and in getting out, must sever his connection entirely with the administration of Mexico's affairs. The belief of the President and his most capable advisers is that Huerta will hold only a little longer and that he has already made his arrangements to leave Mexico.

The loss of Tampico and of Tuxpam, the latter being credited as reliable news today, and the siege of Saltillo make it all the more useless, in view of the advisers of the President, for Huerta to endeavor to temporize by suggesting terms to the United States.

It has been reported from Vera Cruz that Huerta is willing to retire, provided the United States would promise him that Carranza would not succeed him, that he should be consulted as to his successor and that he should be permitted to run for the presidency at the regular elections in July.

It is denied here that such a suggestion has been made either to the United States or to the mediators by any one qualified to speak for Huerta.

The probable recognition by Great Britain of the belligerency of the Constitutionalists is of great significance, particularly in view of the fact that Great Britain was one of the foreign nations to recognize Huerta in the first instance.

Huerta's envoys are here, Emilio Rabasa, Luis Elguero and Augustin Rodriguez. But what their powers are, no one yet knows. Unless Huerta has given them "full power" to negotiate and conclude an agreement, the mediation proceedings will be crippled from the start.

Huerta's eagerness to placate the United States is argued from his prompt reply to Bryan's strong note of inquiry as to the fate of Orderly Samuel Parks, reported captured and murdered outside Vera Cruz when he wandered beyond the American lines.

Only a few hours after the transmission of this inquiry, the Spanish ambassador here received a reply from the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, asserting that a vigorous investigation of the Parks case had been begun, and that an early report could be expected.

The outcome of this Huerta investigation will have the deepest significance, and its effect upon the future relations of Huerta and this administration can hardly be overestimated.

Secretary Bryan is personally interesting himself in the Parks case. If reports of the manner of Parks' death be true, it was decidedly an "hostile act," and the mediation proceedings were only begun with the understanding there should be no hostile act on either side. If Parks was murdered, as reports would indicate, the administration would be expected to order either an advance on Mexico City or the seizure of Peurto as retaliation.

MEANS MORAL SUPPORT.

According to authorities in international law, a recognition by a foreign state of full belligerent rights, if not justified by necessity, is a gratuitous demonstration of moral support to the rebellion and of censure upon the parent government.

The belief here that the United States also is about to recognize the belligerency of the Constitutionalists is strengthened by the knowledge that this government was about to take such a step several months ago, but the murder of William S. Benton, a British subject, by the Constitutionalists so complicated matters that recognition was postponed.

Although elaborate preparations are being made for the mediation conferences which will begin on Wednesday, officials of the State War and Navy Departments—excepting Secretary Bryan—appear to be more firmly convinced than ever that nothing will come of mediation. One official said that mediation, under the circumstances, must necessarily be a farce. It is being conducted, he said, "like a game of courtesy" with no possible results attainable.

The opinion of this official is that the failure of Huerta to give satisfactory answers to the demands of this government for information about the fate of Silliman, Doster and Parks, has put him completely beyond the pale of mediation.

Two dispatches regarding Silliman were received today at the State Department from the Brazilian Minister, who represents the United States at Mexico City.

It was stated by Robert Lansing, the counsellor of the State Department, that the dispatches of the Brazilian minister indicate he had received his information not from an official source, but from Americans who had arrved from San Luis Potosi. In fact, the second dispatch from the Brazilian minister began with the words:

"Am informed by American citizens who arrived here tonight at 8 o'clock from San Luis Potosi, etc."

An earlier dispatch from the Brazilian minister, as paraphrased for the bulletin on the State Department says that the Brazilian minister "has been informed that Consul Sullivan left Saltillo on the 14th and should reach the capital either the night of the 15th or 16th unless railway communication is interrupted.

NOW NEWS ON DOSTER.

In the case of Edward Depew Doster, correspondent of the International News service, the State Department is absolutely without news official or otherwise. The case has now become one of intense interest. The consulor of the State Department said today that A. J. Sutton, the photographer of a Washington newspaper was arrested at Cordoba because it was supposed he was Doster. This shows that the Huerta government is pursuing him for some unknown reason.

Nor is the State Department able to get any definite official word of Private Parks, the orderly who disappeared outside the American lines at Vera Cruz. The State Department has, however, received word from reliable but not official sources that Parks was deliberately murdered by the Federals.

Sir Spring-Rice, with the Netherlands Minister, was in lengthy conference with Secretary Bryan late this afternoon. The British Ambassador said that the conference related to the Tampico situation where there are important British and Netherlands oil interests.

SETTLE PORT ENTRY.

It is understood that the conference went further than the discussion of the oil situation and that the recognition of the Constitutionalists as belligerents, the conditions of port entry at Tampico and other matters were tentatively agreed upon.

Sir Spring-Rice said a message he received last night from the British Consul at Saltillo stated that Silliman had taken the train from Saltillo o Mexico City on Moy 14. He expressed surprise at the reports that Silliman had not reached his destination.

Admiral Mayo reports tonight that Americans and other foreigners should not be encouraged to return to Tampico immediately. He states that he is in doubt as to whether the Constitutionalists are in control of the Panuco oil district. The Constitutionalists at Tampico have ignored their assurance that foreigners would be protected.

TEPIC AND SAN BLAS CAPTURED BY REBELS

DURANGO, Mexico, May 16.—General Lucio Blanco, commander of the Tepic division of the Constitutionalist army today reported to General Carranza that after a battle lasting forty-nine hours the Constitutionalists drove the Federal garrison out of Tepic and occupied the city.

Tepic is a short distance inland from the Pacific ocean and is considered one of the most important cities in the western portion of the republic.

Simultaneous with the capture by the Constitutionalists of Tepic, General Rafael Bulna captured the port of San Blas, while a small division of the rebel army occupied Ixquiutlan.

No details, other than that the Constitutionalists captured many prisoners and large quantities of ammunition and supplies, are given in the messages.

The reports stated that the Federal garrisons were in utter route and were trying to reach Guadalajara. Detachments of well mounted cavalry are in pursuit.

General Obregon, at Mazatlan, declares he will begin his advance on Mexico City with 20,000 men within a week.

"Huerta will be dead before the end of June," was Obregon's sinister comment when telling of his plans for his final march on the dictator's capital.

With Tepic in the hands of the Constitutionalists and the entire country surrounding it free from Federals, the advance by General Obregon to Guadalajara, capital of Jalisco, will not be impeded.

CONCENTRATE AT TEPIC.

The combined armies of Obregon, Blanco and Buelna will concentrate in Tepic for the advance against Gaudalajara.

Reports brought to General Obregon from Gaudalajara are to be the effect that the Federal garison of Gaudalajara is being strongly reinforced by recruits forced into service and by smaller garrisons from outlying districts. It is thought General Obregon will have an army of fully 6,500 men to overwhelm before he can occupy Guadalajara. The only city of importance between Guadalajara and San Luis Potosi is Aguas Calientes and this stronghold will be attacked simultaneously with Guadalajara.

Although the plans of the Constitutionalists commanders have not been made public it is said by a member of General Carranza's cabinet that the entire Constitutionalist armies of the North, Centre, East and West will be spread out over a frontage of several hundred miles extending from Guadalajara on the West to San Luis Potosi on the East, and in this mighty formation the armies will march onward to Mexico City.

Constitutionalists have gained materially in the capture of the port of San Blas in that they have a seaport on the west coast of the republic through which they may import munitions for the future operations.

MAZATLAN NEXT TO FALL.

Although Mazatlan is still occupied by Federal forces the capture of that important seaport is expected almost hourly. General Obregon, who is now personally in command of the besieging forces reports to General Carranza, several times each day informing him that the Constitutionalists are slowly pushing their way into the city and that the artillery and aviators are doing deadly work with big shells and bombs.

Captain Salinas Carranza has reported to his uncle through General Obregon that a bomb dropped by him from his aeroplane exploded on the deck of the Federal gunboat, Morelos, almost totally demolishing the craft. He made several unsuccessful attempts to drop a bomb into one of the stacks or directly over the powder and ammunition magazine.

PROVIDE TRAIN FOR AMERICAN REFUGEES

MEXICO CITY, May 16.—A train specially provided for all Americans who decide to leave this city has been arranged for and will leave on Wednesday next. Seven hundred Americans here have however, registered, declining to leave the city. Many families are arriving here from San Luis Potosi although the Federal government offered to guarantee their safety.

A large number of Cubans and Latin-Americans have offered their services in the field to the Mexican government.

The Constitutionalist plans to attack Saltillo have been frustrated. The garrison there is too strong and the rebels are said to be retreating southward toward Zacatecas. Minister Blanquet states that this movement must be unsuccessful. It is also reported that all attacks on Mazatlan were defeated.

General Zaragoza's army is said to have left Tampico for Tuxpam with all arms, cannon and ammunition.

The Postoffice Department states that foreign mails service has been resumed. General Maas arrived here yesterday and denied that Private Parks of the Twenty-eighth United States Infantry or any other American soldier had been executed by the men under his command. The story of the execution, the general says, was undoubtedly a canard, started by the Vera Cruz newspapers.

General Maas said there are no new developments at Vera Cruz. His forces occupy the same positions and are respecting the armistice, he said.

"NEW MEXICO" DATES FROM TAMPIC'S FALL

By CHARLES MICHELSON.

VERA CRUZ, May 16.—May 13 is certain to become a day of as great importance in Mexican history as either Cinco De Mayo or September 16. In the days to come streets and plazas will be named after it; for this was the date of the deciding battle of the bitterest revolution in the stormy history of the republic.

The taking of Tampico by the Constitutionalists not only points to the end of the Hperta regime, but to the end of the Mexico that was. Under the inquiring guns of the American war ships the victors are determined to show the world that they know how civilized conquerors should behave in a captive city.

No shrieks of tortured women, no blowing up of strong boxes, no gutting of houses, no slaughter of noncombatants, not even a carnival of executions with an army of savages drunk and bedrugged, with every sort of loot and the shrieking of Indian yells of triumph. This was the first time for a Mexican force to storm a city and not give it over to pillage.

If the Constitutionalist leaders had been taking notes during the American occupation of Vera Cruz they could not have learned the lesson better. Pablo Gonzales took up his quarters in the Imperial Hotel just as Funston did in the Hotel Terminal in Vera Cruz. With Gonzales was Cabellero, the Constitutionalist Governor, his aides, colonels, majors and captains, became magistrates, police captains and street cleaning heads. Orders for the sanitation of the city were drastic and promptly carried out. The bodies of the dead disappeared from the streets in the twinkling of an eye. They were disposed of swiftly but decently. All saloons were closed. Two soldiers caught looting in defiance of the orders of the commandant were taken to the suburbs and summarily shot. Complaints of citizens were listened to patiently.

Order was restored and all prisoners paroled instead of being shot.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

FREE TOLLS PLANK APPROVED BY BRYAN, SAYS SENATOR WALSH

Montana Senator Gives 'Inside" Details of Baltimore Convention Proceedings and Scathingly Rebukes Administration for Breaking Solemn Pledge to the People

WASHINGTON, May 16.—That William Jennings Bryan personally approved a free tolls plank in the Baltimore platform when it was read to him in sub-committee, and that he asked only that it be accompanied by another plank declaring against the admission of railroad-owned ships to the canal, was the declaration of Senator Walsh of Montana in the Senate today in a speech denouncing the free tolls repeal bill.

As secretary of the platform committee and of the sub-committee, Senator Walsh said he personally transcribed the proceedings when the free tolls policy was approved by the party leaders.

Senator Walsh argued that the question of the rights of the United States in the canal should be submitted to the Supreme Court, as suggested by former President Taft. He asserted he believed the world would acquiesce in that decision.

"The Democratic platform has declared the policy of the Democratic party on this subject," he said.

"I went before the people on it and was elected to carry out this mandate whatever my individual opinion might be. Were the open repudiation of this solemn covenant of the party proposed by any other man than the President of the United States we all should recoil from it with horror.

MORAL ASPECT UNCHANGED.

"For myself its moral aspect assumes no different view because he commends it.

"My relationship to the Baltimore convention is too intimate to permit me with an easy conscience to escape the fetters it places upon my official actions, even though I did not concur altogether in any particular policy it adopted.

"The work of putting into appropriate language the ideas to which general acquiesence had been given by the platform committee were reposed in Mr. Bryan of Nebraska, and Mr. O'Gorman of New York, who were authorised to call to their aid such members of the committee as they chose. They requested Senator Pomerene and myself to remain with them. The draft prepared by this committee of the sub-committee was transcribed under my own supervision, was read to the sub-committee and by it read to the entire committee before which it was again read and being by it approved was presented to and adopted by the convention without change.

NO DEBATE ON PLANK.

"The plank referring to canal tolls was, as my memory serves me, tendered by the Senator from New York and was adopted by the sub-committee of eleven before the smaller committee assumed the task imposed upon it. There was no debate upon it simply because it was generally approved and acquiesced in. When it was presented Mr. Bryan expressed his approval but said that it should be accompanied by another plank declaring against the admission of railroad-owned ships to the canal.

"The draft tendered used the expression 'free tolls.' Someone suggested that the two words were contradictory of each other. It was changed to read, as we find it: 'We favor the exemption from tolls of American ships engaged in coastwise traffic through the canal.'

"If it should be determined by the Supreme Court of the United States that the act in question is in contravention of the treaty, or if I were satisfied that it is, I should feel my oath of office a superior obligation and would unhesitatingly vote for repeal. While I remain convinced that no treatry restrains our acton, I am under no temptation to escape from the trammels of the platform upon the puerile suggestion that the plank in question is contradicted by another that declares against subsidies, requiring a choice as between the two. In that view the canal itself is a subsidy to the shipping interests."

BRYAN'S CHANGE OF POLICY

William Jennings Bryan personally approved a free tolls plank in the Baltimore convention platform when it was presented in the sub committee, but said that it should be accompanied by another plank declaring against the admission of railroad-owned ships to the canal.—From speech in the Senate by Senator Walsh of Montana, who was secretary of the convention platform comimttee.

FREE TOLLS ARGUMENTS WIN COLLEGE DEBATE

The exemption of American coastwise ships from paying tolls at Panama should not be repealed, in the opinion of the 2,000 students, judges and audience who heard the Boston College versus Georgetown University debate on the question at Boston College Hall last week.

District Attorney Pelletier presided, and the judges of the debate were Judge Patrick M. Keating of the Superior Court, John R. Murphy of the Finance Commission and Judge Charles S. Sullivan of the Charlestown Court. When the debate was over they were unanimous for Boston College and free tolls.

The Boston College team has twice defeated Georgetown on the same question. Last year at Washington they argued for free tolls and won. Then General Leonard A. Wood and two Supreme Court judges judged the debate. This year, taking the same side of the argument, they were again victorious.

The Georgetown team relied upon President Wilson's position They argued:

"Right or wrong, we should repeal free tolls and avoid friction." They further asserted that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty forbade free tolls.

Leo M. Murray of Revere, last speaker for Boston College in rebuttal, shattered this claim by pointing out that "Senator Bard offered an amendment to the treaty when it was under consideration in the Senate, specifically giving us the right to exempt our ships from paying tolls. Senator Lodge and the other Senators who have answered our queries on the matter say that amendment was unnecessary because the point was covered in the treaty, and the amendment was dropped."

The speakers for Georgetown were Edward J. Devlin, Jr., of New York; J. Francis Ryan of New Jersey, and Rufus S. Lusk of the District of Columbia. The Boston College speakers were Edward A. Sullivan of Cambridge; Robert P. Barry of Newton and Leo M. Murray of Revere. When the judges unanimously gave them the decision, the two thousand packed into the hall burst into cheers.

Here are extracts from the main speeches of the three Boston College men. The extracts show how they developed their argument to the point of absolute conviction:

AGAINST PRECEDENT.

Edward A. Sullivan spoke first and said in part:

Georgetown is arguing against something which is a law now, and which is stamped with the approval of Congress and a President. Whereas we uphold, they condemn the judgment of the greatest assembly of statesmen in the country.

"We propose to show that a failure to exempt American ships is contrary to precedent, to established law, and to the Constitution; that it is economically wrong, and that it involves a national dishonor and injustice to the American people.

"The Panama Canal is OUR waterway. It was built and will be maintained by this country, and by this country alone. No other nation contributed to that colossal cost of $400,000,000. No nation save the United States gave an ounce of energy or a single idea to the realization of the project. The canal is as truly ours as any river or harbor in the land. And on no single river or harbor do we impose tolls upon coastwise vessels.

"Therefore, if we impose tolls at Panama, we discriminate among our own skippers. Take the case of two New York skippers, one trading with San Francisco, the other with Duluth. The one uses the Panama Canal, the other uses the Great Lakes and the Sault Ste. Marie Canal. The former would be compelled to pay a toll at Panama, the other is charged absolutely nothing.

"The imposition of tolls would violate the River and Harbor Act of 1884, which expressly states: 'No tolls whatever shall be levied upon any vessel or other craft for passing through any canal or other work for the use of navigation now belonging to the United States or that may be hereafter acquired or constructed.'

"The imposition of tolls is contrary to the Constitution, which provides that 'no preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another.' Suppose you charge tolls at Panama. St. Paul can today ship goods by the Mississippi to New Orleans without paying tolls. San Francisco, if tolls are exacted, would have to pay for shipping goods through the canal to New Orleans. That is giving one port preference over another, in violation of the Constitution. The Constitution also says 'No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State.' If you impose tolls, you violate this clause, for if a cargo be shipped from Boston through the canal to San Francisco and made to pay tolls at the Isthmus, that is neither more nor less than a tax and duty laid on articles exported from a State.

RAILROADS THE REASON.

Robert P. Barry said:

"It is an axiom of economic law that the high cost of transportation is the prime factor in the high cost of living. Whenever railroads come into competition with water carriers they are forced to reduce their freight charges. Our government has spent hundreds of millions on the canals and rivers of our land, which stimulates rate competition from which our people get the benefit of a reduced cost of living. To raise the cost of transportation is to raise the cost of living.

"It is only through freedom from tolls at Panama that maximum economic benefits can come to our people.

"There are eight splendid reasons which all unite into one powerful argument against free tolls. These eight reasons are the eight railroads of the country. They recognize that in proportion as a toll is levied, in like proportion will their railroad rates be increased or maintained Free tolls will force reduced freight rates.

"For over thirty years, with all the gigantic force and tremendous power at their command, the railroads opposed and obstructed the building of the canal itself, and, when overruled in their selfish purpose, they attempted to gain control of our coastwise shipping, and were again defeated by the government's enactment that a ship owned or controlled by a railroad should not use the canal. And now they make their supreme effort and rally to their side the powerful instruments of insidious lobby and subsidized press in an effort to erect an artificial barrier to our domestic progress.

"You cannot impose a toll on transportation without the American people bearing the burden of that toll. Now levy a toll of $1.20 a ton upon a ship with a capacity of 8,000 tons, and you increase the price of the commodities in that ship on that trip to the extent of $9,699. That money will come out of the pockets of the people.

"It is a law of trade which knows no violation that when you place a tax or a toll on a commodity in one section of the country, you affect the price of that same commodity in every section. When you put a toll of $1 a ton on our canal traffic, you substantially put a toll of $1 a ton on all the 28,000,000,000 worth of produce that goes into our interstate traffic in a year.

"It is objected by some that free tolls means ship subsidy, but free tolls at Panama no more means ship subsidy than free tolls at Sault Ste Marie, in the Soo, and in every river and harbor in the land."

WRONG ECONOMICALLY.

Leo M. Murray, the concluding speaker, said:

"Not only is repeal of the exemption clause unconstitutional and economically disadvantageous, but it is the surrender of a right which under present conditions and the interpretation which will be placed on it abroad would be an injustice to the American people and a national dishonor.

"That we have the right to exempt our coasting vessels from tolls is absolutely undeniable. Natural justice demands that the people who spent $400,000,000 in the construction of the canal shall reap the maximum advantage from that canal. And the exercise of this right is in no way hindered by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"The treaty lays down six rules for the government of the canal. One of these rules forms the groundwork on which the opponents of free tolls challenge our rights. This rule declares: 'The canal shall be open to the vessels of commerce and war of all nations on terms of entire equality, and there shall be no discrimination.' The question comes on whether the United States is included in the words 'all nations'.

"We do not believe that a landlord is included in the rules he promulgates for his tenants. With former Secretary of State Olney, we believe 'that it cannot reasonably be argued that in fixing the terms for the use of its canal by customers the United States looked upon itself as one of the customers.'

"If the United States did include herself in these rules, her vessels of war as well as her vessels of commerce should pay tolls. Even England saw the absurdity of such a claim.

"If the United States is included in this clause, then there is a basic and fundamental contradiction in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty itself; for article 2 of this trety says that the United States 'shall have and enjoy all rights incident to construction' of the canal, as well as the 'exclusive right' to the regulation and management of the canal. This obviously includes the right to exempt from tolls our coastwise ships.

"European nations generally believe that we have not the right to exempt our shipping. They know that England has protested, and that we are apparently about to repeal, and they interpret our action as submission to Englnd's demand, and suppose the United States has been forced to retire from an unjust position.

"When we have acted wholly within our rights and a repeal of that rightful action is planned, it is paramount to a national dishonor. We retreat under fire when we know that that retreat and repeal will be looked upon as a confession of guilt."

Police Find Body of Missing Captain

The harbor police have found the body of Captain John Murphy, forty, employed on a scow of the Boston Development and Sanitary Company. The captain was seen Friday night on the scow, which was docked near Spectacle Island. The next morning he could not be found, but his hat was lying on deck. The police, after a few hours' grappling, located the body.

Lynn Man Held on Charge of Arson

Charles P Brown of Lynn was held in $1,000 bonds for the Superior Court by Judge Lummis in the Lynn District Court on the charge of arson. Mrs. Florence Prince testified that on last Wednesday evening she saw Brown entering the building at No. 114 Union street, Lynn, with a bundle of newspapers under his arm. After he left the building the fire was discovered.

Arrest Elevator Boy for Forgery

Ernest W. Adams, eighteen, an elevator boy in the Rogers building. No. 209 Washington street, is under arrest on a charge of forgery. The police say he forged the name of Attorney Louis H. Sawyer to four checks for $10, $5, $10 and $7 respectively and the name of Myer Dana, real estate man, to a check for $15, and cashed them at the bank in the building where he works.

Sullivan Favored for U. S. Attorney

Michael L. Sullivan, City Solicitor of Salem, has been endorsed by eight Democratic Massachusetts Congressmen for United States District Attorney in Boston. A committee consisting of Peters, Murray and Phelan has been designated to inform Attorney-General McReynolds of the wishes of the delegation.

Speak for Twelve Nations at Harvard

Twelve countries, including Mexico, were represented at the International entertainment last night in Peabody Hall, Phillips Brooks House, Harvard, by the Harvard Cosmopolitan Club. Students from Russia, Japan, India, China, Holland, Liberia, Switzerland, Columbia, Cuba and Mexico spoke. L. O. Wright represented Mexico.

Off It Comes

That's all you have to do with the Gavaza self-opening bottle cap. Just pull it off. No more hunting for an opener; no more bruised fingers; no more ruffled temper. It is always there where wanted. Cap and handle all one piece. Cannot get lost or mislaid.

Wonderful Possibilities

The Gavaza "no-opener" cap should ultimately replace the present cap requiring some tool to remove. Every one appreciates its convenience and merchants must give their customers the best to keep up with the march of progress. Once the Gavaza cap is on the market the public will demand it on all their bottle goods.

Enormous Field

The millions and millions of caps used in the United States alone, to say nothing of the rest of the world, is almost beyond estimation, and is an indication of the gigantic possibilities of this business. Beers, ales, tonics, ginger ale, mineral waters, special products, all use them.

Your Opportunity

A limited amount of 8% cumulative preferred stock is offered the public at par. For a short time only a special bonus of common stock to each purchaser. A share of stock bought now may some day be worth hundreds of dollars. Think this over. Investigate it fully. MILITIA MEN BARE MIDNIGHT CAMP 'REVELS'

Say Incident Was Seized Upon as Pretext to Drive Lieut. M'Dowell Out of Sixth.

"The Scandal in the Sixth," the liveliest militia sensation Massachusetts has ever seen, is about to come to a head. The AMERICAN, from militiamen in Fitchburg, has secured for the first time the unvarnished story of the revel by night in camp at Mattapoisett last Summer.

The story is being presented to the court-martial sitting at the State House in secret sessions. The affair, according to the friends of Lieutenant Joseph J. McDowell, was innocent in itself, but was seized upon by a clique of his enemies as a pretext to drive him out of the militia.

A quarrel between two brothers figures in the affair. The other brother is Captain Jeremiah J. McDowell of the same company—D of the Sixth. Thus far the lieutenant has had the worst of it. He is charged with conduct unbecoming an officer, and with falsifying muster rolls. Lieutenant McDowell charges Captain McDowell with drunkenness on duty and with falsifying muster rolls.

BROTHER IN COMMAND.

Lieutenant McDowell has been barred from the company's armory. His brother is still in command. The lieutenant has been brought to trial. The charges against the captain are pending.

A further complication of the Sixth's affairs has arisen in Company I. Former Captain Ralph B. Petersen is charged with retaining company property. Since he is retired, he is not subject to court-martial, but a civil suit may be begun. Captain Petersen says the charge against him is a mistake and a technicality.

Here is the story of the Mattapoisett revel, as told by a member of the militia who says he participated:

"Two Fitchburg militiamen had two Fitchburg girls at camp during the day. The militiamen, toward evening, took the girls to New Bedford by automobile and started back to camp. On the way they met two New Bedford girls.

STORY OF "REVEL."

"The chauffeur asked if the girls couldn't ride out to the camp, so as to be company for him on the trip back to town. This was agreed to. When the party reached camp the girls wanted to see how a soldier's tent looks from the inside. Accordingly, a party of perhaps ten gathered in one of the tents. There was beer to be had, and until 3 o'clock in the morning, the 'revel' went on.

"About that time, a senior officer appeared at the tent door and the revellers departed."

Regarding the charge of falsifying muster rolls, it has been testified that a man, named Martin Jilbert, was allowed to impersonate Private O'Brien on the rifle range, and shot so well that Private O'Brien's markmanship record was much improved.

SOTHERN PLAYS UNUSUAL HAMLET

Miss Elizabeth Valentine Is Well Received in Part of Ophelia.

"The native hue of resolution is sicklied over with the pale cast of thought" qouth Hamlet at the Shubert last night, and that sentence was the keynote of Sothern's depiction of the Melancholy Dane.

His Hamlet is a man of fierce and fiery purpose, but the purpose eats itself in meditation and soliloquy, till it becomes the "almost blunted purpose" of the ghost's second appearance.

Sothern's Hamlet is a sentimental, shrewd, meditative gentleman, yet bears conviction in every line.

Miss Elizabeth Valentine had the difficult task of filling Julia Marlowe's place as Ophelia. Her voice was inadequate in the first three acts, but in the two scenes of her mad grief in the fourth act, voice and reading were perfect, and her work was masterly.

Sidney Mather as Laertes brought out most strongly the contrast between his character and that of Hamlet. The father of each was murdered. Laertes instantly appeared to demand vengeance. Hamlet, on the other hand, consumed his first passion in mere ponderings, and delayed action till the end.

Of the secondary characters, Lark Taylor as Polonius, Alma Kruger as the Queen, and Frederick Lewis as Horatio excelled.

LOGAN PREDICTS BUSINESS REVIVAL

Former Worcester Mayor Encouraged After Trip to the Coast.

WORCESTER, May 16.—Former Mayor James Logan struck a strongly optimistic note in discussing business prospects, upon his return from a trip to the Pacific coast, in the course of which he interviewed business men, large and small, and men in all walks of life.

Logan is general manager of the United States Envelope Company, and one of the most alert business men in the country.

He does not predict "unprecedented prosperity," but he does foresee a great revival of industry and a new vitality in business, which will grow out of the new order of things. He summed up his opinions thus:

"I found that the most hopeful sign is, that with industry marking time as it is, there appears to be absolutely no pessimism but a broad spirit of optimism. Business men from coast to coast do not expect trade is going to boom, but say there will be a fair volume of business and they are all waiting expectantly in the belief that things are going to mend. That the foundations are pretty secure and all we need is a little more confidence to go ahead, slowly at first, of course, seems to me to express the general feeling throughout the country."

AMERICAN REPORTER FINDS CHARLES STREET JAIL AS FINE AS CLAIMED BY SHERIFF QUINN

Inspection Reveals Clean, Light and Airy Cells, Kitchen and Corridors

"You seem to think that jail of yours is a palace," said Councilman Watson.

"Yes, it is. I like it. It is a fine place," replied Sheriff Quinn.—Excerpt from testimony given by Sheriff Quinn at the hearing before the Prison Committee of the City Council on charges of mismanagement brought by Councilor James A. (Jerry) Watson against the former.

An AMERICAN reporter made a personal investigation and has written the following:

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Through the courtesy of Sheriff Quinn I was permitted to visit the jail on Saturday afternoon and was shown through the place by Arthur R. Towle, one of the clerks, and Deputy Sheriff Kelly.

On entering the jail yard from the office entrance I was confronted by gardens on each side of the roadway leading to the jail. The roadway was recently swept.

SPOTLESS FLOOR.

Inside the jail I met Mr. Towle, told him Sheriff Quinn had invited me to inspect the institution and wished to take advantage of the offer.

"All right," said Towle, "though we're pressed for help, I'll show you through the institution."

With that we entered the jail through a doorway which led to the rotunda, the floor of which was recently washed and appeared so clean that person could safely eat a meal off it.

An odor of fresh air pervaded the place, the windows on each side were open, and a number of the prisoners, dressed in the conventional jail garb, were walking through, chatting as happily as if on the boulevards.

SOILED BED TICKING.

Several steps across the floor brought us to a row of cells, and Towle commented on the fact that the walls of the place, which were bright and glossy, had recently been kalsomined, and that of late two men had been placed in some of the cells.

As Towle said this he walked up to a cell door and looked in, pointing to two cots, one on each side of the cell. The floor of the cell was clean, but the bed ticking and covering appeared soiled, as if they had been in use for some time.

Our next visit was to the kitchen, where a number of prisoners were busily engaged packing large loaves of bread into wooden trays and carrying them into another room.

Each tray was manned by two men, and an officer wrote in a memoranda book the number of loaves of bread carried away.

SPICK AND SPAN KITCHEN.

In a corner of the room three other prisoners were cleaning tin drinking cups, while others were working about large kettles. Towle pointed to a large copper vat, stating that it was filled with cocoa. He removed the cover, disclosing the cocoa, which was colored with milk and steaming hot.

Towle next took the cover off a smaller vessel, filled with hash, which appeared palatable. Everything was spick and span in the kitchen. Cleanliness was evident everywhere.

From the kitchen we went back to the rotunda and looked over a number of barber chairs, which were covered. Towle nodded to a boiler fastened to the floor, which, he said, was used for holding water, which flowed when turned on into bathtubs in the bathroom underneath. He said the boiler would soon be supplanted by shower baths.

A walk down a flight of stairs brought us to the shower baths in a spacious room. There are ten such showers on each side of the room, but have not been accepted yet, according to Towle.

WINDOWS PUT IN.

Towle pointed to several other improvements recently made in and about the bath room and also referred to a window which had been cut through a wall to permit of better ventilation.

During our walk through the place, Towle casually remarked that other improvements for the benefit of prisoners are in process of formation.

Returning to the rotunda, Towle pointed out the women's cells. All showed the same line of improvements in the way of kalsomining of walls and installation of windows.

Towle then turned me over to Deputy Sheriff Kelly, who escorted me across the courtyard to the officers' building which contains the padded cells. Before reaching the latter we went through the cage or room near the street entrance to a tier of cells.

LIGHT AND AIRY.

Kelly stopped in front of a cell, called attention to the abundance of light and air. The window had recently been cut through so as to permit of proper ventilation.

Near this cell is a room in which were several prison runners, known as "trusties."

A few steps down the corridor and we were in the padded room section, which is well lighted, airy and clean and in which one prisoner is confined with an attack of delirium tremens.

The cells resemble cages, and when the door of each is shut the only way in which a person can see inside is through a small aperture in the centre of the door.

The inside of each cell is heavily padded. To the uninitiated the cells appear inhuman, and did to me, having looked at a prisoner confined in one of them.

Deputy Kelly said that the cells should never have been built the way they are. He said, though, that they are at times necessary.

In a small room adjoining is a bath tub of the porcelain variety in which prisoners, who have been held in captivity in a padded cell, are washed in hot water after leaving there.

Up to recently there was no window in this room, but at Kelley's suggestion one was cut through to the corridor. Kelly said that it was impossible in the old days to see a man in the tubs because of the steam being so thick.

He mentioned that hot baths were necessary for prisoners afflicted with delirium tremens.

The punishment cells were next shown. These cells are dark and dreary, without windows, and are fitted with planks, on which a recalcitrant prisoner sleeps while undergoing punishment, which, under the law, lasts twenty-four hours.

A prisoner so confined, according to Kelly, is put on bread and water, and after leaving the place he is apt to obey prison rules.

OFFICERS WELL HOUSED.

Upstairs are the officers' rooms, which are well furnished.

My visit to the jail, from what I saw, convinces me that the jail is, as Sheriff Quinn says, "a fine place to live."

The menu at the jail follows:

Breakfast—Dipper of coffee, oatmeal and as much bread as wanted.

Dinner—Beef or lamb stew, potatoes, vegetables and bread.

Supper—Dipper of cocoa or chocolate, corned beef hash and plenty of bread.

Desert—Tobacco to those who like to chew or smoke.

"The meats we use at the jail, young man," interjected Sheriff Quinn, "are served the same as the cuts of meat market men sell to the proprietors of the best hotels in the country.

Two Great Emery Ships Almost Ready

9,000-Ton Ferighters Soon to Be Launched at Fore River.

The two big 9,000-ton freight ships which the Emery Steamship Company is having built for the Boston-Pacific line at the Fore River ship yards are nearly ready for launching. The Atlantic will be launched at noon on May 26 and the Pacific will take the water about a month later. The keel of the Atlantic was laid in July last year and that of the Pacific in August. Work on them has been rushed at top speed for the officials of the Emery company were anxious to have them ready as soon after the opening of the Panama Canal for commercial ships as was possible. They realized the importance of being early in the field if they were to get the line established in time to share in the benefits of the canal.

The Atlantic and Pacific will ply between Boston and San Pedro, San Francisco, Portland Ore., and Puget Sound ports. It is probable that other ships controlled by the Emerys will supplement these two until other ships can be built.

The Atlantic and Pacific are lake type freighters, with cargo holds forward and midships, the machinery and quarters aft. They are 406 feet long, fifty-four feet six inches wide and twenty-four feet and nine inches load draft. At a speed of ten and a half knots they have a steaming radius of between 6,000 and 7,000 miles on one coaling.

No date has been set for the maiden trips of the big freighters, but they will not be delayed a day after they are ready and the canal is open.

Roxbury Troop Off for 'War Game'

Andover Man to Wed Social Worker

Engagement Announced of Former Pupils in Brookline High School.

A romance which begun in Brookline eight years ago, when both were pupils in the High School, was brought to light yesterday in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Bryant, a social settlement worker, to George Ben Roberts, a student at the Andover Theological Seminary.

Miss Bryant is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert A. Bryant of Lunenburg and is at present connected with the home department and Sunday School of the Calvinistic Congregational Church at Fitchburg.

Mr. Roberts is a graduate of Harvard and is taking a post-graduate course at Andover. He is also studying for the ministry, and being deeply interested in social welfare work has been thrown constantly in touch with Miss Bryant.

Claims Throne in 4 Words

Steward Would Rule Siam

◆◆◆

Grandfather Invaded Harem

George Russell, who claims he is rightful heir to the throne of Siam, dressed in Siamese costume.

Bostonian Ready to Push Rights if He Can Start a Rebellion.

When Uncle Sam gets the Mexican government on its feet again as a going concern he might step over to Boston and take up the chances of a good Siamese muss for George Russell.

George says he is the rightful heir to the throne of the kingdom forever associated with white elephants and twins.

What with the general financial tightness, the secrets "Charley" Mellen threatens to tell about the New Haven, the coming cup races and other things to watch, the call for Siamese claimants is a bit off just now.

In the meantime George Russell is working as one of the bar stewards in the American House. He is located most of the time in the wine cellar, where he sees that the dust is not allowed to get off the wine bottles.

Among the exhibits George has to back up his claim are these:

A—Four Siamese words.

B—His other name: "Devan Moutri."

C—Complete ground plan and perspective for Siamese rebellion.

D—Considerable discretion regarding the same.

E—Family tree (uprooted but quite a swell piece of shrubbery at that).

F—A sad story.

"Devan," or George to use the name on his laundry list, is short on the Siamese language. The four words he knows are adjectives which the native Siamese uses, when he is out with his own gang, to express his opinion of Europeans. The Mexican equivalent is Victoriano Huerta's idea of Venustiano Carranza.

George's other name. "Devan Moutri," is how he would be listed in the Bankok City directory, whatever that is.

REBELLION PLANS.

Regarding the rebellion plans, the Moutri family tree and the sad story, George said to a Sunday AMERICAN reporter yesterday:

"There isn't a particle of doubt about my being the lawful heir to Chaufa Ekadwat Anurak Moutri, who was King of Siam. He was slain when the Burmese conquered the country in 1767.

"While the Siamese did get the throne back King Chaufa never regained his title. Two army generals set themselves up as kings and founded the present dynasty.

"So my family ceased to become rulers, although one of my relatives, Phya Moutri, was Prime Minister under King Chulalongkorn.

"But my grandfather, who has just died in a Siamese prison, as I am informed, had ambitions for the throne and was betrayed to the King by a man whom my grandfather had trusted.

"A terrible charge was brought against my grandfather—that of having invaded the royal harem. He was cast into prison. I hear he was subjected to terrible cruelties.

"His death makes me the next in line, as my father is dead. I am the real heir to the throne of the Moutri dynasty."

George said further that he has been approached to start a rebellion in the north of Siam. It seems that his adherents are called the Loas. The "Monds," too, are against the present regime.

"I have in my possession," says George, "complete plans for a rebellion by the Monds and the Loas. But the present dynasty is well established and enjoys the support of many of the people."

It seems that the Monds are disgruntled, for one thing, because their old capital, Paklat, was captured. Then the present dynasty moved out of the old walled Bhuddist city of Ayuthia and set up the throne at Bankok.

"If the Monds and Loas should combine in rebellion," says George, "they certainly would make Ayuthia the capital instead of Bankok."

The throne of Siam is a stake worth playing for. The King is richer that John D. Rockefeller, the Guggenheims and the Rothschilds combined. And he doesn't have to pay income taxes or any other tax. In fact, he doesn't pay taxes—he collects 'em.

That's about the situation over in Siam. It might be worth Uncle Sam's time to dicker with George for the chance of setting things right there and getting some good concessions in the elephant and Siamese twin lines.

POTOMAC RIVER TO LIGHT WASHINGTON

Senator Norris' Plan calls for a Cost of $15,000,000 to Develop Water Power.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Lighting up all the buildings occupied by the national government in the District of Columbia is the task the Potomac River must perform if Senator Norris has his way. There's a cost of $15,000,000 to be considered before the development of this river power is made by Uncle Sam, but appropriations of that size are a mere trifle to a Congress that tosses out a billion and more with every two years of work.

Senator Norris is trying to get this item, which would result in a big saving to the federal treasury in a few years, attached to the river and harbor appropriation bill. The chances are, however, that it will be put into one of the other budget bills instead.

Army engineers have been looking with ambitious eyes at the rapids in the Potomac, just above the city, ever since George Washington selected this site for the Capital. Time after time the power has been investigated and the engineers have been chagrined to witness the indifference of the Senate and House to the project. Recently a new estimate of the cost of development has been prepared, and Norris has made it his special business to see that the project is brought to a definite issue and a vote.

HINGHAM BLAZE IS BROUGHT TO THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

Flames Away Off in the Woods Didn't Feaze Chief Cushing's Men.

FREIGHT CAR WAS BURNING

You can't stick George Cushing's hand-raised fire department down in Hingham, not even when the fire starts away off in the woods in a box car while Chief George is over in New York city on a matter of personal business.

Not being able to get out to the fire—running a fire engine and not a railroad engine—the department had the fire brought to it, or under it. They met the fire half-way at the railroad bridge and the rest was simply a matter of minutes.

Chief George has been in office thirty-three or four years and is next to the oldest fire department head in the United States in length of service. But he's a fox on fires.

The middle of the week Chief George turned the department over to Assistant Chief "Bill" Nelson, saying:

WENT AWAY TO NEW YORK.

"'Bill', I've got to run over to New York for a couple of days on a legal matter and you keep things from burning up or down while I'm gone. I figure on being back about Saturday morning."

Chief George stepped off the Boston train yesterday and asked "Bert" Brown, the chief's driver: "Any fires while I was away, Bert."

"Well, yes, they had to turn out early today and take the automobile engine up to the railroad bridge and meet a box car that was brought down from Nantasket Junction on fire with 56,000 pounds of burning rubber. They couldn't get the fire engine up the track, so they hauled the fire down to meet the boys halfway at the bridge."

Chief George made tracks for "Bill" Nelson and learned all that had happened.

It seems that a New Haven railroad freight train was between Cohasset and Nantasket Junction when this box car loaded with rubber began to smoke.

WATER TANK USELESS.

The train crew cut the burning car out from the train and backed it up to the water tank at the Junction, thinking to flush out the fire from the tank pipe.

But this didn't work because the car was afire inside and the standpipe couldn't send an accurate stream.

Then they 'phoned the Hingham department, being in actual Hingham territory, though still out at Nantasket Junction.

"Bill" Nelson, who answered the phone, said: "We can't run our fire engine along your railroad track and if we could you haven't any hydrant out there. But you haul your box car to Rockland street railroad bridge and I think we can fix you up."

HAULS FLAMING CAR.

"Bill" had the engine run up to the hydrant near the railroad bridge, with the hose lines carried to the bridge and ready to play down below.

Pretty quick, down the track from the Junction, came this engine, hauling a flaming box car and not wasting any time about it.

The car was stopped at the bridge. The Hingham fire fighters turned their hose streams on and had the fire out in a jiffy, saving about all the rubber and most of the car.

The train crew was ever so much obliged and Assistant Chief "Bill" Nelson said for them to bring along any good fires they had anytime.

Chief George Cushing heard Nelson through and said:

"Good work, Bill. I knew you'd know what to do."

Messenger Boy Is Killed by Engine

Daniel Toomey, a fifteen-year-old messenger boy of No. 7 Russell place, was struck by a shifting engine and killed at the Back Bay Station, while he lay stunned from a fall on the tracks. Young Toomey was sent on a hurried call to deliver a message to a person on the Twentieth Century Limited when it reached the Back Bay. He delivered the telegram, and in leaving the train was thrown upon the track and stunned.

LOST CHILD KEEPS POLICEMAN BUSY

Weeping Girl in Centre of Street with Bluecoat Attracts Attention of Crowd.

You don't see the sight every day—a big policeman holding hands with a wee little girl, who is crying as if her heart would break, and right in the middle of one of the busiest of Boston's streets—so maybe that's why several thousand folk stopped and looked on.

It happened at Tremont and Winter streets yesterday afternoon. The policeman was John F. McGillicuddy. The little girl was—well, when the policeman asked her name, she sobbed:

"Dor boo-hoo-o-boo-hoo-thy."

"That's it, Dorothy. And your last name?"

"Boo-hoo-oo-Kel-boo-hoo-hoo-sey."

Past the two rushed a seemingly unending line of autos, taxis and other wheeled things. On the sidewalk and near the subway entrance gathered the throngs.

"And where do you live?"

"Boo-hoo-B'ook-boo hoo-oooo-line."

"Now be brave, Dorothy and I'll look out for you."

While he talked with the child, McGillicuddy had his troubles. Being on crosswalk duty he had to keep up continuous signals to teams and motorists and pedestrians. Finally little Dorothy dried her tears and beamed happily while the crowd still stared. Then into the middle of the street rushed Harry S. Kelsey, a Boston business man, and claimed the girlie for his own. Dorothy had wandered away from the Kelsey automobile on Bromfield street.

CAVALRY WILL BE TOURNAMENT HOST

Big Gallery to Greet Troops Three Nights at the Park Riding School.

Everything looks like a big gallery when the three-nights military tournament of the First Squadron Cavalry, M. V. M., opens in the Park Riding School next Thursday night.

It isn't the first cavalry show ever held in this city but it will probably be the biggest and most elaborate since the Civil War, with all local men engaged.

There are four troops of cavalry in Massachusetts and they comprise the First Squadron. All four troops will be there, a total of 231 officers and men.

Cavalry men can put in a dandy show when they set out, especially when they are all in uniform, with sabres jangling and all that. The Mexican muss and the possibility that the squadron will be called to the border make the cavalry more interesting just now.

There is great rivalry between the four troops, too. Troop A (Captain John Kenny), for instance, is more familiarly known as the "Lancers." This is the body which has escorted Massachusetts Governors to Harvard class days for three-quarters of a century. Ex-Governor Guild was formerly a member of the Lancers and he will be there on Governor's night (Friday), when Governor Walsh has promised to be present.

Troop B, of which Captain Benjamin S. Blake is the head, is nicknamed the "Millionaires," because so many State street men are or have been in it.

Troop C of Cambridge (Captain Dana T. Gallup), is called the "Harvard Troop" on account of the percentage of college men in its ranks.

Troop D (Lieutenant H. Ferguson) is better known as the Roxbury Horse Guards. It dates from the Civil War, in which it acquired fame.

The program is:

Sabre drill by Troop D.

Equipment race, to get a horse saddled, bridled and mouted with all equipment first.

Musical ride by Troop A in full-dress uniform.

Tug-of-war between mounted men.

Indoor war game. First scene shows Troop B pitching camp. Scouts report approach of the enemy. Scene 2 shows Troop C (the enemy) attacking.

Potato race, mounted (men, not potatoes).

Rough-riding contest.

Police Hunt Missing $250 French Poodle

A French poodle dog worth $250 and owned, it is said, by a New York millionaire, escaped from a crate in which it was held a prisoner at the Wellesley station of the Boston & Albany road yesterday afternoon. The dog was shipped from New York to Hollis Hunnewell of Wellesley, who was to care for it for the Summer at the Hunnewell kennels. The station agent at Wellesley had the police send out a general alarm for the capture of the dog.

Pilgrimage for Ancients June 17

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery, Fusilier Veterans' Association, British Naval Military Veterans' Association and the National Lancers, all of Boston, will be the guests with twelve other famous independent military companies of the Amoskeag veterans at Manchester, N. H., June 17.

Other organizations that will be represented are: Worcester Continentals, Worcester, Mass.; Putnam Phalanx, Hartford, Ct.; Governor's Foot Guards, New Haven, Ct.; First Regiment Infantry, Providence, R. I.; Lexington Minute Men, Lexington, Mass.; Barnum Continentals, East Greenwich, R. I.; Infantry Battalion State Fencibles, Philadelphia; Old Guard, New York; Albany Burgess, Albany, N. Remarkably Effective Way To Remove Wrinkles And Other Beauty-Secrets

Every Woman Should Use These Wonderful Formulas Given by the American Dramatic Star, Valeska Suratt, Celebrated for Self-Made Beauty.

By Valeska Suratt.

SOME wag has asked why we have nothing but a pale moon at night when we need light most, and have the sun in the daytime when we don't need it at all. Similarly, youth endeavors to preserve its beauty at a time when beauty is not so necessary, while old age neglects to preserve it when it is very necessary. There is a reason. People have heretofore found the removal of wrinkles to be a huge task and a strain on patience. But the task has now been revolutionized, as any one will prove who will use for a short time the wrinkle remover given below. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and two ounces of eptol in half a pint of hot water. This will form an exquisite cream. Applied regularly and liberally, it will produce startling results in a short time, and deep lines, wrinkles and crow's feet will disappear, leaving the skin youthful and vigorous. Don't fail to begin using it today.

"It Takes Years from the Face in Quick Time."

ADELAIDE G.—Dandruff is one of the most fruitful causes of falling hair, and poor, thin, sickly-looking hair. Many have dandruff and do not realize it. It is not necessary to have dandruff "very bad" in order to cause hair trouble. A little dandruff is quite as injurious as a profuse amount of it. Dandruff and falling hair can be positively and quickly stopped and the hair forced to grow most luxuriantly by applying every day liberal quantities of an economical mixture of one ounce of beta-quinol, half a pint of alcohol and half a pint of water (or with a full pint of bay rum, if preferred). This makes a hair and scalp remedy of extraordinary power. It is a dandruff remover and hair grower in one, and will do more good to your hair and scalp than anything you have ever used. Every drug store can supply you with the beta-quinol.

MISS F. B. T.—Don't despair. A beautiful complexion can surely be acquired in a short time, by using a cream made by mixing two tablespoonfuls of glycerine in a half-pint of hot water, and while stirring, adding one ounce of sintone. When cooled it is ready to use. This makes every spot, freckle and blemish vanish in a short time, giving the skin a purity and a tint that is astonishing. There is no other cream known that has ever produced such results. Get the sintone at any drug store.

◆ ◆ ◆

MISS QUESTION—Neither I nor any one else can give an absolute assurance that the bust can be developed. However, in many cases, the results of the following formula have been very successful, and since it is perfectly safe, you should try it. Mix two ounces of rustone, and half a cup of sugar, in a pint of cold water. Dissolve thoroughly and of this take two teaspoonfuls after each meal and before retiring.

◆ ◆ ◆

JANET—For a head wash and unusually rich shampoo, you will revel in the use of eggol. Dissolve a teaspoonful of eggol in a half a cup of hot water, and shampoo in the ordinary way. It leaves the scalp cleaner and fresher than anything else can do. Also it acts very quickly, reduces labor, and makes the hair easy to do up. For summer use, it is a real luxury. It is very economical. You can get enough eggol at a moderate cost for twelve or more shampoos. It cleans more quickly and effectively than any soap or other shampoo known.

◆ ◆ ◆

FEMININE—For removing those superfluous hairs from the lip and the fuzz from the face, moisten them with simple sulfo solution, which you can procure at drug stores. This has the remarkable action of completely dissolving the hair, harmlessly and surely, instead of burning it off, as other hair removers do. It leaves no mark whatever.

◆ ◆ ◆

BEATRICE—You will go on for years as you are doing, using creams and tonics to get rid of pimples. Here is a sure and quick way. It is a blood cleanser of splendid power. Dissolve twelve ounces of sugar in a pint of water, and add one ounce of sarsene. Take three or four tablespoonfuls three or four times a day. Get the sarsene at the drug store, in the original package, by the ounce.

◆ ◆ ◆

MRS. N. O. R.—You can get rid of your blackheads in a few moments by rubbing them with a hot, wet sponge upon which has been sprinkled some neroxin. This can be secured at any drug store. It should be used regularly over the entire face, and then washed off.

◆ ◆ ◆

EVA C. M.—Sprinkle hydrolized talc on your arm-pits and you will find a wonderful relief from excessive perspiration. It can be used on any part of the body. For feet that perspire freely, [illegible] for destroying completely all offensive odor, including the odor of perspiration, it is unequalled by anything known. It will save your garments, too, from fading from perspiration, and will relieve you of the embarrassments and miseries which such perspiration causes.

PAWTUCKET LABOR TO CARRY WAR ON BOSSES TO STATE PROSECUTOR

Likely Governor Will Take a Hand to Rid City of Notorious "Ring

PAWTUCKET, May 16.—The fight to oust Pawtucket's "political pirates" from power has become a State issue.

Today President John H. Powers of the Pawtucket Central Labor Union, and other representatives of the 5,000 union men in this city, decided to lay their sensational charges against certain city officials before Attorney-General Herbert A. Rice in the State House at Providence. It is likely that Governor Pothier will be asked to take a hand in the efforts of decent citizens generally to free Pawtucket City Hall from control of the notorious "ring" and its bosses.

The Attorney-General when told of the plan of the labor leaders, had this to say.

"I should think that ought to be cleaned up. There have been for some time rumors of irregularities. Something ought to be done."

Specific accusations are to be drawn up and presented to the Attorney-General for rigorous action. This step is the result of the repeated insults which have greeted the labor leaders in their attempts to have the City Council take up charges against certain License Commissioners.

WHAT LABOR MEN CHARGE.

The complaint which will go to the State House will charge

Discrimination.

Performance of duties in a manner that "is a disgrace to the city and a dishonor to the commission."

Use of office to compel liquor dealers to support a particular political party.

Permitting saloons to be run on licenses granted to one person and operated by other persons.

Holding of licenses by "stool pigeons" and juggling of licenses with the consent of certain commissioners.

Behind the fight will be lined up not only the civic organizations of this city, but every local labor union and the united ranks of the labor organizations of the State.

So vital is the movement against ring rule that President John Golden of the United Textile Workers has taken a stand with the crusaders against corruption. He has written a letter to President Powers in which he says:

"Good luck to you in your effort to get a square deal for the thousands of union men in your city. If I can be of any assistance, call."

The labor leaders are determined to administer a lasting rebuke for the insults given at City Hall to organized labor. Ringing condemnation come from pulpit and public platform. Already in the face of the coming storm—certain to be disastrous to the "ring"—the grafters, big and little, are looking for a chance to get from under when the storm breaks. The "machine" is plainly weakening and the next step in its history will be a run to cover.

FEAR COURT PROBE.

A State investigation and probably court proceedings are the fear of the bosses. These are just the things the labor leaders say they will bring about. The slogan is, 'Down with the ring."

The unions will have the support of the State Branch, A. F. of L., and every union in Rhode Island will be asked to join with the local organization. Not only will the leaders push to the limit their demands for the removal of the License Commission, but they are bent on finding out why products made in Pawtucket by union employes and under union requirements cannot be sold here. Certain products are barred, among them the beer made by Michael Hand, the city's only brewer.

It is admitted that there is no hope now of any action by the city government. The complaint was taken to the commission itself. Result: A snub. Then it was taken to the Aldermen. Result again: Another snub. Then to Mayor Easterbrooks, who to the complete astonishment of the labor committee, indorsed the Aldermen's action, and followed this up with an admission that things were not as they should be in Pawtucket.

The whole matter was put up to Commissioner David W. Bullock by President Powers, who was accompanied by a Sunday AMERICAN reporter. The committee had accused "Boss" Keenan of dominating the commission.

SURPRISING ADMISSION.

Commissioner Bullock made the startling admission that he did not know the commission was issuing tavern licenses.

Bullock said that he had told Commissioner Burroughs that he (Burroughs) had made a mistake in not giving the committee of labor men a hearing.

"We come here to learn if the commission is subservient to the will of "Barney" Keenan," President Powers informed Bullock. "Now, Mr. Bullock, you are a deacon in the church and you are a lifelong resident of this city. With those two facts in mind, will you tell us if it was a square deal you gave us and if it was not a prearranged matter to snub us as you did.

Bullock: We talked the matter over in the side room and agreed to leave the answering of the questions to Thomas Briden, the chairman of the commission.

Powers. I thought as much. Did Keenan agree to the arrangement and did you know what was the nature of the [illegible]ness?

Bullock: Yes, everyone on the board knew. We knew it was something about rumsellers selling somebody's beer and we did not know why we should bother about it. I went to see Burroughs at his office the next day and told him I would not have done what he did. He said he was not going to be insulted and that the labor men were meddling in something which did not concern them.

THOUGHT OF RESIGNING.

Powers. Then you think we were treated fairly?

Bullock: I said I would not have done as Burroughs did. I DON'T ATTEND MANY MEETINGS and don't know much about it. I asked the members of the board if they knew of any objections to selling Hand's beer and they said they did not.

Powers. It is useless to argue further with you as either you know conditions that exist or you don't know something you ought to know. If you consider that these conditions tend to improve our city, then argument is useless.

Bullock. When I was on the board before I asked my pastor if I had better resign, and he said he thought the city needed men like me.

Powers. Don't you think it is your duty to know what is going on right in this commission while the citizens are up in arms in protest?

Bullock. Well, I've been in business for thirty years and everybody that works for me respects me. I am really surprised that the commission did not give you a hearing.

Reporter. Mr. Bullock, will you tell us who offered you your present job?

The commissioner smiled.

Reporter. Is there anything secret about it?

The commissioner smiled again. He did not answer the question.

PASTOR DEFENDS UNIONS.

Alderman Evans was asked about the action of his board when petitioned by the labor committee. Evans said the charges were of a serious nature and should be brought before a court.

"What was the matter with the charges?" he was asked.

Evans: It was no business of ours. It should be a matter for the courts. The charges were not properly drawn. Had they been drawn up properly they might have received consideration.

Rev. Edward F. Carrigan, pastor of St. Edward's Church, a champion for fair play and respect for the law, declared that the insults to the labor committee would not countenanced "in the backwoods."

"These men have rights, and why they should be subjected to such insults is more than I can understand. I see that the Mayor is credited with denouncing a citizen who in my mind would rank higher than a great many others. This citizen is a lesson in rugged honesty after which a great many persons might copy and be benefited, and themselves then be of benefit to the city."

Schoolhouse Site in Dorchester Wanted

The Schoolhouse Commission announced yesterday that it is seeking a lot of about 35,000 square feet, in the Oliver Wendell Holmes district, Dorchester, on which to build a school. The land purchase is to be advertised and the sale made from the landlord making the lowest offer. Sealed bids will be received until May 26, and will be opened at a public hearing June 2.

Honor Goes to Russian's Son

G. Shuman Eats "Anything"

GEDHALI SHUMAN, CHAMPION ROXBURY BABE

Gedhali Shuman, the twenty-nine-month-old son of a Russian Jew junk dealer, late yesterday was adjudged winner in the Child Welfare League's bronze medal "better baby" contest in the Ruggles street district.

Gedhali is the youngest of a family of four children. His parents live at No. 8 Haskins street, Roxbury, in a five-room tenement. His mother, who came to this country from Russia five years ago, says that her baby eats "anything." He is said to be very fond of pickled herring and unleavened bread.

The prize baby of Roxbury won over seventy-two other picked children, some of whom have parents able to supply them with every luxury. Five of the seventy-two scored ninety-nine points or better when first examined by the league's physicians. This necessitated a re-examination at the rooms of the Ruggles Street Neighborhood House yesterday, at which Gedhali finally was declared the winner.

HIS ONLY IMPERFECTION.

Gedhali is 32½ inches high. He weighs 31¼ pounds. The circumference of his head is 18 inches, of his chest 20 inches, and of his abdomen 19¾ inches. He has dark-brown eyes, light hair, and would be perfect, physically, were it not for a slight, an almost unnoticeable defect in the alignment of his little ears.

Dr. Edith Swift, the examining physician, later declared that Gedhali was as nearly perfect a specimen of babyhood as one could hope to find. The slight irregularity in the set of his ears, she said, did not in any way affect his health. She did not try to account for the fact that accompanied a diet of "anything" plus plenty of pickled herring and unleavened bread.

Edmund P. Warren, the twenty-nine-month-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Redmund E. Warren, of No. 10 Grovoner street, Jamaica Plain, was next highest to the winning baby on the final examination. The fact that he had cut only seventeen teeth, where he should have had twenty at his age, however, knocked several points off his record. A further loss because of enlarged tonsils, caused by a temporary cold, ran his score down to ninety-eight, and lost him the contest.

LOST THROUGH NERVES.

Edna Lois Stevens, the twenty-three-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Stevens of No. 1A Concord square, was another of the five babies reaching over ninety-nine on the first examination, but she fell off several points on the re-examination because of nervousness.

William Frederick Seward, thirty months old, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. Seward of No. 3 Westminster terrace, Roxbury, also lost five points on the second test because he chanced to be nervous, as did Andrew J. Moody, twenty-months old, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moody of No. 18 Burney street.

Minor physical defects in the first instance had lost each of these three children ten points out of a possible 1,000. Their nervousness on the second test did the rest.

M'ADOO AND HIS BRIDE WILL LIVE IN A "COTTAGE"

But It Will Be One of Those Inexpensive Houses Millionaires Build.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Now that the Wilson-McAdoo wedding is over, one great post-nuptial fact stands out prom[illegible]

The McA[illegible] going to live in a "cottage."

This has come as something of a shock to Washington society, which, when it heard the news, elevated its eyebrows and emitted a little murmur of well-bred surprise.

But it will be jarring to certain of a sentimental cast of mind to learn that the "cottage" of the McAdoos will be a cottage in name only.

It's something on the order of the "cottages at Newport," that Cohan used to sing about long years ago, and the cottage which the McAdoos are reported to be "taking," is situated at Chevy Chase, not far from the Chevy Chase Club, of which President Wilson is a member. The very fact that it is in Chevy Chase puts it in the Newport class, but the exact location of the cottage is a deep secret.

A cottage at Chevy Chase comes very near being the kind of house known in 1880 as a mansion. Chevy Chase is the most exclusive suburb of all the suburbs around the capital, and the man who buys a house there finds his deed quite full of clauses, stipulating everything from the price of the house he must build on the lot to the color and nationality of the man to whom he may sell his property, if ever he goes broke.

Therefore, it seems that the mere [illegible] the McAdoo cottage is to be in Chevy Chase kills all the roseate dreams of the sentimental minded, who probably conjured up dreams of a little bungalow where the red roses grow and the ashman never comes to the back gate.

There are several good reasons why the Secretary of the Treasury and his bride will not occupy the Chevy Chase cottage very long. In the first place the Secretary already has a big town house. It's a great, big, white stone pile, located on the "Avenue of the Presidents," the thoroughfare that be[illegible] too aristocratic to be longer called Sixteenth street. This town house is situated in the heart of the fashionable Scott Circle district and is a block off Massachusetts avenue, where are located some of the finest houses of the city.

Mother Saves Babes as Stove Explodes

Mrs. John Kovel, cooking on an oil stove in her apartment at No. 5 Morton street, grabbed her children and ran for the street when the stove exploded. The tenants of the building likewise fled, but the firemen extinguished the blaze with $100 loss.

Peace Sermons in Boston Pulpits Today

Peace sermons will be preached in many churches of Greater Boston today. Secretary Frederick Lynch of the Peace Commission of the Federal Council of Churches has issued a statement to the ministers of the various denominations, asking them to refer to the growth of peace movements in their pulpits.

The subjects of the sermons are.

"Peace," morning, Brookline Baptist.

"The Practical Effects of a Great Vision," morning, Clarendon Street Baptist.

"Can We Live at Peace," morning, Dudley Street Baptist.

"A Life Purpose and a World Program," morning, First Baptist.

"The Mighty Issue," morning, Free Baptist, Roxbury.

"Fearful War," evening, Union Square Baptist, Somerville.

"World Peace," morning, Dorchester Rumsey Congregational.

"The Hope of Humanity," morning, South Congregational.

"Peace and Peacemakers," morning, Roxbury Universalist.

NORDICA'S CAREER.

"The Career of Lillian Nordica, Opera Singer," will be treated this evening in a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Herbert S. Johnson in Warren Avenue Baptist Church. Lillian Nordica made her debut in Boston as a singer in the First Methodist Church, Temple street, this city.

"Demonstration Day" will be observed at Beacon Universalist Church, Brookline. Every one will be asked to see what they can do to promote the welfare of the church in their special community.

The nephew of Dean Stanley, A. S. Stanley, who has not been inside any church for twenty years, has been converted by the Rev. Austin T. Kempton of Cambridge Baptist Church by one of his dramatic sermons. He has already set to work and gathered together twenty-five persons in his neighborhood who have not been in church for years.

Dudley Street Baptist Sunday school has just rounded off ninety-five years of existence. Miss Jessie M. G. Wilkinson has not missed a session of the school in nineteen years.

BAPTIST CONVENTION.

More than five hundred Baptist preachers are expected in Boston in attendance at the Northern Baptist convention, to be held in Tremont Temple, June 17-25. Rev. A. E. Scover of Newton is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

Rev. John L. Campbell of Cambridge will preach the baccalaureate sermon before the commencement of the Gordon School, in Clarendon Street Baptist Church, at 10.30 a. m. today.

Rev. S. R. Maxwell will be installed minister of the Second Church, Boston, Wednesday, May 20, at 4 p. m. The service will take place at the First Church, Marlboro street.

A public memorial service for Rev. Benjamin F. McDaniel, "The Children's Preacher," will be held in the Barnard Memorial Chapel, Warrenton street, Boston, today, at 3 p. m. Rev. George F. Pratt of Christ Church, Dorchester, will deliver the address.

BREAKFAST IN CHURCH.

Follen Church, East Lexington, is making an experiment of serving breakfast to its members from 5.30 to 8 a. m. On May 1, it served nearly two hundred persons with that meal.

Pastor Russell will give his famous photo-drama of the Creation at the Boston Theatre today and next Sunday at 10 a. m., 3 and 7.30 p. m. It will then be withdrawn till another year.

Rev. George S. Fiske, who was largely instrumental in building out of his means St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Orient Heights, East Boston, is now ministering to his people in this new church.

Rev. Frederick B. Allen, who has been superintendent of the Episcopal city missions for twenty-five years, has now been made archdeacon of Boston. He was formerly a Congregational minister.

Siegel Fearful of Prejudice at Trial

Indicted Banker Will Return to New York on the Olympic.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Henry Siegel, the defunct department store owner and banker, now under indictment, today made it plain that he intends to return to this city on the steamer Olympic, which will sail from London next Wednesday, in a cable received by his attorneys, John B. Stanchfield and Abraham Levy.

Siegel declared in the cable that he will be unable to secure a fair trial in this country on account of the prejudice existing against him.

Eductors Will Meet at Harvard

The sessions of the American Institute of Instruction will be held at Harvard College July 1, 2 and 3. Dr. Franklin B. Dyer, superintendent of schools, will preside. The sessions will be opened by Mayor Good of Cambridge and Professor Henry H. Holmes of the educational department at Harvard. It is expected that thousands of New England school teachers will attend.

Anti-Mud Campaign Is on in Medford

"Get rid of the mud," is the demand of the residents of the Wellington section of Medford who will have a mass meeting Sunday at 3 p. m. at the home of Former Alderman Richard S. Phillips on Second street to protest against the condition of streets.

Everyone in Wellington is invited to join in a parade to City Hall at the next meeting of the city government, when demands will be made for better streets. The Wellington Improvement Asociation and the Wellington Woman's Club are leading the campaign.

President Harvey N. Atw[illegible] of the Improvement Association said that the public health demands that the streets be filled in.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Use It Like a Cold Cream and Dry Eczema Eruptions Right Up.

The moment you apply bold-sulphur to an itching or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a renowned dermatologist.

This remarkable sulphur made into a thick cream effects such prompt relief, even in aggravated Eczema, that it is a never-ending source of amazement to physicians.

For many years bold sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous eruptions by reason of its cooling, parasite-destroying properties, and nothing has ever been found to take its place in relieving irritable and inflammatory affections of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure, yet in every instance, it immediately subdues the itching irritation and heals the Eczema right up, and it is often years later before any eruption again manifests itself.

Any good pharmacist will supply an ounce of bold-sulphur cream, which should be applied to the affected parts like the ordinary cold creams. It isn't unpleasant, and the prompt relief afforded is very welcome, particularly when the Eczema is accompanied with torturous itching.—This is published for Walter Luther Dodge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

PASTOR PRAISES THE IMMIGRANTS

"I always feel like taking off my hat to the woman who can feed her husband and her hungry children on $15 a week or less," declared Rev. Dr. Edward Cummings, in his address before the New England Household Economic Association at its annual meeting in Simmons College.

Dr. Cummings was speaking of the problem of caring for the immigrant who was coming into this State at the rate of 150 a day. He alluded to the different languages spoken in Lawrence, saying that there "we have the French revolution over again" in the industrial situation, and referred to the schools in Boston, where twenty-two different nationalities are represented. He advocated the half day school for immigrants of sixteen to twenty-one years in many places.

"These immigrants come to our shores, and what impresses us most is the eagerness which the children show for education," he said. "Many homes lose control of their children, and the schools should co-operate with the homes. There is a tremendous waste among boys and girls of the immigrant population. To teach them, moving picture schools might be instituted.

"It is with the grandchildren of the immigrant that we get the best results. That generation is more Americanized. We want to teach them the use of the ballot in this democracy, for a ballot in the hands of the ignorant voter is death to democracy."

Petitions for Pardon for Boys Sentenced for Annie Mullins' Murder to Be Presented to Walsh Wednesday or Thursday

State Prison Chaplain Murphy Indicates His Belief in the Boys' Innocence by Announcing Readiness to PleadforThem

Petitions for the pardon of James Mantir and Peter C. Delorey for the alleged murder of Annie Mullins will be filed with Governor Walsh on Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

[illegible] Prison [illegible] portant witnesses for the young men at the pardon hearing and District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County, whose predecessor tried the case, will also be a witness.

District Attorney Corcoran will be [illegible] He will aid [illegible] for the two prisoners in [illegible]

[illegible] So do a number of other high officials in Middlesex County, including Captain Hurley and Lieutenant [illegible] of the Cambridge police, and every official in State Prison.

CHAPLAIN TO MAKE PLEA.

Prison Chaplain Murphy has been spiritual advisor to Mantir and Delorey since they went to the prison, five years ago, convicted of the Arlington murder.

In his capacity as clergyman Father Murphy decided yesterday to discuss the case [illegible] to admit that he would gladly go before the Governor and Council to support of the young men's plea for freedom. He feels this his duty.

Mantir, a Greek, is serving a life term as the alleged wielder of the blade that severed the girl's throat in Squire's Field on the night of March 27, 1908. Delorey got eighteen to twenty years as accessory. Mantir was eighteen and Delorey nineteen at the time. Mantir has since learned the English language. He knew little of it or of the customs of the country when arrested.

Should their plea succeed it would leave the Annie Mullins murder case as big a mystery as it was for a whole year before Mantir and Delorey were implicated by the sensational information tardily furnished by Delorey's aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Delorey of Billerica.

Mantir and Delorey's liberation would leave the mystery unsolved. It would compel the Middlesex authorities to renew the hunt for the real slayer six years after the killing.

A significant feature of the Mullins case is the [illegible] of Captain Hurley [illegible] of police inspector of Cambridge [illegible] Nellan during the past few weeks in connection with the matter, while Attorney John A. B. Moroney of No. [illegible] Wellington street, counsel for Mantir, and Attorney Frank McDermott, counsel for Delorey, are busy preparing their pardon petitions.

POINT AT OLD SUSPECT.

Captain Hurley and Lieutenant [illegible] have held frequent conferences with District Attorney Corcoran. They have interviewed witnesses. They are said to have marshalled a lot of damaging evidence which points to a suspect that was among the several interrogated by the Arlington and Cambridge police after the killing of Professor von Jagermann's house maid; but who, because of police confusion and politics, was allowed to go without having been properly examined.

"INNOCENT," SAYS HURLEY.

This man, in the opinion of Captain Hurley and Lieutenant Nellan and others, was the real slayer of Annie Mullins. Captain Hurley and Lieutenant Nellan have always held to this theory, even through the exciting period covering the arrest and trial of Mantir and Delorey when developments tended to alter public opinion. Captain Hurley weathered criticism and even ridicule, but never budged, and today public opinion in Middlesex County appears to be

Won't Send Rum to Winchester for Year

Judge Johnson in Woburn District Court ruled that any delivery of liquor in Winchester, a no-license town, was illegal. The case, which was closely watched by Boston wholesale liquor dealers, was that of Joseph Rosen, a driver for D. F. Flagg & Company of Backstone street. Rosen was accused of unlawfully keeping and exposing with intent to sell intoxicating liquor in Winchester. He was found guilty and the case was filed on condition that his employers would agree not to attempt to sell and deliver liquor in Winchester for a year.

Four Old Contracts Paid Up by Curley

Payments have been made by Mayor Curley on four contracts for work done in 1912 and 1913; $3,519 to James Doherty, for work done in Montabello road, Marmion street and Haverford street, first payment; $1,135 to William L. Doan for sewerage work in Center street; $236 to Timothy Coughlin for sewage work in Poplar street, West Roxbury, final payment, and $190,000 to W. S. Rendle Company for rebuilding the north end of the Chelsea bridge, final payment.

YOUNG WOMAN LEAPS OFF THE HARVARD BRIDGE

Scores Witness Attempt at Suicide and Tech Engineer's Daring Rescue.

WIFE WAS DESPONDENT

Scores of passers-by witnessed a spectacular attempt at suicide and a daring rescue, at the Cambridge end of Harvard Bridge yesterday.

Mrs. Eleanor Renborg, a young woman of twenty-three, who lives at No. 102 Austin street, had become despondent from domestic troubles. She had threatened suicide more than once. Early yesterday she left home at her usual hour [illegible] is employed in a Turkish bath establishment, but put a small purse in the hands of her sister with a little money, saying:

"Take care of my babies and look out for them if I don't come back."

LEAPS INTO RIVER.

The sister, in view of Mrs. Renborg's other suicide threats, was not alarmed. Mrs. Renborg walked to Harvard Bridge, stopped for a moment on the side nearest the site of the new Technology buildings, then suddenly climbed over the railing and leaped into the water.

Carl Bates, a Technology graduate and engineer at work on the new buildings, had noticed the woman's strange behavior. No sooner had she struck the water than he was sprinting to the river side. He sprang in after her, caught her head and was able to keep her above water until workmen came to his assistance.

CROWD SEES LEAP.

A crowd had gathered and saw the woman lifted from the water. On an ambulance she was sent to the Cambridge Relief Hospital. There it is said she will recover.

Mrs. Renborg is the wife of Gottfried Renborg. He is a roofer. They have two children—boys. The sons are boarded in Arlington at the mother's expense.

It was worry over her family affairs, Mrs. Renborg told the police, which prompted her attempt at suicide.

Stays in Cell Rather Than Give Her Name

Woman, Accused of Shoplifting, Has Plenty of Money.

Mystery surrounds the identity of a well-dressed and apparently well-educated woman who was arraigned in city police court under the name of Alice Gray on a charge of shoplifting.

The woman was arrested in a downtown department store on a charge of having stolen an inexpensive shirtwaist. She had plenty of money with her, but remained in a cell over night rather than have her identity known by giving bail. Judge Ely, in an effort to learn more about her, continued the case until Wednesday.

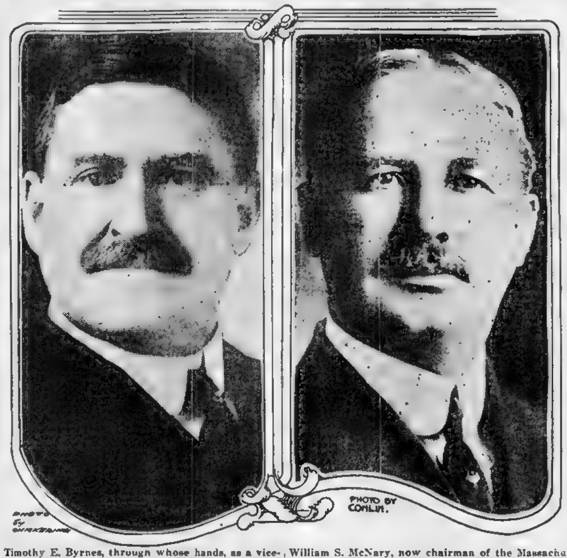
Curley to Cut All Registry Salaries

A reduction in all salaries in the Registry Department of 5 per cent is announced by Mayor Curley. Jeremiah J. Leary, acting assistant registrar, whose brother refused to vote for Mayor Curley when they were both in the Board of Aldermen and Alderman Curley needed that vote for chairman, was discharged. Leary's salary had recently been increased from $1,700 to $2,000. Darwin M. Cressey, messenger in the department, is exempted from the 5 per cent. cut. He is a Civil War veteran.

WHAT MELLEN WILL TELL

M'NARY, $1,000 "ABSORBER"

DOUGHBOY AND ABSORBER



Timothy E. Byrnes, through whose hands, as a vice-president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, probably $500,000 of New Haven money passed to the pockets of politicians and publicity promoters in New England.

William S. McNary, now chairman of the Massachusetts Harbor and Land Commission, who, according to the sworn testimony of Brynes at Washington, got some of the money; Byrnes isn't sure whether it was $1,000 or $1,500.

McNary, Byrnes says, was a New Haven "absorber." McNary wrote reports, Byrnes says, which were never printed. Byrnes doubts if he would do it over again. If he did he thinks he would "get it cheaper."

MRS. TINGLEY WILL FOUND A COLLEGE HERE

Leader of Theosophists to Follow Plan of Raja-Yoga at Point Loma, California.

Mrs. Katherine Tingley, head of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, will soon arrive in Boston from California, to perfect plans for the erection of an Eastern Raja-Yoga college. When here last Fall, Mrs. Tingley talked over the project with her advisers, but nothing definite was done to secure a piece of desirable property near Boston. Her coming visit is made to get definite information about property she hopes to secure.

As Boston and its suburbs are centres of educational institutions Mrs. Tingley thinks it fitting that one of her colleges should be located here.

Raja Yoga means "Royal [illegible]" and when applied to education [illegible] true education to be the [illegible]ance—of all the faculties, physical, mental and moral.

Mrs. Tingley thinks that Boston will welcome her plans of education which include new methods for the building of pure-minded [illegible]hood and womanhood, that [illegible] may be prepared to take an honorable, self-reliant position in [illegible]

The Boston Raja-Yoga School College will have teachers who [illegible] been trained at the Raja-Yoga College at Point Loma, California [illegible] will be two general departments [illegible] instruction.

The studies will range from elementary to those of [illegible] course and will include [illegible] ancient and modern [illegible] mathematics, physics, chemistry, [illegible] mechanical, electrical [illegible] engineering, the fine arts, industrial arts, practical [illegible] horticulture, domestic [illegible]

The practical side of education [illegible] be made apparent to the student [illegible] he will not be allowed to [illegible] his studies unless [illegible] that particular branch is [illegible] case he fails in one branch of [illegible] tion he will be tested in other [illegible] discover what he is most adapted for.

Mrs. Tingley will be in Boston [illegible] the course of a week and will make [illegible] headquarters at the Copley-Plaza.

Boylston Street Subway Ready Before Snow Flies

Work Being Rushed on Last Section of Work.

The Boylston street subway is rapidly nearing completion. From [illegible] Kenmore street terminal to Arlington street, the work of digging practically is finished. The last [illegible]tion, extending to Park street, is expected to be wound up in time to open the new subway to the public before snow flies again.

One of the most noticeable changes made by the Transit Commission in connection with this subway is the interior finish at the stations. The [illegible] of these stations is to be located [illegible] Copley square, with an entrance [illegible] Dartmouth street and another [illegible]trance opposite the Public Library. [illegible] other station will be at Massachusetts avenue and Newbury street. [illegible] both instances the stations are [illegible] finished in "Terrazzo," instead of the white glazed tiling used in the [illegible] tunnels and subways. This is [illegible] composite substance, made by mixing white cement and marble [illegible] together. The surface, when [illegible] by time, is polished and presents [illegible] appearance. [illegible] Terrazzo finish is being used for [illegible] side walls of both these stations [illegible] snow-white cement over [illegible]

Dynamiters Must Go to Prison June 6

Labor Leaders Ordered to Fort Leavenworth by U. S. Court.

CHICAGO, May 16.—All the labor leaders whose convictions as dynamiters were upheld by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, now out on bond, were ordered to begin serving their sentence in Fort Leavenworth Prison June 6, in a mandate issued late today by the court. Convictions of twenty-one of the dynamiters were upheld and six remanded for new trial.

Among the men who must serve time are Young and Higgins of Boston.

$900,000 Cotton Fire at Galveston

GALVESTON, Tex., May 16.—An unidentified man was killed by a falling wall at a fire which destroyed a warehouse of the Merchants and Planters Compress Company, near the waterfront today and caused $900,000 loss. Eleven thousand bales of cotton were badly damaged.

WILSON MAY TAKE HAND IN MELLEN PROBE

Rumors That He Will Stop New Haven Hearing and Call for Indictments.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The clash between Senator Folk of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Attorney General McReynolds took a bitter aspect today when it was learned that the Department of Justice has been sending out anonymous press reports attacking Folk and his work in the New Haven investigation.

The following is a sample statement which the Department of Justice is charged with circulating, and which it is understood will probably bring forth a congressional investigation [illegible] its source:

"[illegible]ials realize that former President Mellen's appearance on the stand gives him immunity from prosecution. Their hope now is that means can be found for preventing the calling of other high officials of the New Haven road. The examination of Mr. Mellen probably will not be completed for a week or more and officials are hopeful that it may be possible to head off the Folk inquiry by that time so as not to interfere with any other criminal actions that the Department of Justice had in mind.

"Officials are not disposed very seriously to regret the calling of Mr. Mellen to the stand, provided means can be found for withholding immunity from others who are scheduled to follow him."

Members of the Interstate Commerce Commission are up in arms over what has been done and it was freely intimated in the interstate building that severe measures will be brought to make the Attorney General cease his alleged attacks.

Hints of a carefully concealed plan to enmesh those responsible for the wreck of the New Haven, was given force today by rumors that the President may call a halt in the investigation with the completion of Mellen's testimony and a few connecting links and demand indictments based on that testimony, either through the Attorney General or his successor, if McReynolds refuses to proceed.

This view of the situation was given further credence today when it was learned that some of the biggest men from whom subpoenas have been issued will not be called to Washington Tuesday. It was also said that Mellen may not take the stand Tuesday, as was first thought, but that some of the minor witnesses will be called, merely to corroborate Mellen's already given testimony.

BYRNES QUOTES DEMAND FOR CASH

"Wanted Settlement," as He Was Going on State Board and Could Give No Further Service to the New Haven

A new word has just been coined at Washington to describe a kind of political-financial worker not quite so new.

William S. McNary, along in the early part of 1912, according to former Vice-President Timothy E. Byrnes of the New Haven Railroad, was a New Haven "absorber."

To "absorb," according to Dr. Noah Webster, is "to suck up; to drink or take in; to imbibe, as a sponge, or the lacteals of the body, or the roots of plants."

McNary, according to the sworn testimony of Dough-Boy Byrnes of the New Haven, absorbed a New Haven $1,000 or a New Haven $1,500; Byrnes isn't sure which.

And "absorbed" thus finds its way into the language, to be used in a new way. Hereafter we shall see and hear it often.

It was Lemuel Ely Quigg who described himself as an "accelerator of public opinion." So there must have been somebody to first use the word "lobbyist," and somebody else to describe an army of lobbyists as the "Black Horse Cavalry," or the "Third House."

The Sunday AMERICAN prints herewith, for the first time in any newspaper, ALL the testimony of former Vice-President Byrnes at Washington, before the Interstate Commerce Commission, touching on the "absorbing" activities of William S. McNary.

OF INTEREST TO ALL.

McNary, "New Haven absorber," happens at this time to be chairman of the Massachusetts Harbor and Land Commission and, ex-officio, one of the Directors of the Port of Boston. His former achievements as a New Haven "absorber," therefore, are of interest not only to Governor Walsh, to the Executive Council and to the Senate and House of Representatives, but to other citizens of Massachusetts.

The examination of Mr. Byrnes by Governor Folk is so interesting that any attempt to set it off by way of introduction would be to paint the lily. It is, however, the duty of the commentator to point out that, far from being "a clark in a furniture store," as Mr. Byrnes appears to have thought, Mr. McNary was the financial man of the firm of Drake & Hersey.

Introducing, then, William S. McNary, former Congressman, as a New Haven absorber. Mr. Byrnes is on the witness stand, under oath. Folk, chief counsel

"I HAVE BEEN THE GOAT LONG ENOUGH"

Former New Haven President to "Blow Off the Lid" Tuesday and Reveal Secrets of Manipulation That Wrecked Property

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The correspondent of the Boston AMERICAN here is in a position to state unqualifiedly that when Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven Railroad, is again called to the witness stand that he will lift the lid and uncover the entire rascality of the New Haven Railroad from the time he was made president until he retired.

"I will tell all I know," said Mr. Mellen before he left Washington to go to Stockbridge to get more papers that would throw light on the financial brigandage that ruined the New Haven Railroad. I will answer every question that I can answer, fully, truthfully and without regard to anybody's feelings. I have been the goat long enough. I am willing to assume my share of responsibility for the things that I did. I will not assume responsibility for the acts of other men; and the fact that some of these men are dead and some alive will not influence me in the slightest particular."

FOLK AFTER FACTS.

"And I will see to it that the lid is kept off long enough to make the exposure complete in every detail," said ex-Governor Folk, who is counsel to the investigating commission. "I want the facts. I want the truth. Mr. Mellen has promised to give us the facts and to give us the truth. I will spare nobody. If there are rascals in New Haven, if there are rascals in Wall Street, if there are rascals among the politicians in New York, who helped to loot the New Haven Railroad, I am going to drag them forth if they are alive, and I am going to expose their skeletons if they are dead."

"Can you indicate something as to the nature of Mellen's revelations?" was asked Mr. Folk.

"You may predict anything you please, and it will probably be correct," was his reply.

OFF COMES THE LID.

With the people of the United States for an audience, Charles Sanger Mellen will resume the witness stand on Tuesday to tell how the late J. Pierpont Morgan and his associates tried to turn the six New England States into a private empire.

Mr. Mellen will name as some of the confederates of J. P. Morgan, Mr. Lewis Cass Ledyard, Mr. Charles H. Pratt and Mr. William Rockefeller.

Mr. Mellen will tell "the whole story."

Ownership and control of the great public service enterprises of the [illegible] States—railroads, trolleys, steamships, gas companies, electric light companies and water powers—this was the program.

The former President of the New

MELLEN TO TELL OF PLANS OF MONEY KINGS TO RULE NEW ENGLAND THROUGH NEW HAVEN

Dreams of Empire by Morgan and Others That Finally Wrecked Big Railroad Properties

[illegible] is [illegible] Stockbridge today getting his private papers together. He will bring them back here. His story will [illegible] the nation.

Mr. Mellen will not testify that the late J. P. Morgan said to him: "Crush this man"; "buy that man"; "get control of that line of steamships or reduce it to junk"; "pour some money into that newspaper and make it friendly."

The former President of the New Haven will make it clear by his testimony that all Mr. Morgan and his associates wanted was "results."

EXPLOITING NEW ENGLAND.

Mr. Mellen was instructed from time to time regarding the Morgan plan. His orders were general. In his turn he sent the orders down the line and saw that everything wanted was delivered.

It will be for the public and the Interstate Commerce Commission to read between the lines. The facts will stand out so strongly that none [illegible] them.

[illegible] turned up today, during Mr. Mellen's absence from the city, of [illegible] that the courts themselves [illegible] have to be "reached" in the [illegible] of the New York, Westchester [illegible] Mellen will be asked [illegible]—if he knows—whether they were [illegible] how it was accomplished.

Mr. Mellen knows [illegible] about the general [illegible] of the Morgan railroad, [illegible] already testified that. [illegible] of the Westchester, he [illegible] into Police Inspector Byrnes.

Governor Folk knows tonight that [illegible] of the [illegible] demands made [illegible] holders of Westchester stock [illegible] a new franchise [illegible] the immediate stopping of [illegible] that [illegible] upheld the renewed [illegible]chise.

Authority to comply with most of these demands was lodged in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. This board in 1905-09 was made up of Mayor George B. McClellan, [illegible] Metz, John F. Ahern, Bird S. Coler, [illegible] Haffen, Joseph Purmel and George Cromwell.

GOT CONCESSIONS FIRST.

Morgan wanted this Westchester Railroad. [illegible]8,000 shares of New Haven were placed in Mellen's name, [illegible] order that Mellen might procure [illegible]. For these 5,000 shares of New Haven Mellen secured Westchester stock worth, he says, ten cents a pound. But not until "the people on the other side" made the thirteen franchise changes did Mellen let go of a single certificate.

Governor Folk has learned that of the 103,822 shares of "Westchester" no less than 103,502 were held by the [illegible] Trust Company. In 1906, Marsden J. Perry and Oakleigh Thorne—the same Oakleigh Thorne who has testified that he burned the books"—began the negotiations which eventually resulted in New Haven control.

He [illegible] added, perhaps, by the numerical evidence now in the hands of counsel for the Commerce Commission, Mr. Mellen will be asked again if he can furnish further details of how the New York "trick" was "turned" and who got the money.

Evidence will be brought out to show that after the great insurance scandals the greedy eyes of the Morgan crowd were turned toward the further exploitation of New England and the New Englanders.

The kings of finance had for years been making use of the money of the insurance companies. A comparatively unknown attorney, Charles E. Hughes by name, had put a stop to that and, by a grateful people, had been elected Governor of New York.

It was then that the Morgans turned towards New England.

Mr. Mellen will explain that, when he came to the New Haven from the Northern Pacific, in 1903, he found the New Haven—under directors owned or controlled by Morgan and Rockefeller—already embarked upon a career of monopoly.

SUPPRESSING COMPETITION.

The directors had called a meeting to consider what must be done by way of suppressing the competition of trolley lines.

A special committee had been named—Mr. Mellen will show—investigate and report.

Investigation indicated that the rapid development of electricity would soon enable the street railways and the interurbans to run big cars—trains, even—without dust or smoke, almost as rapidly, and much more comfortably and cheaply, than the railroad.

The way to suppress this competition, it was reported, was to get New Haven control of New Haven competitors.

Mr. Mellen's testimony will be that his directors started out to get the trolleys of Connecticut and that, to begin with, Mr. Edward D. Robbins, general counsel, was handed a New Haven $100,000 with which to "mould public opinion."

Legislators having been "appeased" and "convinced"—Mr. Mellen's testimony will show—and public opinion having finally been "moulded," a persuaded Legislature permitted the giant New Haven to gobble the Nutmeg State trolleys.

With Governor Folk shooting a question here and there, for the purpose of bringing out where the "orders" came from, and who gave them, Mr. Mellen will proceed to tell how the New Haven now secured a new Connecticut charter and how this wonderful charter gave it the right to conduct a banking business, own street railways, hold gas companies and take over power companies.

MORE SECURITIES.

But the new company—the New Haven with its new Connecticut charter—shortly found itself compelled to issue more and more securities. The monopolistic scheme of Morgan was already bearing fruit in big bills. Higher and higher climbed the capitalization of the New Haven. Up and up climbed the tax charges.

Smaller and smaller—Mr. Mellen will make plain—became the relation of the parent railroad to the conglomerate amount of property represented by gas, electric, trolley and water companies.

Just about now—Mr. Mellen will remind the Interstate Commerce Commission and the nation—came the exposure of insurance company financing, compelling the Morgan crowd to seek some other instrumentality through which to conduct its financial exploitations.

And the late Mr. Morgan—Mr. Mellen will say—promptly conceived the notion that what he had been attempting to do with some success through the control of insurance funds, and trust companies, he could do quite as easily with an absolute railroad monopoly in the territory covered by the six New England States.

Mr. Morgan saw the possibility—Mr. Mellen is going to say—of extorting from this territory revenues without limit.

And Mr. Morgan dreamed a dream of conquest much bigger even than this. What he could do in New England could later on be done as successfully in other sections. The New Haven was to be the Money King's experiment station.

New England, in other words, was to be bound and gagged—and vivisected—by Dr. Morgan.

TALKED WITH ASSOCIATES

He talked it over with his associates, and he and they—Morgan, Lewis Cass Ledyard, Charles M. Pratt and William Rockefeller—saw visions of the great empire they were going to rule through the ownership and control of its railroads, street railways, gas companies, electric light companies, power companies and steamship lines.

Charles S. Mellen, it is believed, performing for the public a service ever greater than the best he ever did for Morgan, will this week tell it all.

First the poor old New Haven Railroad, having now become the strange hybrid creature suggested by the newer Connecticut charter already referred to, acquired the right to do everything under the sun that can be done by a gas, electric, water power, steamship or railway company. To say nothing of banking and kindred business.

So much accomplished—as the testimony of Mr. Mellen will make plain—they began to play with the funds of New Haven stockholders as they had played with the funds of the insurance companies.

They had first to establish peace in Connecticut.

It was the peace of Warsaw, for public opposition to the schemes of Mellen—they were called the schemes of Mellen, but the design was Morgan's—had been stricken down.

NONE DARED OPPOSE.

There was desolation among the independent spirits of Connecticut. Everything in the State with power to control men and business was dominated by the New Haven. From butcher to baker, from lawyer to college president none dared raise his voice in opposition.

So Connecticut had been "taken care of" when, with peace at their rear, the army of Morgan—as Field Marshal Mellen will tell the story—moved now upon Rhode Island.

Before he leaves the witness stand, Mr. Mellen will tell how they bought Rhode Island [illegible] and how they financed them, [illegible] saddling them upon the New Haven Railroad at exorbitant figures.

At about this point in his narrative Mr. Mellen will tell of the Morgan war on Charles W. Morse, and of the Morgan declaration that before the war was over "Morse will be inside of Morgan or Morgan will be inside of Morse."

We shall hear this week from Mr. Mellen the inside story of the Morganized panic of 1907, created first for the purpose of enabling the Morganized Steel Trust to acquire an independent competitor but incidentally to "break" Charles W. Morse and the Morse line of steamships.

The war was over. Charles W. Morse was sent away. He was "inside of Morgan."

Mr. Mellen will now be ready to tell the story of the New Haven in Massachusetts.

They came in over the western boundary, as Mr Mellen will show, beginning with the acquisition of trolley lines in Berkshire and Worcester counties.

From first to last, however, Mr. Mellen will have no more amazing story to tell than the story of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine.

MILKING B. & M.

The public of New England will learn a lot before next Saturday night about the milking of the Boston & Maine by the Pullman Company and the American Express Company.

At that time, as Mr. Mellen's testimony will show, the American Express Company owned a large block of Boston & Maine stock. Not a majority interest, but an interest big enough to bring about a contract by which the Boston & Maine was bound to do the business of the American Express Company for only 35 per cent. of the gross receipts

Under this contract, the Interstate Commerce Commission has found, the loss to the Boston & Maine has amounted to $700,000 a year on the basis of other contracts between the American Express Company and railroads other than the B. & M.

The New Haven—as will be shown within a day or two by the testimony of Mellen—immediately entered into a deal with the American Express Company, by which the Express Company was to have a renewal of its rich contract with the Boston & Maine.

The price? An immediate exchange by the Express Company of its Boston & Maine stock for stock of the New Haven, "share for share."

This deal as consummated and the old despoiling contract was renewed for another twenty years. Poor old New Haven! Poor old Boston & Maine!

It is not Mr. Mellen's purpose to "name names." He is not gunning for the small fry, the men whom he got to "do things." Mr Mellen has a feeling that the Men Higher Up made him the New Haven goat. He will point out these Men Higher Up. He will make it plain that they knew what was going on, that they gave certain orders which could be carried out only as they WERE carried out.

And the incident of the Westchester shares, wherein $1,200,000 went to "men of influence" in exchange for stock worth ten cents a pound, is an illustration of the methods of the New Haven management from first to last.

No more dramatic story of the crimes of High Finance has ever been told in America than that which Charles S. Mellen will pour into the ears of the people of the United States this week from this city.

In the opinion of competent judges it can do no possible harm to business or the market. It may do lasting good, these judges say, to the investing public and the American people as a whole.

SOME OF THE NEW HAVEN INSIDERS

IN EUROPE

John Hall McKay, wanted by the Interstate Commerce Commission to explain why he expended large sums of money for dock facilities for the New Haven New York city. McKay is a brother of former Police Commissioner Douglas McKay. Stevenson Taylor, president of the S. Quintard Iron Works, wrote to President Mellen: "McKay suggests that his expenses toward getting the pier in New York city will be about $36,000."

IN BAD

Stephenson Taylor, president of the S. Quintard Iron Works, who wanted to know from Mr. Mellen if this $36,000 could be charged up by the S. Quintard Iron Works for "repairs on steamers" operated by the New Haven.

IN BOSTON

Former Congressman William S. McNary, chairman of the Massachusetts Harbor and Land Commission and ex-officio one of the directors of the port of Boston. Former Vice-President Byrnes says he paid McNary $1,000 or $1,500, at McNary's suggestion, for written reports to Mr. Byrnes, which were never published, on the proposed coming of the Grand Trunk Railway. McNary favored the coming of the Grand Trunk, which the New Haven opposed. He was not then in his present official position. Mr. Byrnes says McNary was a New Haven "absorber."

IN TREMONT STREET

The well-known free and untrammelled Boston Herald, in whose valuable bonds the New Haven interests have deposited at least $400,000.

IN RIGHT

James Buchanan Brady, "Diamond Jim," who served Mellen as a "dummy director" in the New England Investment Company, and once upon a time held a $7,500,000 contract from the New Haven for new cars. Loaned $100,000 in ten years on the I. O. U's of his friends. Tore them up, when he thought he was dying, because he "didn't want to annoy anybody." Keeps no books or personal accounts.

John L. Billard, Meriden (Ct.) coal dealer, who apparently cleaned up $2,743,000 by buying 109,800 shares of Boston & Maine from the New Haven at 125 and selling it back at 150. Borrowed $11,000,000 from the National City Bank of New York, leaving the Boston & Maine stock as security.

IN WRONG

The National City Bank aforesaid, which apparently violated an important provision of the United States banking act by thus loaning more than 10 per cent. of its capital stock and surplus to a single individual. Violations of the same provision by other national banks have resulted in the forfeiture of their charters. The National City is a "Morgan-Baker" institution.

Oakleigh Thorne, New York banker, who cannot for the life of him remember what became of a certain New Haven $1,032,127.07, and who, like John L. Billard, has "burned his books."

IN SOFT

James P. McDonald, a New York contractor with a contract to build part of the Westchester road, who received $375,000 for merely surrendering his contract.

IN BED

William Rockefeller, one of the directors, whose testimony would be welcome at Washington. Mr. Rockefeller is on Jekyl Island, off the coast of Georgia, dangerously ill, as he was when the Pujo committee wanted him. His physician says he cannot speak above a whisper. "When he attempts to talk, spasms come over him."

George Macculoch Miller, another aged director of the New Haven, physically and mentally unable to testify before the Interstate Commerce Commission. "Were he brought to Washington at this time," Mr. Miller's doctor says, "his appearance might result in fatal consequences to him."

for the Commerce Commission, asks the question. The examination proceeds:

Following is the transcript of the cross-examination of former Vice-President Timothy E. Byrnes of the New Haven by Chief Counsel Folk of the Interstate Commerce Commission with reference to Port Director William S. McNary:

Mr. Folk—Do you know W. S. McNary?

Mr. Byrnes—Yes.

Q.—Who is he? A.—He is now a member of the Dock Commission of Boston.

Q.—What was he in 1912? A.—He was a citizen of Boston. He was not engaged in any public service when he was helping me.

Q.—What work did he do for you. A.—Very largely in connection with the preparing for me of a number of statements in reference to the Grand Trunk situation, the building of the Grand Trunk into Boston, and he discussed with me very generally what he believed should be the attitude of the New Haven Company in reference to the building of the Grand Trunk, and prepared a number of statements.

Q.—Did he discuss that from the standpoint or from the standpoint of the public? A.—Mr McNary, I think, has always contended that his chief thought was the public interest.

Q.—Did you pay him anything for those thoughts? A.—I paid him. Yes. I suppose it would include both thoughts, the thoughts——

Q.—How much did you pay him for those thoughts? A.—You mean, how much did I pay him in all?

Mr. Folk—Yes, sir.

Mr. Byrnes—I cannot tell you. You have the vouchers.

Q.—Have you any independent recollection of how much you paid him for what he thought? A.—I imagine it was—it would be a mere guess on my part—but I imagine he must have received $1,000 or $1,500. I don't recall that. It covers quite a long period.

Q.—Did he work under your direction? A.—Yes.

Q.—Well, what did he do? A.—He made a very careful study of what he deemed would be the effect of the Grand Trunk building into Boston.

Q.—He is not a lawyer, is he? A.—I doubt if he has been admitted to the bar. I think he has taken the course in law. He is not practicing, but I think he has had training.

Q.—Why did you not go to all of those high-priced counsel that you are paying for their thoughts, instead of taking Mr. McNary's thoughts? A.—Well, I assume that is a hard question to answer with any satisfaction. Wherever I had a very difficult and complicated problem—I did not have very many counsel; you spoke about my high-priced counsel. As a matter of fact, we had very few counsel. We had, with the gentlemen you described yesterday, the Innes firm and the Wardwell firm, but outside of those we had very few counsel. Mr. Choate was not consulted in [illegible] of these matters.

Q.—Mr. Benton? A.—Mr. Benton was not consulted. He was in Europe practically all of the time in [illegible] the Winter of 1911 and 1912 he was consulted in the consideration of the proposed—now, if you will give me your attention, I want you to hear what I have to say, but——

Examiner Gartner—The witness is talking for the record and what you are saying is being taken down.

Mr. Byrnes—When I am asked a question I would like to be listened to when I make the reply.

Mr. Folk—Who is not listening?

Mr. Byrnes—Now, Mr. Benton has been in the service of the New Haven Company for a quarter of a century, I presume, and, from time to time has performed services. I think every year he has had some compensation from the company, but it has been chiefly in reference to grade crossing matters, while there has been some litigation also. Mr Benton was not consulted during the last two or three years on matters of this character except one matter, when we had under consideration the passage of the public utilities bill. That Winter Mr. Benton was in conference with the Governor and others, but he had practically nothing to do with the Grand Trunk situation.

Q.—Now, just what did Mr. McNary do for all this money you paid him? A.—I told you.

Q.—That he gave you some of his thoughts? A.—Well, he did more than that. Mr. McNary claimed to be an expert on transportation work. He was put by the Governor, afterwards, on the dock commission because he believed him to be a man who would bring ability to the consideration of these questions.

Q.—What was his experience in transportation? A.—Well, it was more in the way of public discussion. He had been making a series of speeches for years before various boards of trade and chambers of commerce and legislative committees and other places, upon transportation questions.

Q.—In whose behalf? A.—Usually in behalf of the public.

Q.—In behalf of the public? A.—Yes.

Q.—He has made a large number of speeches? A.—Yes.

Q.—Before chambers of commerce and legislative committees in behalf of the public? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know what subjects he discussed before these different bodies? A.—No, I never heard any of his speeches. He never made speeches for us before any of them.

PAID HIM $500 FOR SPECIAL SERVICES

Q.—Now, on February 26, 1904, you paid him $500 "for services on special railroad matter under the direction of Vice-President Byrnes?" A.—Yes.

Q.—Was that for some of his speeches? A.—No, that, as I say, was for work——

Q.—That was for some of his advice? A.—Yes; advice, and he prepared a great series of written reports.

Q.—Where are they? A.—They may be in the files. I don't know whether they are or not.

Q.—What titles do they have? A.—As to the effect of building the Grand Trunk into Boston and what he believed should be the attitude of the railroad with reference to the matter. I cannot begin to give you them in detail, only in the most general way, but they were voluminous.

Q.—What did he believe the attitude of the railroad should be? A.—He believed that the New Haven should co-operate with the Grand Trunk in coming into Boston.

Q.—Was there a bill pending in the Massachusetts Legislature at that time, seeking the Grand Trunk? A.—Yes.

Q.—Mr. McNary was in politics, though, was he not? A.—He had been. He had been for some years. He was formerly in Congress, and I think since he retired from Congress he has not——

Q.—He thought the Grand Trunk should come into Boston and the New Haven should not prevent it? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you paid him $1,000 for that? A.—No, not for that. I paid him $1,000 for what he did for me.

Q.—Including what you have stated? A.—Yes; all the things he did for me.

Q.—He published these pamphlets? A.—No; he did not publish them.

Q.—Well, he got up the pamphlets? A.—Yes, he got them up for me, for my information.

Q.—Showing that the New Haven ought not to object to the Grand Trunk coming into Boston? A.—That is one of the things.

Q.—The New Haven prevented the Grand Trunk from coming into Boston, did it not? A.—It did not.

Q.—It was indicted for preventing the Grand Trunk? A.—Yes; it was indicted, but the State of Massachusetts did pass an act permitting the Grand Trunk to come into Boston.

Q.—You mean to say you paid him $1,000 for services, including his endeavors and his writings, to show that the New Haven should not object to the Grand Trunk coming into Boston? A.—No; I did not say that. I did not say that, and I did not say anything that may be construed that way.

Q.—Did you not say he got up some pamphlets? A.—I did, and you asked me what was in them, and I said that one of the positions he took was he told me it would be a mistake for the New Haven to oppose the Grand Trunk coming into Boston.

Q.—What other position did he take? A.—He took the position that we should develop the steamship trade, that the New Haven should make investments in steamships, and co-operate to a greater extent than we had been co-operating with the authorities in bringing more ocean steamships to Boston.

Q.—There were many other men in Boston who had these same opinions? A.—Oh, yes.

Q.—And expressed them? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you pay them, too? A.—Oh, no; a great many of our——

Q.—Why should you pay Mr. McNary and not pay the others who had the same views? A.—He came to see me before he did any of this work. He said he believed he could be helpful in setting me right on a lot of these matters and would be willing to give his effort and consideration, and I said, "Go ahead and do it."

Mr. McNary sought you, then? A.—Yes.

Q.—You did not seek him? A.—He sought me.

Q.—Did he name his price? A.—No.

Q.—Who fixed the price? A.—He did, I think. I don't recall that. I think he told me what he ought to have, I don't recall.

Q.—He never rendered any bill? A.—Well, I don't remember.

Q.—For his services? A.—I presume he brought in a statement. I don't know, I don't know whether he did or not. It would not make any difference whether he did or not, if he came in and told me—

NOT SURE AS TO HOW PRICE WAS FIXED

Q.—How did you arrive at the price to pay him? A.—I presume he fixed that. I do not recall that I fixed it.

Q.—On February 26 you paid him $500, and on April 11, $500? A.—Yes.

Q.—Those are for the same services you described? A.—Yes; that is all the services he performed.

Q.—Did the New Haven Railroad take any action upon Mr. McNary's reports? A.—No, I think not.

Q.—Were his reports ever submitted to any other official of the New Haven road? A.—No.

Q.—As a matter of fact, these reports purported to come from a disinterested citizen, did they not? A.—Well, Mr. McNary has always claimed to be a disinterested citizen, yes.

Q.—The impression that was intended to be made on the public was that he was entirely disinterested in making these reports, when, as a matter of fact, he was being paid $1,000? A.—No.

Q.—By the New Haven Railroad? A.—Of course, there is no point to that, because the reports that he made were reports to me, that never were made public.

Q.—What did you pay him this $1,000 for? A.—Because I wanted the information and his confidence on these questions.

Q.—What did he do other than the things you have stated? A.—Nothing more than I have stated so far as I recall.

Q.—So you gave him $1,000 for expressing his views in writing? A.—Yes; I did.

Q.—And did you publish his views? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you print them? A.—No.

Q.—They were simply in typewritten form? A.—I think most of them were in manuscript form, handwriting.

Q.—None of them were ever published or printed? A.—None were ever published or printed or used in any way, so far as the public were concerned.

Q.—And for them you paid him $1,000? A.—I did. I may have paid him more than that. There may be other vouchers.

Q.—The fact that he held a prominent political position did not have anything to do with his being paid $1,000? A.—No, he did not hold a prominent political place. He was working at that time, I think, as a clerk in a furniture store. He had no political position at all. I think he was a salesman in a furniture store.

Q.—He was a salesman in a furniture store? A.—I think he was.

Q.—And you were giving a salesman in a furniture store $1,000 for his opinion as to whether the Grand Trunk should come into Boston, and you never even published his opinion? A.—Exactly, and the state of Massachusetts is paying him a very much greater sum now, for advising the state upon the same questions.

Q.—What other positions did he hold besides being a salesman in a furniture store? A.—He has always been a man of considerable public prominence. He has been to Congress, representing the Democratic party.

Q.—So he did have quite a prominent political place? A.—He has always been prominently before the public, but he was not at that time active politically.

Q.—He was what you would call a publicist? A.—That is a very good expression, yes sir.

Q.—Supposed to look at this question from the standpoint of the public? A.—I think he did to a very large degree, too.

Q.—You do not think that this $1,000 you paid him had any influence upon his opinion at all? A.—I do not think it changed him a particle.

Q.—Why did you pay it to him. Mr. McNary made before the public on the questions that were adverse to the railroad; but he was in favor of the Grand Trunk coming, and all of his speeches were against us.

Q.—You paid him $1,000 for making speeches against you? A.—No, sir, I did not.

Q.—Did he stop making speeches against you when you paid him $1,000? A.—No, he was talking on these questions at the time, as you claim to be here, representing the public interest and being absolutely fair to everybody.

Q.—Did he stop talking when you paid him the $1,000? A.—No he did not.

Q.—He continued to talk? A.—Yes sir.

Q.—The same way? A.—Yes.

Q.—Against the railroad? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you stop paying him? A.—I finally did: Yes.

Q.—Because why—because he did not stop talking? A.—No. He was appointed to a public body. When he was appointed on the——

Q.—It is not your custom to pay men to talk against the railroads? A.—No, that had no connection with my employment. I did not pay him to talk. He was only giving me a very little of his time. I did not employ him to talk. I never saw a speech that he made.

Q.—Can you mention anything else that he did other than to give his views concerning the Grand Trunk entering Boston? A.—Practically everything he did was on that line.

Q.—Do you think it was worth $1,000? A.—Well, if I had to do it over again I would probably have got it cheaper.

Q.—You would not do it at all, would you? A.—Well, I doubt if I would; but at that time it seemed to me a wise thing. There was certainly nothing illegitimate about it.

Q.—Was he saying anything that would injure the railroad in any way? A.—Yes; sometimes I would have liked to batted him over the head, if I had a chance, about some of the things he said.

Q.—Was that before you gave him the money? A.—Before and after, both.

Examiner Gartner You say both? then? A.—Because of speeches which A.—He has always been adverse to the railroads

M'NARY KNEW THE THOUGHTS OF OTHERS

Examiner Gartner: "Was it not rather the consideration of keeping this man quiet that caused you to employ him?" A.—No, not at all. I never thought of such a thing.

Examiner Gartner: "He did not suggest that to you when he came to you seeking a position?" A.—No. He was very close in touch with the Grand Trunk situation. I think he knew—I think he was familiar with the activities of the other people, and he knew the whole drift of the question there, and when he first came to me there was no suggestion of any consideration at all. There was not anything said about it.

Q.—You did not even think he was going to ask you for any, did you? A.—I am frank to say I did not.

Q.—Did you express surprise when he asked you for money? A.—No, I have got over that.

Q.—I thought you said you did not expect him to ask? A.—Expectation and surprise do not necessarily go together. I did not expect in the beginning there would be any compensation in the matter. He came to see me very often. Finally he said, "I THINK I SHOULD HAVE SOME MONEY."

Q.—What did you say to that? A.—From the appearance of the vouchers, I said, "You can have it."

Q.—You said it more than once but he still kept talking about you? A.—Yes, and he is yet.

Q.—Were his speeches as bold against you and as strong against you after he got the money as before? A.—Yes, it did not change him a particle.

Q.—Did you protest to him, after paying him, that he ought not to express these views? A.—No, I did not. I did not employ him in any way to influence his opinion on public matters.

Q.—I thought you said you did employ him because of his views in connection with the Grand Trunk? A.—Yes, but I did not employ him at all with reference to his public views. I did not have anything to do with that.

Q.—Were not those views public? A.—Which?

Q.—With reference to the Grand Trunk? A.—He had made a great many speeches on the subject—

Q. But his views with reference to the Grand Trunk were public, were they not? A.—Not those that he gave me.

Q.—Did he give you views contrary to those he expressed publicly? A.—No, I do not recall now just what he did say.

Q.—You say you did not give him this money for any of his public views? A.—No.

Q.—And yet you say you gave him money for his opinion or views on the Grand Trunk matter? A.—No, I said I gave him no money in connection with his expression of his public views. In other words I was not trying to control him.

Q.—In other words, you mean there was no express agreement as to what he should say after he got the money? A.—I did not know what he was going to say.

Q.—As a matter of fact, he continued to talk in the same way and you soon stopped paying him money? A.—No, that had no connection with it. I stopped paying him money, when he came in to see me, and he said, "I am going to be appointed on the Dock Commission, and of course I can perform no further services for you. I would like a settlement." And I settled with him and that was the end of it.

Q.—The only service he performed for you was the expression of his views in connection with the Grand Trunk? A.—In a general way I had a great many discussions with him. He used to come to see me a great deal about the situation.

Q.—And for that you paid him $1,000. A.—Yes, that is what the vouchers show. I did, yes sir. I am surprised it is not more.

Q.—He was a publicist? A.—Yes

A.—And expressed his views from the standpoint of the public? A.—Yes.

Q.—You are surprised it is not more? A.—I am astonished.

Q.—Why are you surprised it is not more? A.—Well, from the amount of time you were spending there, I supposed you had a half a dozen vouchers for that amount.

Q.—Do you think his services were worth more? A.—No, I don't think his services were worth more.

Q.—As a matter of fact did you not pay him more? A.—I don't recall whether I did or not. The vouchers will be the best evidence. When you bear in mind, Governor, that I passed upon vouchers every day by the dozen or hundreds, sometimes two or three hundred at a time——

Q.—Of this character? A.—Oh no; not of that character, but for all the various departments and you ask me to tell you the particulars and details in reference to some transaction of that kind. It is impossible for any man to do it.

Q.—This work was done under your special direction? A.—I have told you in a general way what Mr McNary did for me. Now whether I paid him $1,000 or $1,500, I don't know. I don't recall.

Q.—All that I understand he did for you was to express his views in connection with the Grand Trunk matter? A.—And the general development of the traffic possibilities of Boston. He believed there should be a belt line around the city, that the New Haven should do the work, that it should be connected with all the piers——

A.—And get a franchise? A.—Yes, and the Governor, I think, at that time was advocating it. There was no question about getting a franchise if the railroad was willing to undertake it. We did not want to undertake it, because the suggestion was that the railroad should absorb the charges for transportation on the belt line as a part of its through rate, and of course that never appealed to us, because it would be taking on a large capital charge without any return, except what we would make in the form of an increased business.

Q.—Did you pay any other publicist? A.—I don't recall. If you will ask me about the particular individual, I think perhaps I can tell you. I do not recall any others.

Examiner Gartner—How did this furniture clerk get to be an expert on these matters? A.—Well, Mr. Examiner, it is a very difficult question to answer to tell how many of the men who today are advising how to run the railroads and telling how the railroads should be run and financed, got their experience. I am not able to say. There are so many thousands of men today who know more about that than the men who have spent their lives in it, that it is a mystery. I am unable to say how a man gets his equipment. Here is a man who is quite an active, virile man. He is a good public talker. He has been in Congress and has been in the Legislature, and he proceeds to a discussion of these questions with all the courage and confidence of a man who has spent his entire life in the business and he evidently has made a very good and favorable impression on the public, because the Governor of the State of Massachusetts has placed him upon one of the most important boards engaged in the consideration of these questions.

Examiner Gartner—He had been in politics considerable before he was a furniture clerk? A.—O, yes, he is a very able man, capable, energetic and enterprising.

Mr. Folk—And public spirited? A.—Public spirited? Yes, he really is.

Q.—The New Haven spirit? A.—No, he is not the New Haven spirit. He never has been a New Haven man in any sense of the word.

Q.—A New Haven absorber? A.—

Q.—That is what I mean.

Absorber? Well, he absorbed that $1,000, evidently. (Laughter.)

ARCHIE THOMAS SENDS THANKS TO AMERICAN

Boy Leper on Penikese Island Grateful for Fund of Readers to Buy Wireless Outfit.

INSPECTOR PAYS HIM VISIT

Heartfelt thanks to the AMERICAN and all the good people of New England for what they have done and are doing for me. I cannot thank them enough.

This is the first message from Archie Thomas, the "boy leper" on Penikese Island, to a world of well-wishers from whom he has been cut off to spend a life in exile.

The gratitude Archie sends out to his friends is his return for the wireless-sending apparatus he is soon to get—the result of the efforts of the Sunday AMERICAN in raising a fund for Archie's benefit. The message came to Boston, not via wireless, but through Harry R. Cheetham, the Marconi inspector for Boston.

TALKS WITH LEPER.

Inspector Cheetham spent most of the day at the leper colony yesterday, taking the trip to look things over and see just what Archie needs in the line of wireless equipment. He talked with the unfortunate youth for two hours or more, told him how the AMERICAN'S fund had reached the sum of $390 and how probably within a couple of weeks the lad would get his sending mechanism.

"Words cannot express how grateful I am to all my kind friends who have done so much for me," Archie told Inspector Cheetham. "It fills my heart. How good everybody has been to me. Certainly I shall never forget it."

With Archie was his mother, who gave up her home to be near her son on the little island fourteen miles across Buzzard's Bay from New Bedford. She is a wonderful woman and the joy of her life is to be near Archie and look after his wants.

MOTHER IS GRATEFUL.

"Like Archie I too want to thank our kind friends" she said. "We can't thank them enough. We appreciate everything that has been done and feel deeply grateful to the Boston AMERICAN and everybody who has helped."

Inspector Cheetham went down to New Bedford, Friday night. Yesterday early he went over to Penikese. There he was welcomed by Dr. Frank H. Parker, the superintendent. The two went over the island, crossed the "dead line"—a barbed wire fence which shuts the lepers off from the rest of the island—and entered the little four-room cottage occupied by Archie and his mother.

"We found mother and son as cheerful as could be," said Inspector Cheetham last night. "They laughed and talked with us. It ought to be said that the mother is most assuredly not an exile on the island. She can come and go as she likes. It was through the efforts of Dr. Parker that she was permitted to be with her son and it is only just to say that the superintendent has seen to it that Archie has everything he needs. Everything is done by Dr. Parker to make life enjoyable for the lad.

BOY NO LONGER.

"Archie is a boy no longer. He is twenty-four—a grown-up young man. In their home is the wireless room with its receiving apparatus. Just outside is a 35-foot pole with three wires. There are two bedrooms.

"Archie has a pet parrot which says 'Archie' very plainly. He has a work bench and seems to be inventive.

"Every morning Archie takes press reports sent out from the Marconi station at Cap May, N. J. I think his wireless work generally is wonderful with the apparatus he has.

"He told me the wireless work kept him occupied. His mother added that Archie arose early in the morning, worked at his instrument and kept working until late in the night or after midnight taking reports from land stations and passing ships.

"I expect to make a second trip the latter part of this week."

The sending apparatus Archie is to get through the fund raised by his friends will be the best instrument to be had. Its value will be more than five times the amount of the fund, something which is possible only through the generosity of Henry C. Gawler, the United States government expert in charge of the enforcement of wireless regulations in New England. Mr. Gawler has worked untiringly to get Archie the most up-to-date of wireless apparatus.

Harvard "Gold Coaster" from Central America Is Centre of Tango Mystery

WHO IS MYSTERIOUS "MONSIEUR X" THE ONE-STEP EXPERT? ★ ★ HE WILL BE PARTNER OF CAROLYN MAYWOOD, LASSELL GRADUATE ★ ★ FEATURES GALORE FOR BIG DANCEFEST THIS WEEK IN BOSTON

Many Society Girls Will Take Part in Amateur Contest of Modern Dances

Some of the girls who will demonstrate various new dance steps and compete for the prizes. Many surprises in the big Boston dancefest this week, and a fine display of beauty and grace are promised.

All Sorts of Steps from Hesitation to Oriental Dagger Whirl.

Tango mysteries?

Why, sure—several of them. For instance, there's the mystery of the "Monsieur X.," who is going to one-step it with Miss Carolyn Maywood of Brookline, a Lasell graduate, during the amateur dancefest at the Boston Theatre this week.

Now who is this young "Mr. X."?

They're keeping his name a secret—that is, he is. All that is thus far given out is that he is a "Gold Coaster" at Harvard, a junior. They add that he comes from Central America, if that helps any in the identification.

Miss Maywood is nineteen, having just celebrated her birthday a week ago. She has studied at the exclusive Misses Ely's School in New York and studied the modern dances under John Jarrott and his former partner, Miss Joan Sawyer.

But Miss Maywood and her unknown partner will be only two of hundreds of Greater Boston amateurs who will take part in the week's carnival of up-to-date dancing. Yes, there will be hundreds and they will compete for solid silver trophies under the auspices of the Boston Dancing Teachers' Club. This is an organization of 200 teachers and the contestants will come from the 20,000 young men and girls—older folks too—who are numbered among the teachers' pupils.

There will be features galore. As an example, there will be Mrs. James C. White, a beautiful young woman who is to appear in full evening dress—trousers, stiff white shirt and all. She will dance the maxixe and the furlana with Miss Louise Ordway, a society girl who will make her appearance as Mrs. White's partner. Miss Ordway recently appeared at the Junior Charity Club show and the Hillside Home Charity bazaar at the Copley-Plaza.

Miss Ora Dell, of the Back Bay, will dance with Walter Demelman, a Harvard student, and son of a banker living in Brookline. Miss Dell greatly resembles Mrs. Vernon Castle, facially and in form, and her friends think she and her partner will prove one of the sensations of the week.

Of equal interest will be the appearance of Miss Mabel Macomber, of Newton, who will present what she calls an oriental dagger dance. She is eighteen years old, an orphan, and lives with her brother-in-law and sister. She is an extremely pretty girl and was born deaf and dumb. A remarkable feature of her performance is that, although she cannot hear a sound of the music, she yet appears to feel the rhythm, and dances in perfect time to the harmony. In fact as she expresses it herself, "I feel every note as if it were a pulse in my body." Miss Macomber's friends are very much interested in her public debut.

Clayton Robinson and Stella Best are to do an eccentric dance which they call "The Scarecrow and the Coon," Miss Best playing, or rather dancing, the latter role. Miss Best is seventeen years old and lives in Dorchester, while Mr. Robinson is assistant manager of an automobile concern and lives in Medford.

Margaret McDonough is another Boston girl who will shine this week. She is seventeen years old. Her specialty will be ballet dancing, and in one number she appears draped in an American flag.

Amelia Burnham and Le Roy Young will introduce a dance called "Un Peu d'Amour." Miss Burnham, whose home is in Dorchester, is regarded as one of the best amateur dancers in New England. She appeared at the Blue Garden Masque at Newport last season and attracted wide attention. Mr. Young, who will dance with her this week, is receiving teller of the American Trust Company.

It would be idle to enumerate all those who are to participate, as the number is to be so largely increased as they get more confidence, but already assurances that they will appear have been received from such well-known young people as Louis Murray, Miss Dorothy Secro, Paul Shedd, Miss Branda Cleveland, Samuel Gibson, Miss Madeline Reed, Miss Mary Stewart, Miss Harriet Brown, Miss Evelyn Dornbach, Miss Adelaide Ottie, Edwin Bruce, Miss Marion Gibbey, Michael Kenneally, William Chamberlain, Miss Pauline Chamberlain, A. A. Schulman, Miss Louise Dixon, Faunce Whitcomb, Miss Alice Mannix and Miss Bertha Godfrey.

It's Settled! 'Little Drops of Water' from Pen of Mrs. Carney

Former Boston School Teacher Wrote the Famous Poem.

The big controversy over "Little Things" seems settled at last. This poem was written in 1845.

"Little Things" is the name of the set of verses more popularly known as "Little drops of water," from the opening line.

A letter from Mrs. Mary C. McIntire, made public yesterday, gives the author as Mrs. Thomas J. (Julia A.) Carney, formerly a Boston school teacher.

Mrs. McIntyre's letter reads as follows:

> "Little drops of water" was written by my aunt, Mrs. Thomas J. Carney, wife of a Universalist minister. She was Julia A. Fletcher, born in Lancaster, Mass., in 1824. When a young woman, she taught in a public school in Boston and it was then that she wrote the poem for her scholars, never thinking it would become such a familiar poem to everybody. She married Rev. Thomas J. Carney and went to Illinois to live, and died in Galesburg, in 1908, leaving two sons, who are lawyers of that city—Hon. Fletcher Carney, who has been mayor of Galesburg, and James W. Carney, now president of the Knox County Bar Association.
>
> Mrs. Carney wrote many poems and short stories for magazines, also books for Sunday school libraries. Another of her poems, beginning "Speak gently to the erring," has been very favorably received
>
> (MRS.) MARY C. McINTIRE.

The celebrated litte poem runs thus:

Little drops of water,
  Little grains of sand,
Make the mighty ocean
  And the pleasant land.

So the little moments,
  Humble though they be,
Make the mighty ages
  Of eternity.

So our little errors
  Lead the soul away
From the path of virtue,
  Far in sin to stray.

Little deeds of kindness,
  Little words of love,
Help to make earth happy
  Like the heaven above.

Capture Two in Pickpocket Raid

Another arrest in the crusade made by the police of Station 5 to rid the corner of Dover and Washington streets from pickpockets was made yesterday, when Detective Sergeant Irwin caught John J. Lane on a charge of having picked the pocket of John D. Strachan of Dorchester.

JUSTIN M'CARTHY SEES NEW BOSTON

Playwright on Visit Surprised at Many Changes in City; Silent on Politics.

A visitor of distinction to Boston these days is Justin Huntly McCarthy, son of the late Justin McCarthy, who was Parnell's great lieutenant in the Irish home rule movement twenty-five years ago.

Mr. Huntly McCarthy is here to witness the production of his play "Charlemagne," which Sothern is putting on at the Shubert tomorrow night.

To an AMERICAN reporter, Mr. McCarthy said last night at the Hotel Bellevue that in his drive about Boston yesterday he was surprised at the great changes he noticed in the city and its suburbs since he was here twelve years ago. He referred to the improvements as really the making of a new city. He was also here with his father when he was a small boy, so he knows Boston well.

Although, twenty years ago his father held high place in the leadership of the Irish Home Rule party, and Justin Huntly McCarthy was himself in Parliament as a Home Rule member for Newry, in Ulster, he has retired entirely from public or political life and devotes all his time to literature. When in England he lives some months in London and the rest of the year at Stratford-on-Avon.

"Being out of politics so long now," said Mr. McCarthy, "I feel I have no right to say anything publicly on political affairs. My visit is solely to see Mr. Sothern in "Charlemagne." I sail on the twenty-sixth. I have already seen two plays here, "Under Cover" and "Within the Law," both I believe are a credit to the American stage."

Recipes for Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

Of all the beauty recipes that have been published, here are two that have successfully stood the test of time:

Wrinkle Remover—One ounce powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. It brings instantaneous results.

Face Peeler—Pure mercolized wax, applied at night like cold cream, only not rubbed in; wash off in the morning. It causes the worn-out scarf skin to come off in tiny, almost invisible flakes, a little each day, until the fresh young under-skin is wholly in evidence. The beautiful rose-tinted complexion thus obtained is not to be compared with one made over with cosmetics. If the old skin is marred with freckles, pimples or other blemishes, these defects are of course discarded with the skin itself. An ounce of the wax is sufficient in any case.

The ingredients named are inexpensive and can be found in any drugstore.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Educating the Public

Many people have said to me "Why do you [illegible] so much about household pests? Why don't you simply say that your powders will kill them, and let the public find out [illegible] experience?"

My reply has invariably been that I am seeking to [illegible] a public service as well as to sell my pest exterminators.

From the large correspondence which I have [illegible] with people all over the country, asking for advice as to the best method to exterminate the different pests of the household, I believe that my labor has not been in vain.

Although many people were familiar, in a general way, with the habits of these torments, I believe that I have awakened them to a true realizing sense of their dangerous character. All my knowledge of how to cope with them has been gained through years of fighting them and I am willing that the public shall have the benefit of what I know.

There are many simple preparations which can be used with fair results in exterminating rats, mice, bedbugs, cockroaches, moths, etc., but I have found from experience that the formulas which I use under the name of "Martin's Pest Exterminators" give the most satisfactory and lasting results.

I [illegible] to hear a lady say recently: "We [illegible] your roach powders in the apartment [illegible] where I reside, and we have not been [illegible] with roaches since."

All [illegible] such statements as these constantly [illegible] it is always pleasant to know that [illegible] are giving satisfaction.

"Martin's Pest Exterminators" are sold at all drug and department stores for 50c and $1. [illegible] extra by mail. Eleven different powders [illegible] name kind when ordering.

CHILD PRODIGIES ARE SCORED BY DOCTOR EVANS

Andover Professor Says Our Methods of Education Are Making Prigs.

SAYS, 'LET THE INFANT PLAY'

Professor Daniel Evans of Andover Theological Seminary, in an address to the Twentieth Century Club, scored infant prodigies, after H. Addington Bruce of Cambridge had referred to methods of education as put forth by Dr. Boris Sidis and Dr. A. A. Berle, as ideal.

"We are making intellectual prigs, [illegible] democratic citizens, by our methods of education and trying to force it into the minds of the youngest children," said Dr. Evans.

"There is nothing that appeals to me more than to allow the modern infant child a natural development before we begin to practice upon it. Our theories about methods in modern education. Let the child play with other children in the neighborhood instead of pinning it down to theories which are ill advised and merely speculative in their nature."

NEED OF MANIPULATION.

Professor Bruce advocated education of the child in its home when it was a year old.

"There is need of parent manipulation of the material in a child before it is sent to school," he said. "There is the importance of those first two years when habits are formed and the early home influence is felt. We can see how the training put forth by Dr. Sidis, Dr. Berle and others has demonstrated the fact that before the child is sent to school its education has begun in its infant years in the home."

Professor Bruce cited the case of Helen Keller, whose memory of her infant years before illness made her deaf, dumb and blind, was recalled afterwards by vibration through tunes played before her.

"Children are suggestible and the parents ought to train this suggestibility," he continued. "I put stress upon the efforts of parents to educate the child before sending it to school."

PARENTS' INFLUENCE.

Professor Colin A. Scott of the Normal School urged the importance of parents' control in their children's education.

"I would like to tell of the sub-conscious mind of a child," he said. "When I was in Chicago, a teacher came to me with a boy who was believed to have done some petty stealing. I asked the teacher to bring the boy to my laboratory, where, in the course of a conversation, he was hypnotized.

"In that hypnotic state I talked to the boy and told him to bring back the cap which did not belong to him. He suddenly opened his eyes, went out of the room and brought back the cap."

"This sub-conscious mind in early childhood is susceptible of influences. I believe Professor Bruce is right in pleading for the education of infants in their own homes by the parents."

Professor S. S. Curry of the School of Expression jumped up and said, with enthusiasm.

"I believe the education begins when you see an infant kicking on his back. Let him kick. Let him roll over on the floor. He's learning something."

Fourth Anniversary of Llewsac Lodge

Bedford Home to Celebrate with Open House.

Llewsac Lodge, the Bedford rest and industrial home of the Frances E. Willard Settlement, will celebrate its fourth anniversary Saturday, May 23, by keeping open house, to which all its friends are invited. All parts of the plant will be open for inspection and in the afternoon an entertainment will be given by the children from the Boston settlement, consisting of folk dancing, kitchen gardening, club drills, etc.

If pleasant, this will be given on the lawn in front of the new Nellie E. Cook dormitory, which was dedicated last Fall. Barges will meet all trains and trolleys from either direction at the Bedford station, carrying passengers for a small sum. A light lunch will be served.

To Discuss Teaching of Jewish Children

Conference Tomorrow at the Temple Ohabei Shalom.

A conference for the purpose of discussing ways and means for the extension of Jewish education among the Hebrew children of Greater Boston will be held tomorrow evening at the Temple Ohabei Shalom, Union Park street.

The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Boston Society for the Extension of Jewish Education. Prominent speakers will address the gathering. Among them are the Rev. Dr. M. M. Eichler, Rabbi Harry Levi of the Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, and S. Z. Prokesh.

Correct Way to Treat Skin Diseases

Both air and water seem to have a bad effect upon skin diseases like Eczema, of which there are many forms. Keeping out the water and air is the first thing to do. By using Cadum, the well-known remedy for skin diseases, air and water are excluded, because Cadum contains petrolatum and white wax, and these form a tight covering over the sore places upon the skin. Cadum also contains oil of cade, which has been successfully used many years by the medical profession in the treatment of Eczema and other skin trouble. If your skin is inflamed, irritated or sore, get a 10c box of Cadum of your druggist and try it. The 25c size box contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size and is cheaper to buy.

When Ragtime Does Damage—Radcliffe Composer's Views

MISS CATHERINE BEATLEY

Miss Catherine Beatley Tells How Syncopated Strains First Appear.

Ragtime is all right so long as it keeps to its place, BUT—

Too much of the "Tickle the piano, professor, and let's have some of the good old rag stuff" is bound to be injurious—as harmful as eating unwholesome food.

So thinks Miss Catherine Beatley, Radcliffe senior, president of the Radcliffe Musical Club and prize composer at the college. Miss Beatley's songs have already won her fame and she knows music from A to Z. Here's what she thinks about ragtime:

"Ragtime, while its use is to be deplored, fills a place in dances and musical comedies. The fact that ragtime is sung so much in college doesn't indicate a degraded taste, for I know that many of the students hear the good music as well. They go to the opera and the symphony concerts quite regularly."

OF MUSICAL FAMILY.

Miss Beatley comes of a musical family. Her father conducts an orchestra of fifty boys at the English High School. There is a Beatley family orchestra in which one of Miss Beatley's brothers plays 'cello, she plays violin, another brother and sister play other instruments and the father plays the flute.

Not long ago one of Miss Beatley's songs took a $25 prize offered at Radcliffe. The girl composer says there's almost no use writing the music for a song unless one has the words first.

"You must have the words first," she says. "You carry them around in your memory and then the tune is likely to come to you any hour of the day or night. And you have to take it when it comes. Afterward you can sit down and work it out in detail. That is the hardest part. It takes hours and hours of thinking and changing and arranging before you get the whole song to suit you.

WORDS COME FIRST.

"It's the words that make you think of the tune. At least that's always been my experience.

"And I have found, too, that to sit down with the words and try to think of a tune to go with them is much harder than just waiting for the main idea to flash upon you like an inspiration when and where it will. After that you can take that main idea and sit down to write the rest of the music. The main idea usually comes easy, but the trouble comes in getting things to go before and after it; and sometimes the parts of the song that you work the hardest over never suit you quite as well as the strain that came without effort. Yet hours of work seem to be absolutely necessary to make a song satisfactory, and I have found that the things that people really like are the things that have taken a great deal of revision."

Famous Artists in Jewish Folk Songs

A concert of Jewish folk music will be given at Ford Hall today by Mr. and Mrs. Medvedieff, tenor and soprano, and B. Korpovsky, baritone, all of St. Petersburg, where they are members of the Society for the Promotion of Jewish Music.

Mr. Medvedieff is the son of the famous Russian tenor and is himself a [illegible] musician, having appeared in grand opera in Russia. His wife is also an experienced grand opera singer. Korpovsky was won over to the cause of Jewish music by his colleagues after a successful career in the opera houses of Europe.

NEW BUNKER HILL BATTLE AT HAND

Charlestown Aroused at Cutting of 17th Celebration Appropriations by Mayor.

Charlestown, particularly the youth of Charlestown, is up in arms and what promises to be a modern battle on Bunker Hill is scheduled unless Mayor Curley can be prevailed upon to restore the appropriation for a morning celebration.

Mayor Curley cut the money usually appropriated for a morning feature parade. Talk of massing the young men and boys of the district and marching to City Hall in protest has been going around the section, but such action will be deferred until a committee of the Bunker Hill Day Feature Association meets the Mayor and discusses the situation with him.

The association in a recent meeting appointed its president, Former Representative Francis M. Ducey, James J. Mullen, Jr., the assistant clerk of the Charlestown Police Court, and Howard V. Redgate as a committee to wait upon the Mayor.

Several novel ideas are being talked over and if the money is given, a splendid parade will be assured.

Meanwhile the youngsters await the action of the committee and if the money is refused, a public meeting of protest is liable to be held.

Daughters of New Hampshire Meet

Miss Jessie M. Fisher Is Elected President.

The annual breakfast of the New Hampshire Daughters Club was held at the Hotel Vendome yesterday. The dining room was effectively decorated in sweet peas, and eighty-five members attended. After the breakfast the following addressed the assembly. Mrs. Eleanor Porter, Mrs. Abba Gould Woolson, Mrs. Sarah E. Adlin, Mrs. A. Kilburn, Mrs. H. Bush, Mrs. Frank Washburn, Mrs. Clara Fowler.

These officers were elected: President, Miss Jessie M. Fisher; first vice-president, Mrs. Sarah E. Odlin; second vice-president, Mrs. Nellie Terhune; third vice-president, Mrs. Lilia C. Riley; recording secretary, Mrs. Florence W. Cadieu; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Grace E. Glasier; treasurer, Mrs. Lura F. Mad; assistant treasurer, Miss Mabel A. Johnson; auditor, Mrs. Mary F. HUNT MISSING ROCKLAND MAN

W. E. Perry Cashed Check for $462 Before He Disappeared on Thursday.

ROCKLAND, May 16.—A state-wide search is being made for William E. Perry who disappeared Thursday.

The case is one of the most baffling in many years of the missing disappearances from Rockland. Chief of Police Michael E. Stewart has notified the police of the surrounding territories to be on the lookout for him.

Mr. Perry runs a barber shop. Thursday he went to Abington, telling his employees that he would be back on the next car. He went to the Abington National Bank and cashed a check for $462.

He is twenty-eight years old. He came here six years ago from Boston. He is five feet tall, of dark complexion, wears eye glasses and has black hair. When last seen he wore a brown suit, dark overcoat and a light cap.

209 Divorce Cases for Judge Wait

Suffolk Court for Marital Troubles Opens Tomorrow.

Judge Wait will preside in the Suffolk divorce session for the May term, which begins tomorrow morning. It is expected that the present term will last for six or seven weeks, disposing of the May and June cases. The May docket has 209 cases, of which 134 are uncontested and 75 contested. No June list has yet been prepared.

Freeman O. Emerson, former member of the Legislature, is seeking a divorce from his wife, Grace L. Emerson on the ground of desertion. This will be one of the first cases tried. They were married January 1, 1885, and lived together in Boston until January 1, 1907, when, after twenty-two years of married life, he charges that she deserted him and refused to live with him again. A copy of the libel was served on her at Amesbury, where she has been living. She is not contesting the suit.

Boy Knocked Down: Chauffeur Is Held

Melville Hughes, 25, of No. 6 Grosvenor road, Brookline, who, it is alleged, was driving the automobile that struck and knocked down eight-year-old John Buckley on Malden street, was held in $500 bonds for a hearing May 22. Hughes was charged with assault and battery and operating an automobile so as to endanger the lives of the public.

CHIEF SUSPENDED BY QUINCY MAYOR

Appointment of Members of Fire Department Brings About Another Chapter.

Mayor John L. Miller of Quincy, who has caused more suspensions of city employees than any other chief executive in its history, added another to his list yesterday when he announced that Chief of the Fire Department, Faxon Billings had been relieved from duty without pay until next Wednesday. This was done because Chief Billings on Friday announced the appointment of three new members to the fire department.

The Mayor and Chief had a consultation, Friday morning, regarding the matter. Following the consultation, Chief Billings declared that the Mayor had sanctioned the appointments and forthwith he named Edward O'Neil, Myles Cremmer and Murdock McDonald as the new members of the department.

Yesterday, the Mayor became indignant and when asked about the appointment of the men denied that he had authorized it.

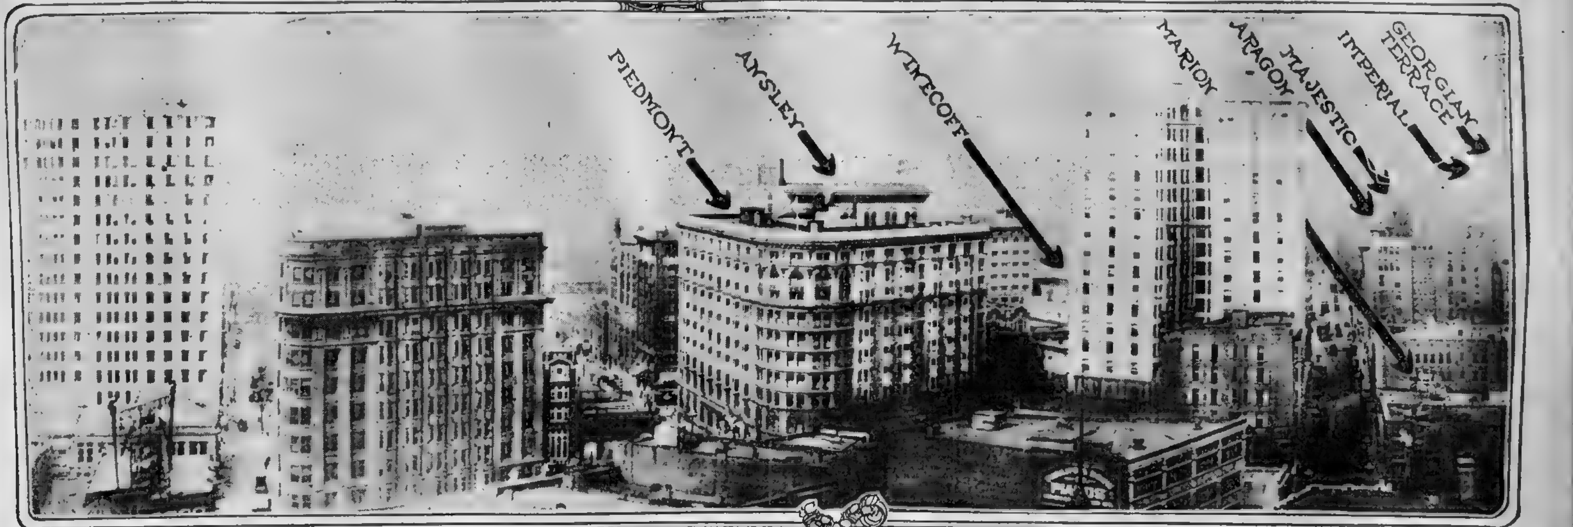
SHRINERS HAIL ATLANTA AS GREATEST CONVENTION CITY IN THE NATION

40,000 VISITORS ARE QUARTERED, FEASTED AND GIVEN THE TIME OF THEIR LIVES



Birdseye view of a part of the business section of Atlanta, the pre-eminent convention city of the South, with arrows pointing to eight of her forty hotels where 40,000 Shriners were accommodated.

ATLANTA, May 16.—Congratulations are being showered on Atlanta for its success in entertaining the 40,000 visitors who came to attend the Imperial Council of Shriners and the incidental festivities last week. This great convention body was quartered, feasted, transported and given a royal good time without a serious hitch or mishap.

Men who have seen Shrine meetings and lesser conventions, year after year, say that Atlanta's hospitality and efficiency has made of the last week a period for the most pleasant recollections of their careers. They say, too, that Atlanta is one of the greatest convention cities of the nation, certainly the pre-eminent convention city of the South.

"I was certain that Atlanta was capable of caring for the Shrine meeting," said Will W. Irwin of Wheeling, W. Va., imperial potentate until Wednesday, "but the thing has been done so smoothly, with so little effort, so evidently as a part of the city's well-ordered existence, that I was amazed at the resources of this Southern capital."

Dr. Frederick R. Smith of Damascus Temple, Rochester, who succeeded Irwin as imperial potentate, has seen a round score of Shrine meetings, but none more pleasingly arranged and executed in every detail than that at Atlanta. He was sincere in his congratulations and thanks just before he left the city.

"I shall always consider my stay in Atlanta as one of the most enjoyable occasions of my life," he said. "Atlanta certainly has made good with the Shrine world, and with everybody who knows what a good convention should be."

Most remarkable feature of all, and the one which excited the most favorable comment, was the fact that the restaurants, at any hour of the day or night, always were equal to meet the wants of the emergency crowd. Atlanta had providently and correctly laid its plans for the Shrine visitors, and had left no phase of the affair uncared for. Restaurant men, maintaining their regular scale of prices, assumed the added responsibility of caring for the 40,000 visitors almost without effort.

There was never a complaint of lack of sleeping accommodations. The city's forty commodious hotels, several of the largest of which have been opened within the last few months, met a great bulk of the demand for quarters. These facilities were supplemented by the special car lodging of many of the visitors, and by the hospitality of private homes, which were literally turned over to the Shriners and their trains.

HER ABILITY PROVED.

With it all, Atlanta's ability to handle effectively any convention body in the world was proved last week. Furthermore, Atlanta's hospitable desire to enter into the spirit of the visitors' moods, and to help them toward the fullest enjoyment of the occasion, was plain. Never was there a city more gracious and adaptable.

"We have learned something of royal entertainment," said George L. Brown, past imperial potentate. Mr. Brown is a member of Ismailia Temple, Buffalo, which is working hard for the meeting in 1916. "If Buffalo is successful in this fight, you may be sure that this affair in Atlanta will be before our eyes all the time, and that Atlanta will be one of our first models and exemplars."

The great army of visitors reached Atlanta without hitch, without the slightest delay or inconvenience in railroad schedules. Atlanta's easy accessibility, over the most luxurious routes of travel by sea and land, excited wide and favorable comment. It was this feature that most delighted Robert D. Williams, potentate of Mecca Temple, New York, and all the nobles from the East. It was possible for them to travel by superb steamships to Norfolk, Savannah and Charleston, thence by rail to the Shrine city.

"The trip to Atlanta was glorious," said Potentate Williams, "being made smoothly, easily and without a minute's delay. All the arrangements for taking care of the Nobles who traveled in special cars was superb. The Railroad [illegible] seemed designed for the comfortable parking of cars beyond [illegible] traffic."

Thus it come about that Atlanta became known over the nation by the title it has justly won, "The Railroad Centre of the South." Thirteen railroads radiate from Atlanta, and there are 136 passenger trains in and out of the city daily. The schedules are overnight to Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville, St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, Mobile, Pensacola, Jacksonville, Savannah, Charleston, Norfolk and Washington. This proved to the visitors that Atlanta was located ideally as a convention city.

But no advantage overshadowed, in the eyes of the visitors, nor the local population either, the beautiful weather that was vouchsafed the city during Shriner week. It was the ordinary May weather of Atlanta, and yet the visitors gasped and marveled at the serenity and purity of the skies, and at the continual breeze that tempered the warmth of the Summer sun.

Algeria Temple sent a patrol and a picturesque company of representatives to Atlanta, who came out of a snowstorm. They were grateful, as were all the visitors from the North and West, for the balmy breath of Atlanta's weather.

PRAISES THE WEATHER.

"I don't believe any other city in the world could give us such bright, unclouded weather without giving also much suffering and hardship from the heat," declared Hary Cunningham, of Algeria Temple, Helena, Mont., the morning after the two great street parades, in which the Algeria Patrol, in heavy spats, marched for miles under a sun, the like of which they do not know on their native heath.

"It is the altitude that does it, of course, bringing cool breezes and clarity of atmosphere along with the bright sun."

Atlanta's superb climate was one of its greatest assets in the argument before the Dallas council last year, with a mean temperature of 60.9 degrees, and a May average of 70 degrees for thirty-four years. There is not a wide variation throughout the year, so that the city is one for consideration whatever the season of a visit or a convention.

GALLIVAN FATHERS BILL FOR NATIONAL SANATORIA FOR TUBERCULOSIS SUFFERERS

Founder of Rutland Institution Plans Similar Retreats in Different Sections of the Country.

By ANDREW R. KELLEY.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—National sanatoria for the relief and prevention of tuberculosis is the institution which Congressman Gallivan of Massachusetts proposes to write upon the statute books before he completes his service in Washington.

Gallivan is the father of the State Institution for Tuberculosis located at Rutland, Mass., and he has never lost his interest in measures which would operate for the relief and the prevention of the dread white plague.

As a preliminary to the introduction of a bill providing for government sanatoria, the Twelfth District Congressman has had a lengthy interview with Surgeon-General Rupert Blue of the government health service and the federal official heartily approves of his plan.

The Gallivan bill which will be introduced before the close of the present session will provide for four government sanatoria.

These will be located in different parts of the country and will be available for all citizens who cannot be accommodated at local institutions or those who desire the government treatment.

Because of the action of the Democratic caucus and the legislative program as outlined there is no chance of such a bill being considered at the present session, but it will be considered at the next regular session and it will be passed if hard work and the beneficial results from scientific treatment which Gallivan is prepared to cite carry conviction.

"This is one measure that I propose to devote my most sincere efforts to have placed on the statute books," says the Congressman, "and I am confident of success."

Senators Get Flood of Free Tolls Essays.

The AMERICAN contest for the best essays on the question of free tolls for American coastwise ships using the Panama Canal has brought a flood of letters into the offices of Senators Weeks and Lodge.

The senior Senator does not believe in free tolls for American ships, but he has read every letter which has been submitted to him in the contest and is impressed by the interest and the knowledge of the situation which the writers display in a much mooted international question.

Senator Weeks has not yet made up his mind on the matter and reads every letter submitted. Both of the Senators express pleasure at observing the interest in a contest of this kind, which develops a desire to become familiar with public questions and incidentally with what the government is doing.

Compensation Bill Delay Disappoints.

The fact that the Democratic caucus of the House did not schedule the workingmen's compensation bill for consideration during the present session of Congress has caused considerable disappointment among government employees.

This bill reported favorably by the House judiciary committee upon the motion of Congressman Mitchell of Marlboro provides for retirement and compensation at the rate of sixty-five per cent of their annual salary for every government employee injured in the service or suffering an occupational disease of a permanent nature contracted in actual service.

Over 400,000 employees will benefit by the passage of this bill which is sure to be acted upon at the next session of the present Congress.

Weeks Opposed to Giving Away Seeds.

By a vote of 33 to 21 the Senate has decided to do away with the free distribution of government seeds. There is no indication that the House of Representatives will ratify this decision as represented by their conferees on the agricultural bill.

It costs $257,000 to make the annual distribution and the allotment to each member is 22,000 packages.

Senator Weeks is strongly opposed to the continuance of the distribution, contending that "there is no more reason why we should furnish seeds to high schools or to the children attending high schools than there is for our furnishing pianos to high schools or furnishing any other instruments or any other methods of development which are used in the high schools of the country.

The sixteen members of the House from Massachusetts are unanimous in dissenting from the views of the junior Senator.

Chance for Doherty if McReynolds Goes.

Attorney-General McReynolds' efforts to prevent the interrogation of former President Mellen of the New Haven railroad has brought down a storm of criticism on his head.

In the controversy with chief counsel Folk of the Interstate Commerce Commission it is admitted that McReynolds was beaten and the demands for his resignation from the cabinet are more than local.

Massachusetts Democrats are watching the controversy with considerable interest since the elevation of Folk to the cabinet, as suggested, would put Philip J. Doherty, the right hand man of the chief counsel, in line for promotion and Doherty is a life-long Democrat, a Boston man with exceptional qualifications for the position through his experience as an assistant counsel for the commission.

The cross-examination of Mellen has brought out some interesting and intimate facts with regard to the New Haven, and Folk promises more interesting revelations during the hearing of the coming week.

* * *

More than 25,000 telegrams and petitions on the prohibition amendment have been received by the Massachusetts members in Congress, and the flood of communications pro and con on this question has reached such proportions that the judiciary committee has been virtually snowed under.

The Democratic caucus has decided not to consider the matter at the present session. The telegraph companies have waxed fat on the lively campaign for and against the bill, which has developed, and they will have further cause for glee in the fact that the question will be even more acute at the short session of the present Congress opening next December.

Somerville to Get Better Car Service

Schedule Calls for More Adequate Transportation.

In compliance with recommendations made by the special committee of the Somerville Board of Aldermen, the Boston Elevated Railway Company will increase the car service on Broadway during rush hours and on Somerville avenue during normal hours beginning tomorrow.

The schedule for the Clarendon Hill-Sullivan Square line will be increased so that trips will be run on Broadway at intervals of four minutes during the rush hour periods. Between Powder House Square and Sullivan Square cars will be operated at intervals of about one and one-half minutes during rush hours.

The service on Somerville avenue will be increased during normal hours providing a twelve-minute service, instead of the present fifteen minute service.

Beginning tomorrow, all Broadway Extension cars will be operated both inbound and outbound via Dover street and Washington street. This diversion is made necessary by the rebuilding of Broadway Extension Bridge, and the cars will be operated as over the temporary route until the work on the bridge is finished. It is expected that this operation will continue for about three months.

Jewish Women Plan Summer Campaign

The philanthropic and social service work of the Boston Council of Jewish Women will continue throughout the Summer. Confirmation exercises of the Council's Religious Schools will take place this afternoon in the Temple Ohabei Shalom on Union Park street, under the direction of the Rev. Dr. M. M. Eichler and Rabbi Harry Levi of the Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue. Sixty-one children will be confirmed.

Peace meetings will be held today in the synagogues and temples of Greater Boston.

Waltham Antler Club Has Dance

At the dancing party of the Waltham Antler Club, the chairman of the committee of arangements, Mrs. Annie Harding McGuire, was presented a bunch of American beauty roses. Mrs. McGuire was assisted by the following committee: Mrs. Vandermace, Mrs. Sewal, Mrs. Wentworth, Mrs. Stegelburg, Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Zirhut, Mrs. Pepper, Mrs. Bold and Mrs. Ree.

Discuss Montessori Method at Meeting

The annual meeting of the New England Montessori Association was held in Perkins Hall yesterday afternoon. The ordinary business of the association was followed by a relation of experiences in using the Montessori method.

LIBRARY EXILES OLD DAMOXENUS

Somerville Trustees Don't Want Marble Statue in New $125,000 Building.

"What shall we do with Damoxenus?" is a question that agitates Mayor Cliff and other Somerville officials.

When Literature and Art moved their home from the old Somerville Public Library to the new $125,000 library, the marble statue of Damoxenus, presented to the Somerville Library in 1907 by Eben D. Jordan of Boston, was left behind. The statue is a copy in marble of one of the famous twin gladiators by Canova, which are treasured in the Vatican gallery at Rome. It weighs 1,100 pounds and is mounted on a pedestal of Italian marble. At a cost of about $3,500 it was brought to this country by Mr. Jordan, who presented it to the public library trustees. It was accepted, and for nearly seven years occupied the conspicuous position in the bay window of the delivery room of the library, fronting the desk with its back to the bay window.

The statue is in the nude and it represents the gladiator in the act of delivering the blow at his antagonist, Creugas, which pierced his side and enabled the cruel victor to pull out the entrails. The populace, so the legend goes, although admiring the strength that made possible such a blow, placed the laurel on the brow of the dying Cruegas and exiled Damoxenus. The mythological fate still pursues him.

While the lines of the statue and the cruel, determined expression of the face are the highest form of art, Drew B. Hall, the present public librarian, does not consider the study a pleasant one, and the figure not desirable. The library trustees don't want it.

It was offered to the high school and refused by Headmaster John. A. Avery. Neither is it wanted in the office of the Overseers of the Poor.

It has been suggested that the statue would not be out of place in the new hall of Willard C. Kinsley Post, 139, G. A. R. "Whatever else Damoxenus may have been he was a fighter, a doughty warrior, and so are the Boys of '61," says Mayor Cliff.

LAY CORNERSTONE OF CHAPEL MAY 31

The laying of the cornerstone for the chapel in the cemetery of the Congregation Mishkan Tefila on Centre street, West Roxbury, will take place on Sunday, May 31.

Work on the foundation has already begun. Rabbi Herman H. Rubenovitts will deliver the oration, and rabbis of the other synagogues of Greater Boston will assist in the ceremony. Noted speakers will deliver addresses and a special musical program will be given by cantors, assisted by a choir.

The building, which will be constructed of West Roxbury brown granite, quarried not far from the cemetery, is of mingled Oriental and Gothic architecture, with large leaded glass art windows, upon which the Jewish leaders, Moses, Joshua and the Prophets, will be portrayed. The noble women of Israel will also be remembered in memorial windows to Miriam, Deborah, Ruth and Esther.

The building committee includes Henry I. Bornstein, chairman; Joseph Sonnabend, Simon Finberg, Elias J. Brody, ex-Senator Edward J. Bromberg, A. Alexander, Lewis Brown, J. F[illegible], Moses Goldman, Louis Mazur and Aaron Slutsky.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 102 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

WHITE PIMPLES ON WHOLE OF HEAD

Suffered for Three Months. Disfigured Very Much. Hardly Able to Sleep on Account of Itching. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

251 Main St., Winooski, Vt.—"My trouble began at the back of my head with little white pimples and they discharged and formed scabs. If I had the misfortune to comb or raise the scab, pulling it off, there formed pimples afterwards and you would say that my blood was poisoned. The whole of my head became like the back of it and one cheek and for three months I suffered. The trouble disfigured me very much. I was hardly able to sleep on account of the itching and discharging and my hair became dry also and nearly all had fallen out.

"I was treated during the three months and it did me no good. A lady advised me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I took water which was neither too hot nor too cold and then I washed the affected part of my head and face with Cuticura Soap and afterwards would let it dry and use the Cuticura Ointment. I repeated this three times a day. I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box and a half of Cuticura Ointment and I was cured completely in three months." (Signed) Miss Leopoldine Boudreau, June 20, 1913.

A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

BOSTON AMERICAN

MERGING OF SIX TROLLEY ROADS URGED BY PRESIDENT SULLIVAN OF BAY STATE CO.

Means Better Service for the Eastern Section of State, and Will Solve Steam Road Problem; "L" Company Is Silent.

Up to a late hour last night President Bancroft of the L hadn't made up his mind just what to say in answer to the suggestion that the time has come when—for the public good, of course—the Bay State Railway Company, operating in ninety-two cities and towns from the New Hampshire line to Rhode Island, should be allowed to adopt the Elevated.

PRESIDENT SULLIVAN FOR PLAN.

President P F Sullivan of the Bay State has been telling members of the Legislature, at a public hearing in the State House, how to relieve congestion at the South and North Stations by "cutting out half the trains which enter and leave these terminals every day"

Mr Sullivan's remedy—which he says will take care of not only this evil, but most of the transportation troubles of the metropolitan district—is a consolidation of all the street and interurban railway companies of eastern Massachusetts.

Such a combination would take in:

Boston Elevated.
Bay State.
Blue Hill.
Boston & Worcester.
Middlesex & Boston.
Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn.

The capital stock, bonds and all other forms of indebtedness of these five institutions amounts in round numbers to $150,000,000. Mr. Sullivan says it "requires so much effort today to get even a very small earning on actual capitalization that there is no inducement for over-capitalization." Hence he opposes stock-watering.

SOLVES SMOKE PROBLEM.

Members of two committees at the State House are anxious to hear from the Elevated, the Narow Gauge, the Boston & Worcester and the others. With all these interests in agreement it is not unlikely that the present session might witness the passage of an enabling act.

"The steam railroad companies" Mr Sullivan said last night, "have been telling us for years that the suburban business in and out of the North and South Stations costs them money. Such a consolidation as I have outlined can relieve them of this drain carry the suburbanite to his nearest corner, and reduce the number of railroad trains in the two terminals by 50 per cent

"We have also heard four years of talk about 'electrification' Here it is. We are weary of the smoke nuisance. Here is a way to be rid of most of that In other words, here is an assurance of the best street railway and suburban service enjoyed by any great community in the country

"The Consolidated Company I have in mind would take over this suburban traffic on the outskirts of the Metropolitan zone and take it over practically in its entirety From the north and the south, and from the west in Cambridge—extending the Cambridge tunnel out to Porter Station—it would swing this traffic onto the elevated structures and into the tunnels on fast trains of four and five cars.

"NARROW GAUGE" TUNNEL.

"The enabling act should, and of course would, provide that rates and fares and the matter of capitalization remain in the hands of the Public Service Commission. I feel that I have merely done my duty in making a recommendation to the representatives of the people at the State House and I await cheerfully such action as legislators may decide to take.

"In a score of ways consolidation would improve the service. For example, the Revere Beach road, or 'Narrow Gauge,' as it is called should carry the people of Lynn, Revere and Winthrop into the city by means of a tunnel and leave them at Scollay Square with transfer rights further on. In my mind there is no question but that the public would be better served by one company in the place of these six"

President Sullivan visited the State House for the second time in sixteen years to make his suggestion to the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs and the Committee on Street Railways. Said Mr. Sullivan:

> I wish to state the position of the Bay State Company If you should prepare an enabling act that would be fair, reasonable and workable, I am prepared to recommend it for favorable action WITH REASONABLE HOPE OF ACCEPTANCE.

BAY STATE ROAD READY.

President Sullivan's appearance grew out of the "Hyde Park" movement, an organized effort on the part of residents of Boston's newest and youngest ward—Ward 26—to get the same 5 cent fare enjoyed by residents of other sections.

The Legislature of 1913 turned the complaints of Hyde Park, Revere, Chelsea, East Boston and other communities over to the Boston Transit Commission and the Public Service Board

President Sullivan thought it was time for him to go to the State House when he read certain recommendations in the report of commissions which had been studying the situation nearly a year The boss of the Bay State found his inspiration in such sentences

> The Joint Commission believes that no large measure of relief can be afforded to the various communities at the present time by a piece-meal dealing with the situation and that the only hope of any substantial and effective immediate relief for those communities which suffer injustice or discrimination under the present system is by a thorough and fundamental consideration of the whole metropolitan transportation system, invoving . . . . possible changes which might result from a consolidation of all or a part of the companies concerned.

"Speaking for the Bay State Street Railway," President Sullivan said in effect, "We are ready."

Committeemen turned to Vice President Sergeant and Attorney Ballantine of the Boston Elevated.

"How about the L?" they were asked.

"This suggestion is as new to us as it is to the members of the committee," answered Ballantine, "we shall have to talk with our directors and get instructions."

WOLF 25 YEARS IN POLICE WORK

Noted Thief Catcher Receives Many Letters of Commendation on Anniversary.

Police Inspector Morris Wolf, one of Boston's noted thief catchers, is today celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of his police career. During his service he has arrested and convicted more than 2,000 criminals and holds the distinction of never having lost a case in the Superior Criminal Courts.

His first assignment was as a patrolman attached to Station 1. He was sent to what was then known as the "Gas House District."

The inspector speaks several languages which are valuable assets to him in his work. He has never used the story book disguises and is always sure of his man before he tackles him Wolf is at present assigned to the water front and meets every incoming steamer, bidding "Bon Voyage" as well to Bostonians who depart for foreign countries.

Few if any of the police inspectors can boast of the record of Inspector Wolf. His acquaintance does not extend entirely to criminals as was evidenced by the letters, telegrams and flowers that decorated his desk at headquarters last night, some of the cards bearing names of Boston's most prominent citizens.

BOY CONVICTS IN MULLINS CASE

Peter Delory, at left, and James Mantir, convicted of the murder of Annie Mullins, and for whom pardons are now sought on the grounds of miscarriage of justice.

swinging his way again in the Mullins case.

"I thought it would come," said Captain Hurley last night. "Those boys are innocent It is a shame to keep them locked up They never saw Annie Mullins. This has been a horrible mistake. I wish I was as sure of going to heaven as I am that they are innocent.

"I would stake my own life on the guilt of the man they let slip through their fingers. He isn't in Cambridge now, though. Latest reports place him in the West. He didn't stay in Cambridge very long after that. Everything we turned up dove-tailed and encompassed that man."

Captain Hurley and Lieutenant Neilan expressed the view that it would be hard sledding to convict the suspect now, owing to the passage of so many years, but they are on the job, nevertheless, and have a pretty formidable case, as matters stand.

CORCORAN TAKES HAND.

Although he knew that Attorneys Moroney and McDermott were preparing petitions, District Attorney Corcoran felt that he had work to do as county prosecutor of Middlesex County to determine whether a mistake had been made in the case of Mantir and Delorey

District Attorney Corcoran knew that procedure would demand that counsel for the prisoners take the initiative in pardon proceedings, but he felt it his right to help if the convicted men were innocent and so he rolled up his official sleeves and pitched in He did this irrespective of what future course may be shaped by developments in the way of getting anybody else for the crime. That with the young prosecutor of Middlesex County is a secondary consideration just now.

Mr Corcoran is being assisted by Assistant District Attorney Frank P O'Donnell. He is not talking for publication about the matter at this time. He says that is up to counsel for the prisoners, whom he wishes to assist in every way.

Last week Assistant District Attorney O'Donnell went to State Prison with a stenographer and brought back full statements from Mantir and Delorey. Last Wednesday District Attorney Corcoran personally visited the prison and chatted with Mantir and Delorey more than an hour.

BOYS PROTEST INNOCENCE.

Both prisoners reiterated their innocence. After his interview, District Attorney Corcoran and his companions were taken through the prison by Warden Bridges, accompanied by Judge Edward L. McManus, John P. Feeney and Assistant District Attorney O'Donnell.

The party saw Pomeroy being shaved. They saw "Big Bill" Kelliher, who got eighteen years for the Coleman faro scandal, squatted on a chair in lazy attitude, doing nothing just then, in the shirt room. They saw Warrie Charles, the Chinese court interpreter who got a death sentence commuted to a life term for the Tongs war in Chinatown, deftly folding shirts. "Big Bill" winked as they passed. They each bought a cane from Blondin, who got life for chopping up his wife. Blondin makes canes out of paper which are almost as heavy and black as ebony

District Attorney Corcoran admitted that he had taken full statements from Mantir and Delorey, and that he was very much impressed with their stories

Attorney John A H Moroney, counsel for Mantir, said yesterday:

"Those boys are as innocent as I am. Time and time again I have tried to corner Mantir or to get some statement amounting to an admission, but he has always told the same story He said he never saw the girl for whose murder they convicted him He says he didn't know what they had him for He consented to come to Boston from Manchester a year after the crime to meet Delorey's aunt, expecting that she wanted to see him about his suit to compel her to pay him $58 for a half year's wages. When he responded to the appointment they arrested him,

COMBAT AUNT'S STORY.

"I don't feel at liberty now to discuss plans. We shall not overlook a detail, however The big thing to combat is the story told by Delorey's aunt a year after the murder, the story that implicated her nephew and Mantir, who worked as a farm hand for her. We have evidence on that score. What has impressed me is the refusal of Mantir to agree to any compromise plan which I suggested as a test to sound him. For instance, I have said to him that perhaps he might get a pardon if he agreed to leave the country, but he was an swered that he would not do that that he was innocent and wanted to remain right here and work.

"I would say to him after he got his life term 'Now, Jim, if you did this thing you ought to confide in your counsel so long as it is all over,' and he would reply hotly 'So you think I did it, too?' and I would quickly assure him that I didn't but was only trying him Then he would smile and tell what a mistake it was to have them in there for something they did not do.

"I shall file my petition with Governor Walsh the middle of this week."

To Inspect Cape Canal on June 9

Upon the invitation of August Belmont, the president of the Cape Cod Construction Company, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange will make a visit of inspection to the Cape Cod Canal, Tuesday, June 9 The Dorothy Bradford of the Boston-Provincetown service, has been specially chartered by the Exchange for this occasion. Governor Walsh will be the special guest and principal speaker of the day.

STATUS OF SHOE TRADE.

One large shoe manufacturer is said to estimate the shoe business of the country as being from 20 to 25 per cent. below the average of three past years. He said: "In my recent trip in the West I found sentiment in Chicago and elsewhere [illegible] Two distinct views seemed to prevail. One was that we have yet a year and a half to go through before we get complete liquidation and before business shows a broad and genuine improvement. Others, on the contrary, thought the upswing would begin in five or six months."

UNITED FRUIT OFFERING.

It is stated that the United Fruit Company has decided to arrange its 1914 financial requirements through the sale of $10,000,000 four year 5 per cent. notes. This issue has been sold by the company to Lee, Higginson & Co., who will shortly offer the notes to the investment public at a price understood to be close to par.

NEW HAVEN HEARING.

On June 3 there will be held in Providence a hearing on New Haven's certificate of condemnation of certain lands it desires to take in Olneyville section so as to construct new freight yards The total area it proposes to take is estimated at 541,617 square feet.

BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL NEWS Edited By Experts

COTTON OUTLOOK IS NOT HOPEFUL

Sentiment Rules Business Rather Than Economic Considerations, in Opinion of Experts.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, May 16.—American spinners will consume approximately 6,[illegible] bales of cotton for the season ending September 1. This will cost at the mill doors a total of about $400,000,000. The output may be estimated at a valuation of $1,000,000 to the consumer. This is the magnitude of the cotton goods division of the dry goods trade

A representative of the Boston AMERICAN in a visit to the cotton goods district yesterday was informed trade conditions were extremely dull, also the outlook promised no change for the better The causes were variously estimated, but underlying it all, according to a consensus, sentiment is ruling the textile business rather than economic consideration or facts.

Money is plentiful, stocks are light, and general crop prospects are now estimated as full and favorable to business. In agricultural districts the retail and jobbing trade is better than at manufacturing centres or great railroad terminals.

FEWER WORKERS HITS TRADE.

The reduced number of pay envelopes coming from corporations and a reduction in the wage scales are beginning seriously to curtail sales in the retail department of the textile business This last is a feature in this branch of the business in New York city.

The distribution of textile fabrics is in many respects changing and the great jobbers of the country are being reduced in number as a result of the establishment of mill agencies and mail-order corporations The consumer is daily coming in closer contact with the actual producer

The result of this is to lessen the volume of orders, though their number may not decrease during periods of dulness Margins of profits are smaller as a result of these conditions, and accumulations of stocks are not necessary, as buyers supply their needs from hand to mouth.

BUSINESS IN SUSPENSE.

The cotton goods division of the textile business is waiting. Some views expressed point to the effect of lower tariff and the invasion of domestic and foreign markets by Japan and Europe at the expense of the export of American mill products

Others regard Washington legislation and consequent trade depression as fully sharing in all other questions making for pessimism.

Contraction in the export business during the week continued, with no hope of an early revival of business from the Far East Some increase in Mexican business has followed the closing of Mexican mills and also as a result of contracts for army and navy fabrics.

There were also reported some good-sized orders for gray goods and the taking by jobbers of some lines of mill surplus, covering a period for the next four months. Many opinions in cotton goods centres are to the effect that any further decline in goods will enforce not only curtailment but the closing down of some mills.

COPPER METAL.

Regarding the status of the copper metal trade it is stated: "Demand for copper metal braced up considerably Friday, and producers effected fair sized sales at the prevailing price of 14½ cents a pound While the buying could not be termed heavy, it was characterized by producers as a good consumptive demand, with indications of lasting Both foreign and domestic consumers were in the market, and the copper sold was again chiefly for June-July delivery. Second-hand copper had almost entirely disappeared and it was doubtful if even small lots of the metal were obtainable under the 14¼ cent level"

MR. GOULD AND "MOP."

One story about the refusal of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to arrange for financing the $25,000,000 Missouri Pacific notes, due June 1, is that Otto Kahn's first proposition to George J Gould was that the Goulds and their fellow directors should all resign and let the banking house put in a new board and a voting trust—but no cash. Incidentally Mr Gould was to put up a considerable amount of real money to insure the success of the note financing.

"That doesn't look very good to me," said Mr Gould. "So long as we continue to put our money into Missouri Pacific, we intend to sit on the inside and watch it."

YARN MILLS BUSY.

It is reported that yarn mills are busier than cloth plants So far this year the gross of the orders received by the United States Worsted Company is over double that of last year. For the first quarter the sales were at the rate of $9[illegible]—the cloth end representing about 40 per cent of the total

FAILURES FOR A WEEK.

Failures last week in the United States numbered 236, against 324 for the previous week, 308 in the preceding week, and 280 in the corresponding week of last year. In Canada the number was 40, as against 43 for the previous week, 53 for the preceding week and 46 last year.

SAN PEDRO COPPER.

The San Pedro Copper Company, all the capital stock of which is owned by the Greene-Cananea Copper Company, showed net income in 1913 calendar year of $158,331, compared with $330,030 in previous year.

ITS PRODUCTION FOR 1913.

For last year the Greene-Cananea Copper Company reports that the mines it owns or controls produced 44,420,514 pounds of fine copper, 1,497,938 23 ounces of silver and $021,077 ounces of gold. Combined net income for year amounted to $2,244,592.

Stocks Were Dull and Also Lower

Stocks ranged lower at the close yesterday, as they did at the opening. But trading was on a small scale. In New York transactions totalled but about 69,000 shares. There was some profit taking and a disposition to be cautious over Sunday. Steel, which led the market and was dealt in to the extent of a little under 11,000 shares, closed unchanged. Reading, Amalgamated and Union Pacific finished fractionally lower. In fact, the price range was narrow as regards both declines and advances. Americans had been heavy in London, but this was due more to European conditions than to any change in this country The monetary situation abroad is still giving concern. It is unchanged here. Big exportation of gold may have some effect upon rates, should it happen. Crop prospects, the expectations that Eastern roads will be permitted to advance freight rates and the belief that the Mexican situation has passed the critical stage, are factors at present operating in support of stocks, although speculation and investment buying are both at a minimum Sentiment is better, although it is difficult to see any improvement in the business situation.

The Boston market lacked feature of interest, excepting the decline and recovery of United Fruit. That issue receded several points when an issue of notes for $10,000,000 was announced, but it closed with a gain.

STEEL TRADE.

At the end of the week the steel trade was still quiet, but manufacturers were hopeful of an improvement soon The buying of late has been less than needs of consumers in the dullest times. One report is that the Standard Oil Company has placed an order with the United States Steel Corporation for 250,000 boxes of tin plate for second half delivery.

ROTHSCHILD FAMILY FORTUNE FOUNDED BY WIFE OF THE FIRST OF THE GREAT BANKERS

Woman Has Demonstrated Her Ability in Business and the Professions—Many Now Employed as Cashiers—Some Would Be Capable as Bank Directors and Presidents

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, May 16.—When the Chamber of Deputies refused almost unanimously to give French women the vote they merely withheld a political right; they did not—they could not—stay woman's economic progress in France.

It was a French woman, Mme. La Marechale De Grancey, who long ago was well aware that "men can strike a harder blow with their fists than women." That was the origin of their superiority, it continues to be their sole claim to "superiority."

Before La Marechale had made the profound observation the Duchess of Burgundy asked her grandfather: "Do you know why nations are better governed under male monarchs than under female? Because kings are ruled by women and queens by men"

This was a witty truth, characteristic of a nation where women for centuries have been more influential than men—without the latter being aware of it. Woman cannot as yet vote in France, but they can do almost everything else. Save the army, navy, magistracy, the law permits them to enter all businesses and professions. Toute les carrieres sont ouiverte aux femmes—every career is open to women.

The best business women indeed among business heads in the world are French. They own and manage some of the largest establishments Without losing a vestige of their sex attraction, retainging all of their fascination, they engage in many occupations which up to a quarter of a century ago were looked upon as purely masculine.

WIVES AS BUSINESS ADVISERS.

A French wife is more than a wife and mother, she is a comrade and a business adviser. It is rather curious that the country which denies woman suffrage was by several generations the first to permit them to occupy positions which custom would have denied to American women—America whose States are one by one giving the vote to women. Americans of middle age can remember when positions now generally taken by women were looked upon as naturally and exclusively masculine, when their occupation by the fairer sex had appeared preposterous. Today in America, as in France, there are women editors, printers, doctors, lawyers, druggists, station masters. Paris has no female [illegible] as has Chicago, but as an offset Paris has women coachmen (as Pat would say), for which Chicago is not yet prepared.

In the church, women are conspicuous in both countries, and especially in the Catholic faith. The growing power of Christian Science is putting women in the pulpit everywhere, notably in this country.

In the matter of clerical work, clerks, bookkeepers, etc., the occupancy is about equal in proportion to the population in France and America.

For years there was stupid prejudice here against women doing office work. The cry was (it has not subsided) "women are incapable" If they were—and are—incapable, why fear to let them try it?

Incapability distroys itself The fact is that women are better fitted for such situations, are steadier, more reliable, more accurate.

WOMEN SUPERIOR TO MEN?

This wilful misprisement has its root in the age-long ignorant assumption that woman is inferior to man Ignoramuses point to the geniuses the world has produced and say "there are only a few women in the illustrious group." The wonder is that there are any—considering the thousands of years in which women have been at a gross disadvantage After all the real geniuses who have trod the planet are few It has taken man with all his advantages over woman half of an eternity

Comparisons should always be in averages. Any one who will deny to breed half a dozen beings who have caught a glin that the average woman is not superior to the average man is still a barbarian at heart and in mind.

Once the vote massively exercised, women will demand and get the average public office which they are bound to administer more efficiently than men, with more honesty, sincerity and capability

The recognition of their fiduciary fidelity is spreading Hence the increasing number of women cashiers

And if cashiers why not bankers? The transition were not [illegible] abrupt Women have shown their ability in [illegible] every [illegible] business There is no reason whatever why they should not serve as directors and bank presidents They would have one quality inestimable in finance—[illegible]

A German play, "The Five Frankfurters," has made common knowledge what the financial world has only known—that the foundation of the Rothschild family fortune was due to the business sagacity of a woman, the wife of the first Rothschild. A more modern instance is that of the old lady (the spouse of one of the original partners), whom the partners of Kuhn, Loeb & Co have always consulted and still consult—on all vital fiscal questions.

Wheat Trade Livened by Bad Crop News

Argentina Exportable Corn Surplus Reduced Fully 20 Per Cent.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Crop deterioration in Missouri and Illinois caused a general re-awakening of the wheat market at Chicago this week. The public came in as buyers, and many who were short evened up their position and took on some long wheat in addition. The market was badly in need of something from the crop killers, but it moved slowly, with large commitments the exception rather than the rule

The corn market has pivoted entirely on the crop conditions of the southern hemisphere. Floods have caused considerable damage, and the exportable surplus has been reduced fully 20 per cent.

Farmers have been freer sellers during the past few days Export clearances of this grain from the seaboard are quite small, totaling only [illegible] bushels during April while for the same month in 1913 the clearances were 5,[illegible],178 bushels.

BUILDERS CLASH OVER CHANGES IN CONSTRUCTION LAWS AIMED TO AVERT MELVIN FIRE HORRORS

Find No Common Ground on Which to Get Together to Carry Out Grand Jury Recommendations.

How shall the Grand Jury recommendations for changes in the building laws to prevent a repetition of the Melvin apartment fire-horror be carried out?

This is the question uppermost in the minds of men intimately associated with the construction and sale of apartment houses in Greater Boston.

While there is little or no opposition to the recommendations made by the Grand Jury, following its probe into the Melvin catastrophy, there seems to be no common ground upon which the different interests can get together to carry out the proposed reforms.

Patrick O'Hearn, building commissioner for the city of Boston, contends that the question is disposed of in a bill amending the building laws now pending before the Legislature. Under the changes provided for in this bill, human life, he says, will be amply protected in case of fire without adding more than 8 per cent to the initial cost of erecting apartment houses.

RUDNICKS PROTEST.

Morris and Joseph Rudnick, real estate dealers, who have both erected and sold apartment houses valued at more than $[illegible] during the last fifteen years, take the opposite view. They say the bill in question would add from 20 to 24 per cent. to the initial cost of erecting an apartment house. Also, that it would cut off $20,000,000 in Boston's building trade activities. They suggest a law providing for two fireproof exits to each such house. These, they say, can be provided at an additional cost of from 6 to 10 per cent.

W. H. Sayward, secretary of the Boston Master Builders' Association, who is a member of the State Commission created by legislative enactment a year ago to make a state-wide investigation of building laws, takes still another view. He is in favor of waiting until a fuller investigation into the subject of building law regulations can be made and reported upon to the Legislature next year.

Charles H. Cole, former fire commissioner, contends that immediate relief from the present day fire hazards which threaten apartment house dwellers may be had by the enactment of Senate bill No. 813. This bill was introduced by the Boston Chamber of Commerce, "to regulate the use and the occupancy of all buildings in the Metropolitan district through a fire hazard commission, with tentative provisions for its state-wide application later."

PELLETIER'S STATEMENT.

District Attorney Pelletier, commenting on the Melvin apartments fire, said:

The Grand Jury made an investigation of the Hotel Melvin fire. After hearing all available witnesses and several experts it decided there was not sufficient evidence upon which to find an indictment against any person.

The Grand Jury has authorized me to say, however, that in their opinion after hearing the evidence, the construction of buildings of this type should be absolutely forbidden by law.

To adopt the safeguards necessary to lessen the obvious fire hazards in buildings of this type, would be to require that staircases, elevator wells, etc., be encased in fireproof material, and that all connection with the basements of such buildings should be cut off and that sprinklers should be provided at the heads of stairs, elevator wells, light shafts, etc.

It would seem from the evidence that real estate investors can build [illegible] class fireproof construction and realize a profit on their investments. In Boston to-day there are a great many houses of the type of the Melvin, and some even more dangerous. The people occupying these houses are paying a high rental and are people of intelligence, and yet despite the awful lesson of the Melvin they are closing their eyes to the fire hazards all about them. The best way to control the situation is for tenants to become inspectors of the premises in which they live, [illegible] fire hazards and [illegible] builders [illegible] class construct[illegible] [illegible] those which are ever [illegible]

ALWAYS FIRE HAZARD.

[illegible] of [illegible], paper refuse and other inflammable material [illegible] basements is always a fire hazard, and if tenants would take it upon themselves to go through the buildings in which they live occasionally many such [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible]

[illegible] refuse to safeguard the lives of their tenants by fireproofing [illegible], elevator wells, light shafts, and by protecting fire escapes [illegible] windows [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] out [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible]

[illegible] otherwise, and [illegible] on the part of [illegible] of their own safety [illegible] correct these dangerous [illegible] be wiped out at least some of the fire traps now permitted to exist with their deadly [illegible] obscured under an attractive exterior, but not hidden from the vigilance of those to whom [illegible] the utmost appeal," Building Commissioner O'Hearn says.

"The [illegible] right. The changes [illegible] in the building laws are [illegible] as the law [illegible] The best of our citizens [illegible] the fullest [illegible] of their faculties [illegible] fire breaks out in their apartment houses, are [illegible] burned to death at any moment!

"I have had introduced a bill amending Section 9 of Chapter 550 of the year 1907, which will make possible the practical enforcement of the grand jury's recommendations. The total initial cost of carrying all of them into effect, in my judgment, will not exceed 8 per cent. of the present cost of putting up [illegible] apartment house."

"With the possible exception of some of the men who build to [illegible] every one seems to agree that we ought to change our building [illegible] the lines suggested by the [illegible]," said H. W. Sayward. "The great problem that confronts us is the way to do this without imposing too great a burden upon the builder, the owner and the rent payer.

"The commission of which I am a member has been making an exhaustive study of the [illegible] since last August. We are still at work on it and cannot report until the next session of the Legislature. [illegible] any thing [illegible] for that hasty [illegible] answer the purpose now.

VATERLAND OF IMMENSE SIZE

When the largest ship in the world, the steamer Vaterland, enters New York harbor on Thursday, a remarkable comparison will be made possible with the heroic figure enlightening the world. If the largest statue in the world were set down on the deck of the great liner, the torch in the upraised arm would be below the American flag at the mainmast. The statue itself measures 151 feet in height, while the masts of the Vaterland rise 127 feet above the main deck. Anyone who has climbed the long staircases in the statue leading to the balcony about the uplifted torch will be especially impressed by the comparison.

The Vaterland is built upon such graceful lines that it is difficult to realize her great size. She measures 950 feet in length, 100 feet on beam, and has a tonnage of 58,000 exceeding her sister ship, the Imperator, in all dimensions.

The grand salon of the Vaterland is the largest cabin ever constructed on shipboard. Her main dining room will accommodate 800 guests at one time. She has, in addition, a large Ritz-Carlton restaurant, a grill room and several private dining rooms. One of the greatest attractions of the Vaterland is her Roman bath which is supplemented by a variety of electric and therapeutic baths and upward of 300 private bathrooms.

The Imperator and Vaterland will be followed by a third sister ship of equally huge dimensions.

SAYS TANGO LEADS TO DRUNKENNESS

All the modern dances, the tango, one step, maxixe, tend toward drunkenness, according to the belief of Ernest H. Cherrington of Westerville Ohio, who is in Boston in the interest of the National Anti-Saloon League.

He doesn't think it is the condition in Boston, but in New York, where the public cafes run to cabarets and dances, the younger people get their first idea how easily liquor can be procured.

He is in Boston to get funds for the two million dollar subscription for the purpose of making the country wide campaign for the passage of the national amendment on prohibition. He is of the firm belief that the next Congress will adopt the amendment.

In the past six months $730,000 has been secured by the teams that have worked in the various parts of the country. There are eight teams of two men on each team. These teams will go into every city in the United States that has a population of 1,000 or over for the purpose of waging the campaign.

Mr. Cherrington said that the liquor interests are waging the bitterest fight of their career and are spending enormous sums of money to defeat the amendment.

Mark Centennial of Norway's Freedom

The 15,000 Norwegians of Greater Boston in conjunction with those the world over are celebrating the one hundreth anniversary of Norway Independence. The celebration will last four days. The observance began yesterday afternoon with an open air meeting in front of the Lief Erickson statue on Commonwealth avenue.

It is estimated that more than 1,200 people gathered. Today, tomorrow and Tuesday, the Norwegians in Boston and vicinity will hold centennial celebrations.

WARNS CLERGY TO LIVE WITHIN THEIR MEANS

"Debt Is the Worst Poverty," Says Prof. Townsend of Boston School of Theology.

HE CITIES THREE PROVERBS

Prof. Luther T. Townsend of Boston University School of Theology, says the modern minister should not ask for discount, when he buys goods.

Under his hat he should have three proverbs tucked away to be looked at occasionally. These are Debt is the worst poverty.

Debt is an evil conscience.

Lying rides upon debt's back.

"Too many young ministers," says Prof. Townsend, "after saving money in their first charge, think they must spend it in going to Europe. They should put that money away for the rainy day, which is sure to come.

'LIVE WITHIN MEANS.'

"Never live beyond your income. The rich minister who has married a wealthy wife has always a sore throat and wants to go to Europe, when as a matter of fact there is nothing the matter with him but the pain of wanting to spend money.

"You are often told that ministers are fools in money matters and probably not a few of them have earned that reputation by inattention, bad investments, or poor management. But it is doubtful if men in the ministry are greater fools in this respect than other professional men.

'BETTER BE A CHEF.'

"If money making is the end to be sought in life let a bright, healthy young man not enter the ministry, but become a chef in some great hotel where he will receive a early salary of $3,000 to $10,000.

"Ministers in America are not as well paid as professional ball players.

"Not long ago a minister at the close of a thirty years' pastorate told his people it had cost him $20,000 out of his private purse and yet he had ministered to wealthy people.

"Ministers should keep out of debt. If a minister has but fifty cents and can get no more for a week he should buy a peck of corn, parch it and live on it rather than owe any man a dollar. Pay all bills within twenty-four hours, if possible.

WORKS DAY AND NIGHT.

"Every minister should know that 'no blister draws sharper than interest.' It works day and night, in fair weather and foul. Debt rolls a man over and over, binding him hand and foot.

"No minister should sign a note, saying, 'I promise to pay,' unless he knows where the money is coming from. Ministers should never indorse notes. When a layman comes to a clergyman for his indorsement of a note, he is lacking in the proper fitness of things, if not in moral soundness. He will not lie awake nights, but will allow the minister to do so.

"If a minister is poor or in moderate circumstances, he should live within his income. That should be his gospel. Young ministers should learn the habits of industry, frugality and self-denial."

Sues Essex County to Recover $400

R. K. MacMillan Says Bail Was Not Returned.

An attachment of $1,000 was served yesterday on the treasurer and commissioners of Essex County by Robert K. MacMillan of Beverly, who seeks to recover $400 bail which he declares he deposited with Patrick P. Kierce, clerk of the Second District Court at Ipswich, following an appeal from a three-months sentence on the charge of participating in an Ipswich strike riot last Summer.

When the District Attorney nol prossed the charge against MacMillan last October, the bail money was not returned, MacMillan declares. He contends the county is responsible for the acts of its agent.

The county officers on whom the writ was served were: Treasurer David I. Robinson and Commissioners Moody Kimball of Newburyport, James C. Poor of North Andover and John M. Grosvenor, Jr., of Swampscott.

Society Applauds D. A. R. Performance

Society applauded performance of the peace play given by the Daughters of the American Revolution in Copley Hall yesterday afternoon and showed appreciative interest in the dancing of Miss Priscilla May, who took the part of "The Dryad" in the pantomimic playlet which preceded the play. The pupils of Miss Marie Ware Laughton, who adapted the playlet and had charge of the coaching of both performances, gave clever adaptations of their parts.

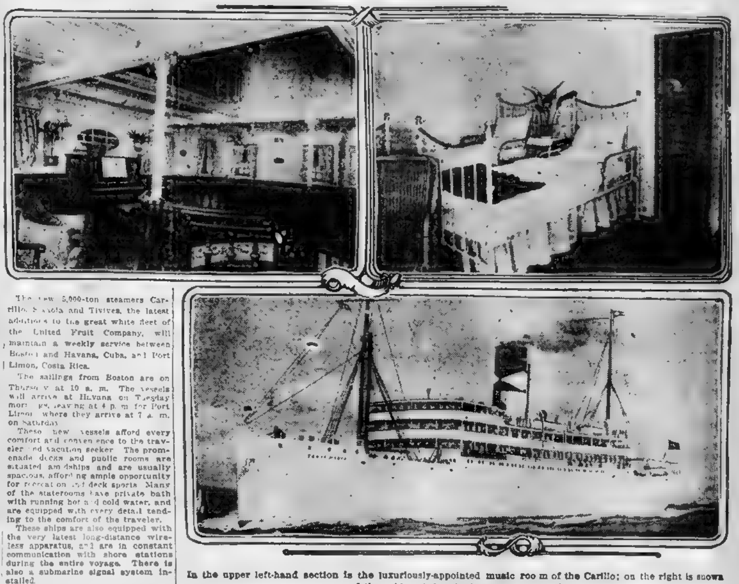
Steamer Carrillo Latest Addition to United Fruit Fleet

New Vessels to Maintain Weekly Boston-Havana Service

UNITED FRUIT STEAMER CARILLO AND PART OF HER LUXURIOUS EQUIPMENT.



In the upper left-hand section is the luxuriously-appointed music room of the Carillo; on the right is shown one of the cabins, below is the steamer Carillo.

The new 5,000-ton steamers Carrillo, Sixaola and Tivives, the latest additions to the great white fleet of the United Fruit Company, will maintain a weekly service between Boston and Havana, Cuba, and Port Limon, Costa Rica.

The sailings from Boston are on Thursday at 10 a. m. The vessels will arrive at Havana on Tuesday mornings, leaving at 4 p. m. for Port Limon where they arrive at 7 a. m. on Saturday.

These new vessels afford every comfort and convenience to the traveler and vacation seeker. The promenade decks and public rooms are situated amidships and are usually spacious, affording ample opportunity for recreation and deck sports. Many of the staterooms have private bath with running hot and cold water, and are equipped with every detail tending to the comfort of the traveler.

These ships are also equipped with the very latest long-distance wireless apparatus, and are in constant communication with shore stations during the entire voyage. There is also a submarine signal system installed.

Havana, the Paris of the Western Hemisphere, is too well known to Americans to require a lengthy description; and, as the ship remains at this port for an entire day ample opportunity is afforded for a drive about the city, together with a visit to the famous Morro Castle and Cabanas fortress.

Port Limon, the eastern seaport for the Republic of Costa Rica, will be found of interest to the Northern visitor; and, as the stay here is of twenty-four hours' duration, opportunity is afforded for a drive about the city and a visit to the government hospital, wireless station and other points of interest.

On the return voyage the steamer arrives at Havana about 10 a. m. on Wednesday, sailing again at 4 p. m. the same day for Boston direct.

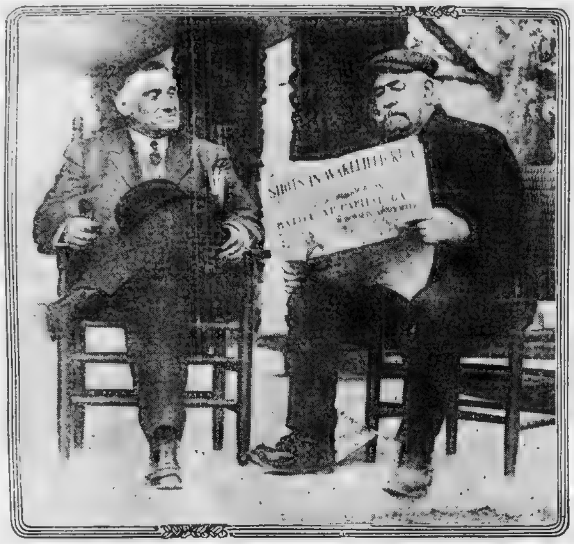
Stage Is in Danger, but Nation O. K. Says Former Champion

Grand Old Man of the Squared Circle Has Hope in Rising Generation.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN (ON THE RIGHT) AND MR. GALVIN.



Former heavyweight champion photographed as he was giving his views on current topics to the Sunday AMERICAN reporter, on the porch of his home at Abington.

John L. Sullivan, farmer, philosopher, lecturer [illegible] current events [illegible] of pugilism [illegible] honest [illegible] [illegible] permit [illegible] and [illegible] Carson [illegible] W. W. [illegible] the trouble [illegible] and morals [illegible] may get on in [illegible] and much [illegible] the [illegible] we sat in our [illegible] looking out [illegible] of gout [illegible] he is rap[illegible] great [illegible] it was in [illegible] conversation [illegible] on that John [illegible] and to [illegible] the world's [illegible] the [illegible] his own [illegible] horse sense [illegible] these days of his [illegible] he has [illegible] share.

John L. was always quite a philosopher in his way. In his present life of semi-pastoral retirement he has grown to be a profound philosopher.

WAY TO HANDLE MEXICO.

About that trouble in Mexico," as he slowly lifted his pipe. "Well, there's no trouble to that, so far as I can see. It seems to me a very simple proposition. Our flag is insulted, our men are shot down, the lives of our citizens down there are threatened. What's our duty?

[illegible] answer that question [illegible] short [illegible] if he were [illegible] What I [illegible] What [illegible] The way to get those fellows and restore order and good government is to go in [illegible] Then [illegible] peace and [illegible] had been [illegible] of course, [illegible] of life and expense in doing this we could retire [illegible] in [illegible] at a [illegible] on. If, by [illegible] Mexicans [illegible] to come in [illegible] But I [illegible] forcing them [illegible]. If they can govern themselves down there, let them go [illegible]. But they must [illegible] respect the United States and [illegible] that flag represents [illegible] to more [illegible]. We should [illegible] at all [illegible] Teddy would [illegible] quick.

[illegible] to go down to Mexico to find people who insult the flag. Look at those I. W. W. fellows. We will have to handle them sooner or later.

VIEWS OF THE I. W. W.

Now I admire the stand that [illegible] in New York, [illegible] those chaps [illegible] they told the [illegible] wanted to [illegible] go ahead [illegible] off all the [illegible] be careful [illegible] as you say [illegible] ever told [illegible] to be [illegible] afraid of [illegible] ready for use.

[illegible] If [illegible] big stick [illegible] to get into [illegible] tour out West.

[illegible] America [illegible] ways [illegible] charge of [illegible] country [illegible] America [illegible] States [illegible] now [illegible] fought [illegible] remember [illegible] thing [illegible] for [illegible] great [illegible]

[illegible]

"In my judgment the authorities should pay more attention to the kind of plays they are putting on today all over the country. Why, out in St. Louis, when I was there a few weeks ago, the district attorney had to step in and make them take off one of those plays or he would [illegible] the house and arrest all [illegible]. That kind of business is hurting the stage and the whole theatrical profession.

"The theatre was always a great [illegible] for [illegible] there are plays touring the country which no respectable [illegible] would want his little [illegible] or little girl to see. That's [illegible]. And what they did to stop it in St. Louis could be done anywhere else.

"The people of America are entitled to [illegible] wholesome entertainment. That's what they want. They should not be forced to take anything else.

I see the papers [illegible] put you on the [illegible] of American farmers; how [illegible] being a tiller of the soil.

"I don't do much at it. You see all I know about farming I [illegible] by talking with real farmers [illegible] reading the papers and the literature they send me from the Washington bureau. I have a fine farmer here with me, [illegible] Henry Harris. He knows his business. All the seeds and books and pamphlets I get from Washington I turn over to him."

"Now let me tell this, what I do [illegible] about farming——

THE ASSESSOR APPEARS.

[illegible] he had uttered the word [illegible] an official gentleman [illegible] Colton, assessor of the [illegible] Abington, arrived with [illegible] and fountain pen [illegible] John L.'s elbow.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Sullivan."

"How d'ye do!" almost growled the big fellow, who did not relish the interruption.

"Who are you?"

"I'm the assessor."

"Ugh, well go ahead with your questions."

"You are fifty-five this year, Mr. Sullivan," said the assessor, quoting his book.

"No, I'm not. I'm fifty-six. Fifty-five last year."

"You have five in the family—two males and three females?"

"That's wrong. It's the other way around. Three males and two females."

"Thank you; I'll correct that. Now you have five swine?"

"No, I've two pigs."

"Two horses?"

"One horse."

"Same number of acres as last year?"

"Just the same."

"Now, Mr. Sullivan, they are getting very strict up at the State House about stocks and bonds, money in the bank and so forth."

"Well, spare yourself all the trouble of those. I haven't any."

"[illegible] say, Mr Sullivan, thank you."

"All right. Say—what might your name be?"

"My name is Colton, Mr. Sullivan."

"You're the town assessor?"

"All right. Glad to know you."

And [illegible] L. began to talk to [illegible] about farming.

"As I was about to say when that assessor came along, the great thing to teach our farmers today is to nourish the land and to keep feeding it. If they don't how can they get anything out of it? They must work their land [illegible] temper, study its [illegible] what crops it [illegible] they can [illegible]. If they [illegible] Eastern farmers [illegible] a lot of money [illegible] New England farms. If they [illegible] they are bound [illegible] be blam[illegible] [illegible] says [illegible]

The World Today as John L. Sees It

We needn't go down to Mexico to find people who insult the flag. Look at those I. W. W. fellows.

The country is all right. America is always right and always will be, even if mistakes are sometimes made by those in charge of her affairs.

The young people of today are all right, too. Of course lots of them are making fools of themselves over the tango. But that will die out.—From John L. Sullivan's observations on the topics of the times.

WATCH NEW STEPS AT DANCE REVUE

G. Hepburn Wilson and Pupils Give Demonstratian ot Mechanics Building.

A splendid revue of modern and classic dancing was given at the Mechanics' Building yesterday afternoon and last night by G. Hepburn Wilson and a corps of dancing instructors and pupils from his New York studios. He was also assisted by Paul Swan, known as the "most beautiful man."

Of the classic dances, "To a wild rose" was rendered by Miss Margaret Crawford, and a Greek fantasy, "The dance of the hours" from "La Gioconda," by Mr Swan. Schubert's "Moment Musical" was rendered by Miss Crawford, Miss Louise Kelly and Dorothy Seyou, wearing white chiffon and roses. In his dance Mr. Swan wore blue, embroidered with golden peacocks. He wore golden sandals.

Of the modern dances, Mr. Wilson gave an admirable exhibition of the Argentine tango, assisted by Miss Helen Martin. Mr Wilson danced the one step, and John A. Ross and Miss Irene Hayes, instructors in Mr. Wilson's studio, danced the Brazilian maxixe.

National and interpretive dances came in Part 3 of the program. The Misses Crawford, Kelly and Seyou danced the "Rhapsodie Hongroise No. 2" by Liszt, all three being garbed in the Hungarian national dress. Mr Swan followed with the Spanish dance. Miss Crawford followed with an old-fashioned Gavotte.

Mr. Wilson gave an interesting talk on modern dancing and followed with an exhibition of the Hesitation Waltz with Miss Martin. Mr. Ross and Miss Catherine [illegible] danced the turkey trot. Many in the audience then accepted an invitation to show their dancing ability on the stage.

The music was furnished by the Columbia Graphophone Company's band.

BROTHERHOOD TO PLEAD FOR KNIGHT

Delegations from the brotherhoods of the Boston & Maine, the Boston & Albany and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads are to visit Governor Walsh tomorrow to tell in person why they want William G. Knight appointed Public Service Commissioner to succeed George W. Bishop, whose term expires on July 1.

Knight is now employed as an examiner of locomotive engineers on the Boston & Maine. He has had three years experience as a stationary engineer, four years as a locomotive fireman and two years as a locomotive engineer. He prepared for college while working a 700-mile run [illegible] week. Later he was made [illegible] of locomotive operation, traveling engineer, and is classed as one of the leading airbrake experts in the railroad world.

A member of many years' standing in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers and the Stationary Firemen's Union, Knight is endorsed for Bishop's place by 40,000 organized workers. Mr Knight is the author of several textbooks on railroad matters, and for several years has conducted classes at various points on the Boston & Maine Railroad. He is especially well versed in mathematics and physics as applied to railroading and is personally popular with the men he has worked with so many years.

Boy Walks Girder 450 Feet in the Air

A large party from the Technology Civil Engineering Society visited the new Boston Customs House yesterday. The feature of the inspection was the stunt of a junior, who walked a six-inch girder with nothing but some 450 feet of unobstructed air between him and the ground. The twenty-third story was the limit for the most of the party.

7 Girls Fined $15 for Throwing Stones

SALEM, May 16.—Seven girls were fined $15 each today by Judge Sears for throwing stones. The offenders, all of whom appealed, were Rose French, Grace Toft, Mary Soney, Elizabeth Murphy, Corinne Pelletier, [illegible]quett. The fines resulted from strike happenings at the Hodgdon-Durant shoe concern on May 1.

Says College Girls Don't Like Sermons

Prof Vida Scudder of Wellesley says that college students want fewer sermons and more devout worship in the ritual of the churches. She says the ordinary prayer meeting does not seem to appeal to student life.

"The number of clergymen who can render a religious service impressive is limited. [illegible] of them read the Bible in a way that would draw a reproof in any student in the class room. To be able to conduct a religious service reverently and impressively is worth dozens of sermons."

Expense Problem Solved
By Using
"Sweatnomore"
Make Your Shoes Wear Twice as Long.

Why not stop the excessive perspiration of your feet [illegible] "Sweatnomore" antiseptic foot powder? This excessive perspiration causes the leather to rot. Why not save the leather and thus cut your bills in half? Many have done this and are now walking on "Easy Street" with a pair of comfortable non-odorous feet. Then another thing, you will have only half as [illegible] new shoes, you will have no tired, aching, swollen feet and you will have more money in your pocket.

Ask your druggist for "Sweatnomore." Take no substitute.

SOX DOWN TIGERS IN 1ST CLASH AT FENWAY

Carrigan's Men Come Back and Shut Out the American League Leaders in a 3 to 0 Struggle

Sox Have Hard Time Breaking Through the Cobbs—Huge Crowd Sees Rejuvenated Tigers

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

The Red Sox won a most exciting battle from the Tigers in the week-end fracas at Fenway Park yesterday afternoon. Score 3 to 0. It was a regular old time ball game in the matter of thrills, exciting periods and enthusiasm.

A crowd of nearly 17,000 was kept on edge from the time the first ball was pitched until Speaker caught the fly ball from the bat of Vitt, which ended the game.

The sharpest kind of fielding punctured the contest, and there were just enough errors to keep the crowd in a state of boiling excitement. The appearance in Boston of Hugh Jennings and his band of carnivorous Tigers is always a signal for a general uprising of baseball fans.

A Detroit team always delivers a money's worth, and it certainly did so in its first clash with the Red Sox.

COBB MAKES GREAT CATCH.

The great "Ty" Cobb, while he did [illegible] the [illegible] off [illegible] [illegible] Harry Hooper [illegible] never [illegible] one-hand stab off the [illegible] of Larry Doyle in the last game of the 1912 World's Series.

[illegible] great catch [illegible] Larry [illegible] of a sure three-bagger. It [illegible] and it did not seem possible that anybody could get within ten yards of the ball. But Cobb, running at express speed, jumped in the air just as the ball was sailing by him [illegible]

The ball struck [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] to start [illegible] again but the [illegible] down [illegible] this time [illegible] to it as though it were the [illegible] ticket in a solvent lottery. The fair minded Boston crowd [illegible] the great [illegible] in a manner that he will probably never for[illegible]

GARDNER PLAYED GREAT GAME.

Besides Cobb's feat there were other fine fielding features. Larry Gardner picked sizzling grounders out of the dust and stopped bewhiskered drives that came at him with terrific [illegible]. Scott covered a vast amount of territory and Speaker in the last [illegible] of the day made a splendid catch [illegible] fly in short right field.

For thrills the game was hard to [illegible]. In the last of the second inning the Red Sox got three men on bases with no one out, and in the intense excitement that followed they failed to score.

The Tigers came right back in the third and [illegible] up the sacks with only one out. But they, too, were forced to take the field again without making a tally in.

Then came another heartrending session when the Sox filled up the bases with no one out. This time there [illegible] doings. On Gardner's [illegible] to Bush Lewis crossed the plate, and on [illegible] sacrifice fly Speaker scored.

This pair of runs in the third looked better and better as the game wore on. The Tigers challenged in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth, having splendid chances in each of these innings but sharp fielding and the [illegible] of the game were against them and they never saw the home base.

It was a battle of [illegible] paws, Collins [illegible] the honors went to the [illegible]. He pitched the tightest kind of ball in every critical period, and was forced to show his gameness throughout the game, for the Tigers threatened in every inning except two.

On the other hand, Coveleskie was plainly in distress two or three times and, although he got out of many a tight hole, the Sox hit the ball when they had to. Although single [illegible] his batting average was perfect for the

BRAVES BEATEN 1-0 IN GREAT GAME AT CINCI

CINCINNATI, May 16.—The Braves were shut out by the Reds by a score of 1 to 0 here today. It was the third time during their stay in Rhineland that they were whitewashed, "Rube" Benton getting credit for two of the Red victories. The Braves scored only two runs during their series here.

The "Rube" opposed Rudolph on the rubber today, and each twirler allowed but three hits in an errorless contest, which was played in 1 hours and 26 minutes.

Rudolph held the Reds hitless until the fifth inning, when Marsans singled to right. The other two Cincinnati hits were made in the eighth, when Hoblitzel tripled to deep right and scored on Vonkolnitz' single to centre.

Vonkolnitz has been on the job in the pinches two times during the Boston series, having scored two runs with a double to centre yesterday. He is a recruit catcher and is being used in centre by Herzog to give Bates a rest.

Today's contest was by far the best game played on Redland field this season.

Maranville, who brought disgrace upon himself and defeat upon his team yesterday by errors, redeemed himself today. The speedy little shortstop played a wonderful game at short accepting three hard chances and having five put outs. His catch

MANY RECORDS BROKEN AT THE GREAT ANNUAL DUAL MEET.

By NICK FLATLEY.

With a splendidly balanced track team, every member performing at his best, Yale came into the Harvard Stadium yesterday and swept the Crimson hopes away in very business-like fashion. The final score of the dual meet was 66½ to 37½.

From the very start it was evident that it would be all Yale. The Blue athletes opened proceedings by shutting out Jackson, Harvard's hope in the hurdles, in the first event on the program, and from then on it was merely a question as to how badly the invaders would bury the home outfit.

CAPTAIN BARRON STAR FOR HARVARD.

Captain Barron of Harvard was glorious in defeat. Though he has been a quarter miler, he won both the hundred and two-twenty, defeating the speedy Cornell of Yale by a great exhibition of gameness and grit.

His team mates, however, failed to [illegible] his [illegible] hearted example, and Yale star after star were recorded winners to the dismay of a big crowd that filled the sides of the Stadium, and, until a few finals had ben run off, hoped against hope for a Crimson victory.

Several days of warm sun had dried the track and made it lightning fast, as was shown when Potter, Yale's [illegible] hopper, went over the high sticks in 15 4-5 and [illegible] equalling the [illegible] record.

[illegible] the half mile, Captain [illegible] of Yale, one time conqueror [illegible] John Paul Jones, made new figures, outfooting the speedy Capper in 1.54, three-fifths of a second [illegible] than the record he [illegible] a year ago.

Rol Poucher, Yale's [illegible], also worked in on the record breaking stunt, leading two of the New Haven fellows to the tape in 4.2[illegible], which is some [illegible] he might have [illegible] had anyone in the [illegible] to push him.

Some share of what [illegible] glory came to Harvard in the day's work, was won by Boyd, the slender captain of the cross-country team, who took the greatest race of the afternoon, the two mile, after a heart-[illegible] of Yale, and set up the new dual figures of [illegible]

Not content with initiating affairs with a record, Potter kept right on and before he had done his day's work had both hurdle events to his credit. He showed beautiful form going over the sticks and could have come quite close to world's record time in either event had there been any [illegible]

HARVARD STRONG IN JUMPS.

The big surprise of the day came in the jumps, where Harvard, supposedly weak, got away with two firsts and a second. Camp took the pole vault with a surprising leap of twelve feet and Johnstone, after bowing to Oler of Yale, in the high jump, came back in the broad with a lift for twenty-two feet and ten [illegible] Yale, Brickley's third in the shotput being the only Harvard point made.

Exeter Triumphs in Big Schoolboy Meet

NEW HAVEN, May 16.—Exeter easily won the Yale interscholastic meet today, scoring more than any two rival competitors. Its total was 55, while Mercersburg and Lawrenceville Academies were tied for second place with 23 points each.

Hotchkiss School of Lakeville, Ct., was fourth with 17 points.

In the first trial heat of the 100 yards dash, L. Williams of Exeter registered a mark of 9 4-5 seconds, but it will not be claimed because of the high wind which aided him.

Wright Wins Vault at Princeton Meet

PRINCETON, N. J., May 16.—The big amateur athletes who were scheduled to carry off the first honors in the open handicap track meet here today failed to produce the goods. Alvah Meyer and Mark Wright of Boston were the only prominent amateurs to win, the former taking the century in ten flat from scratch and the latter clearing the bar in the pole vault at twelve feet six inches.

I. D. MacKenzie, the Princeton miler, set a new record for the local track in the mile run. MacKenzie started from scratch and finished in second place, Giordono of Marquette C. C. who had a handicap of 125 yards winning the event. MacKenzie was clocked in 4.21 1-5.

PINCH HITTERS FAIL.

Rudolph gave but two bases on balls and struck out four men while Benton walked four and fanned two.

Pinch hitters for the Boston team failed to deliver the goods in today's contest. Dugey batted for Collins in [illegible] grounded out, Benton [illegible] Hoblitzell.

In the ninth Deal took up the stick and went to the plate in Griffith's place, Griffith having replaced Collins in right. Deal flied out to Moran and the game was over.

In the ninth Evers, the first man up, singled to centre field. Maranville went to the plate and after missing two let three go by, making it three and two. Benton put one over and the Braves' shortstop fell to the ground groaning. He arose and started to first while Evers took second, and the chances for tying the score looked better than any time during the contest.

Umpire Quigley, however, called Maranville back to the plate, claiming that he had purposely put out his arm and let the ball strike him. Evers was called back to first from second and Maranville promptly struck out.

EVERS PRAISES REDS.

The first game of the series, which was a one to nothing affair, was close behind today's game so far as playing was concerned, after the first inning, when Herzog's screaming double brought "Bullet" Moran across the plate from first base.

The second contest was entirely one-sided, Cincinnati scoring six runs to Boston's two. Yesterday's game was all "Red" until the ninth, when the Boston's made two runs.

Captain Evers said tonight, before leaving for Pittsburgh that his team will do better against the Pirates. "The remarkable ball the Reds are playing under Herzog was a big surprise to me," said Evers. "The ex-New Yorker will make some of the best teams take off their hats to him."

Maxwell Blows Up, and Terriers Win

BROOKLYN, May 16.—Maxwell blew up in the seventh inning today and before the smoke had cleared away, four St. Louis Federals had crossed the plate. The final score was 5 to 3 in favor of the visitors. Three singles, a double and a triple in that one frame, in addition to a couple of bobbles, cost the Brookfeds the game.

Keupper, the St. Louis twirler, was hit hard but was given excellent support. The score:

GIANTS AGAIN BEAT PIRATES

Tesreau Holds National Leaders Hitless for 8 2-3 Innings; Score Is 2 to 0.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 16.—For eight and two-thirds innings today, Jeff Tesreau was credited with a no-hit game against the Pirates. Then Joe Kelly bounced a hot grounder over Jeff's head. Two men were out at the time and no damage was done as Carey then flied out. The Giants won 2 to 0.

In the eighth inning, Viox drew a base on balls. He and Kelly were the only locals to reach first base during the game. It was generally known the Tesreau virtually had left a sick bed to pitch and the big crowd applauded him generously.

Magee's Wild Heave Costs Phillies Game

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 16.—A wild throw by S. Magee, gave the Cardinals the only run in today's game and the Phillies were beaten, 1 to 0. Miller grounded to Magee in the second and made third on the heave past Luderus. Wilson followed with a single that scored the run. Alexander and Doak pitched great ball, the former allowing but four hits. Doak held the Phillies to three hits and only one runner got as far as second, Cravath walking in the fifth and stealing. Brooklyn Evens Series with Cubs

CHICAGO, May 16.—The Brooklyn Dodgers evened their series with the Cubs by taking the final game, 2 to 1, today. Pierce and Allen divided honors on the slab, both pitching great ball. The Cubs got their only run in the fourth, when, with the bases full and none out, Leach hit into a double play on which Corridon scored.

Senators' Win Is a Gift from Naps

WASHINGTON, May 16.—In the fastest game of the season here, the Nationals made it three straight by taking the first game of the Cleveland series today by the score of 2 to 1.

Blanding, who started for the Naps, could not find the plate. He was replaced by Collamore in the opening inning with the bases filled and one out and two balls on the batter. He walked the first two men to face him, forcing in the local's only runs, but pitched brilliantly thereafter. Johnson pitched well for the locals.

ERRORS FATAL TO LYNN OUTFIT

Portland Wins, 3-2, in Battle Marked by Some Rather Rocky Fielding.

LYNN, May 16.—Smith's bad error on an easy throw defeated Lynn, 3 to 2, here this afternoon before a crowd of 3,800 fans. In the sixth with two out, Sheehan pegged Burns' grounder to first, but Smith muffed. A double by Bowcock, an error by Wendell and another timely hit by Hayden scored two runs in all.

Merrill's hit and Sheehan's miscue gave Portland the winning run in the seventh. Lynn's two runs were the result of Orcutt's sacrifice hit, Wendell's smash, followed by Jewell's bad throw and hits by Porter and McPherson.

HARVARD LOSES TO PENN, 12-2

Sayre Pitches Great Ball, While Hitchcock and Frye Are Batted All Over Lot.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—Pennsylvania continued on her winning baseball way at Franklin Field this afternoon by swamping Harvard by a score of 12 to 2.

It was a ball game for two innings with Hitchcock and Sayre doing fine twirling, but the Crimson pitcher was unsteady and could not stand the strain. He gave five passes to first and then was yanked out to make way for Frye.

The change was fatal, for Frye was worse, and the Quakers, making their hits when they did the most good, piled up runs at a great pace.

It became too one-sided to be interesting and the only fun was in guessing how many runs Penn would score.

Sayre, who has beaten Yale and Princeton twice each this year, was in his usual good form and held the Crimson batters safe all the way, although Clarke did manage to rap him for a home run.

EXETER DOWNS N. H. STATE, 2-0

Welles, Prep Twirler, Has Not Been Scored on in 51 Innings.

EXETER, N. H., May 16.—Welles, Exeter's star portsider, won his seventh straight game today by shutting out the New Hampshire State nine, while his team mates scored two runs. Welles has also set up the record applying the whitewash to his opponents for fifty-one consecutive innings.

Aside from Welles' remarkable pitching, both teams turned in some thrilling fielding stunts.

Casey killed a ninth inning rally by New Hampshire State when, with one out and men on first and second, he made a shoe-string catch of R. Brackett's liner to short left and doubled Hobbs off second.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 16.—Brown won a loosely played game from Amherst here today, 6 to 4. COLLINS PUZZLE TO THE TIGERS

Carrigan's Team Beats Detroit Leaders in Great Struggle by 3 to 0 Score.

day. He drew two passes and drove in two of the three runs, scoring Speaker in the third on a sacrifice fly and sending the same player home with a sharp single in the eighth.

TIGERS' RUSH HALTED.

The Tigers came here from New York, where they had cleaned up by winning three straight. They have a good lead in the American League race, but Carrigan's men set them back in the first battle, and promise to keep up the good work when the teams come together again on Monday. To keep in trim for their dangerous opponents they will journey down to Providence today and play an exhibition game against "Wild Bill" Donovan's Grays.

Bush began the game by popping the first ball pitched to Scott. Martin Kavanagh then tore off a two-bagger to the left-field bank and stole third on the first ball pitched to Cobb. This put Collins up in the air and he handed Tyrus four bad ones. Crawford drove to Collins, who held Kavanagh on third while he threw the fence-buster out at first, Cobb going to second. High pushed a high fly to Speaker, retiring the side amid applause.

Kavanagh, the Hackensack wonder, booted Hooper's fast grounder for a starter in the last half of the inning, but before Harry had a good look at first base he was doubled up on Yerkes' tap to the box, Steve running like an ice wagon. Lewis worked Cove for a pass, and then Speaker tore Kavanagh's hands apart with a screeching liner, putting Duffy on second. Scott let two perfect strikes go by, then fouled three or four. Between fouls Cove tried to catch Lewis off second, but Bush let the ball get by him and the runners advanced. Scott then hit to the box and was out at first.

SOX FAIL IN PINCH.

Burns flied to Lewis in the second and Moriarty walked, but the latter was doubled up on Stanage's tap to Collins.

In Boston's half, Gardner made Cove duck a fierce line single that whizzed out to centre. He took second on a pass to Engle. Carrigan also walked, filling the bases, and the crowd grew excited.

Collins got two bad balls for a starter, then allowed two strikes to be called, finally missing the third one. Hooper cast another damper on the assemblage by hitting weakly to the box and on the throw to the plate Gardner was forced.

There was still another chance with Yerkes up, but sad to relate, he hit to Moriarity and was out at first. Heartfelt sighs.

The Tigers began the third in businesslike fashion. Coveleskie singled to left and Bush pasted a safe one to centre. Kavanagh advanced the runners with a sacrifice and Cobb came up. Collins wouldn't give him a good one so he walked to first and filled the bases.

Carrigan yelled for Foster to warm up. A moment later Crawford, the dangerous man, popped to Scott. Everything was lovely again when High struck out to a mighty yell from the crowd.

Lewis kept the fans on edge by a safe one in Boston's half of the third the rap glancing off Cove's gloved hand. Speaker got four bad ones and Scott followed with a fly to short left, filling the bases again with none out.

TWO RUNS FOR SOX.

This time there was something doing. Gardner rapped to Bush, who threw to Kavanagh, forcing Scott but the double play failed and Lewis scored. Dingbat Engle lifted a fly to High and Speaker raced for the plate after the catch, beating the throw by an eyelash.

Gardner took second on the throw in, but was left when Uncle Bill was called out on strikes. But the Sox had a lead of two runs.

Collins fed the Tigers slow balls in the fourth and easily retired the side. Burns and Stanage lifted easy flies to Lewis while Moriarty went out, Scott to Engle.

For Boston Collins was out, Cove to Burns. Hooper flied to Crawford and Yerkes fanned.

Coveleskie, who made a single in the third, opened the fifth with a drive over Speaker's head, good for two bases. Bush hit hard to Gardner, who made a great stop and throw, retiring the little fellow. Kavanagh flied to Lewis and Cove still clung to second. The mighty Cobb got in bad for two strikes and when he finally popped to Yerkes a roar went up from Fenway P[illegible]

DOUBLE STEAL FAILS.

The Sox were easy. Lewis flied to High, while Speaker and Scott went out on infield grounders. Crawford popped to Gardner to open the sixth. High fanned again, but Burns came through with a single to centre, only to die stealing.

Gardner was robbed of a safe hit when Bush jumped in the air and pulled down his hard liner with one hand. Engle got on by the fr[illegible] route, but died stealing. [illegible] was safe on Bush's fumble and on Collins' solid liner to right, Bill raced to third. The ice-wagon battery then attempted the unexpected, but their double steal failed to work, Uncle Bill being caught at the plate.

Thanks to Carrigan's backing up the Sox retired the first Tiger batsman in the seventh. Moriarty hit to Scott and when Engle let the ball go by Moriarty sprinted for second. But Carrigan was backing up and picking the ball off the boxes he heaved to Yerkes in time to get the runner. Stanage followed with a single to centre and took second on Cove's sacrifice. Scott then made a pretty pickup of Bush's grounder and threw Ownie out.

In the last of the seventh Hooper fouled to Moriarty, Yerkes flied to High and Kavanagh threw out Lewis, but the Sox were still two to the good when the eighth inning started.

HOOPER MAKES STAR CATCH.

The Tigers grew dangerous right off the reel. Kavanagh was safe after Gardner made a fine play of his hot grounder, but Engle failed to hold the throw. Cobb, in trying to [illegible]k a ball close in allowed it to hit his bat and the ball rolled to Yerkes, who threw Ty out on a close play.

Crawford flied to Hooper and Kavanagh took third. Heilman, batting for High, worked Collins for a pass and it was up to Burns, who drove to deep right, but Hooper saved the day with a fine catch running backward. More heart disease.

Speaker started the last half and meeting the ball easily pushed a single to left. Scott put Tris on second with a bunt to Cove. The great Ty Cobb then earned his huge salary by pulling down a terrific drive from the bat of Larry Gardner, good for three bases under ordinary circumstances.

Cobb, after a hard sprint, leaped in the air and stopped the ball. It bounced up but Cobb caught it when it came down. Wild cheers followed the best catch of the season. Engle pasted a liner to right and Speaker scored the third run of the game. Dingbat stole a moment later but it was wasted when Carrigan struck out.

JENNINGS' EFFORTS FRUITLESS.

Hugh Jennings yelled himself hoarse at the opening of the ninth, but in vain. The Tigers went out in one-two-three-order. Moriarty popped to Scott, who made a splendid catch. Gardner's pretty stop and throw retired Stanage and Speaker ran away up for Vitt's short fly. The crowd went home happy.

TUFTS DEFEATS U. OF VERMONT

Medford Collegians Too Fast for Vermont; Take Game by 8 to 3 Count.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 16.—Tufts College defeated the University of Vermont this afternoon on Centennial Field in a poorly played game by the score of 8 to 3. Denning, who started in the box for Vermont, was relieved at the end of the fourth after three hits and a base on balls enabled the visitors to score three runs.

The game was delayed in starting because the Tufts team did not arrive until late.

Fenway Park Notes

Larry Gilbert, outfielder, and Pitcher Luque, the Cuban of the Braves, who did not go West with the Boston Nationals, leave at 10 o'clock today for Pittsburgh to join the team. Gilbert, who was badly spiked in Philadelphia, is now well again and will doubtless soon be in the Braves' lineup.

* * *

Secretary Stealthy Flanagan of the Providence Club attended the game. He came up to complete arrangements for the game at Rocky Point, R. I. today between the Red Sox and Grays. Carrigan will take the regular team, except Duffy Lewis, to Providence and it is possible that Joe Wood may pitch two or three innings. Janvrin may also play first base.

* * *

Uncle Bill Carrigan says he knows nothing of the report that the Red Sox will buy First Baseman Gainer of the Tigers. If Uncle Bill doesn't know anything about it, who does? Jennings may broach the subject on Monday.

* * *

Straw hats were much in evidence. The straw hat season is on. It lasts from May 15 to September 15—no later.

* * *

Boston's half of the second was a terrible disappointment to the crowd. The Sox had the bases filled with none out, but neither Collins, Hooper nor Yerkes could bat a run across the pan.

* * *

But joy followed when the Tigers got three on in the third with one out and couldn't score with their best batters up. A mighty yell rent the air when High fanned for the third out. It was heart-breaking baseball.

* * *

Then in the last of the third the Sox filled 'em up again with a clean slate and this time they pushed a couple of runs over the plate much to the delight of the multitude.

* * *

Dingbat Engle made a fine pickup of Scott's low throw off Moriarty in the fourth.

* * *

Joseph Jackson, president of the Baseball Writers' Association and E. A. Batchelder are the Detroit newspaper men traveling with the Tigers.

* * *

Jim Eardley, Joe Sullivan and Huby Curley, baseball fans, collected $107.05 for the Lou Criger fund at the ball game yesterday.

It certainly was some ball game. Going up to the yard on Washday?

Hingham Swamped by Medford, 14-1

In a baseball comedy at Medford yesterday afternoon, Medford High defeated Hingham High by a score of 14 to 1. The Medford aggregation scored almost at will and was presented with many runs by Magner the defeated mound man, who issued nine free passes.

The Medford coach gave his substitute round material a little experience and during the course of the game, Ballou, Allard and Prendergast were heard from. All three showed up well.

TY COBB.

Claims Pirates Will Die Hard in Big National League Pennant Fight

Expects to Be Back Soon in Battle for Big League Hitting Honor

Written for the Boston Sunday American.

By TY COBB.

The battle between the Eastern and Western clubs in both the American and National Leagues is now on in earnest and though it is still early in the fight, the fans probably have been able to make some conclusions regarding the relative strength of the two sections.

Curiously enough, the Eastern clubs of both leagues have the same job before them, stopping the runaway pacemaker, which, in each case, is a Western outfit, Detroit in the American League and Pittsburgh in the National.

Our lead is not nearly so large as the one the Pirates have piled up, but it is a comfortable one, and we fully expect to go back home with a good hold on first place. If we do, they will have a mighty hard time catching us, for we have almost all of June at Navin Field, and defy anybody to lick us very badly right on our own stamping ground.

PIRATES WILL BE HARD TO STOP.

The Eastern clubs of the National League are up against it good and proper in trying to overtake the flying Pirates. That club will be home practically all of this month, meeting all of the seaboard teams in succession, and you may be sure that it isn't going to lose much ground while it stays at Forbes Field.

I look for New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia to have good trips this time. The Giants, now that they have settled down to the idea that they have a fight on their hands, should begin to play baseball, while the Dodgers and Phillies have done well enough at home to warrant the belief that they have real strength.

National League fans, in contemplating the huge lead of the Pittsburgh outfit, should not be discouraged to the extent of conceding the pennant to the Smoky City boys. I remember only too well that in 1911 the Tigers had a better start than the Pirates have now, winning twenty of the first twenty-two games. Then our pitching staff went to pieces, and it wasn't long before the Mackmen were right on our heels. The Philadelphia club caught us July 4 for a minute, but we went ahead again and managed to stay there until about the first of August, when Connie's men breezed by in a cloud of dust. We didn't see them again except from a long distance astern.

Of course, there is no getting around the fact that it looks like the Pirates are trying to make it a runaway race. They have everything that a ball club needs, good hitting, good pitching, ginger, and even some skill on the sacks, the latter a quality which has been sadly lacking for a long time. Yet they haven't the bunting cinched by any manner of means, and the other clubs do not intend to quit fighting for at least four months yet.

Expects Soon to Be Back in .300 Class.

There seems to be much consternation among the fans because some of us who have been lucky enough to pile up big averages in the past have been slow to get going this season. Personally, I certainly am not proud of my start. I was hitting about the size of my hat for a time, but I didn't get discouraged, and I think that they will begin to go safe for me regularly after a time. I expect to be up there somewhere in the 300 class, so my friends need not despair.

As for leading the American League again, I am not worrying one way or the other. I like to get my hits and to acquire the honor of being the champion batsman of the circuit, but if the Tigers will stick up on top and win the pennant I shan't grieve much if I only bat my weight.

Fortunately, some of the other fellows on the club have been banging the ball in great style, so we weren't losing any games, even when I wasn't killing the ball. When I get going, I hope to be the means of winning some games for the club, which is more important than my individual figures.

It looks as though "Joe" Jackson would give everybody a battle for batting honors. He is going like a wild man now, and if he doesn't have a slump like he had late in the season of 1913, he will be a hard man to catch. "Joe" is a grand hitter any way you look at him, and if he beats me out he is welcome to all the honor that will accrue to him. I am sure that all the other batters who think that they have a chance to top the league feel the same way about it.

Others Will Soon Get Going in Proper Shape.

There is really no reason to worry about Speaker, Collins, Baker, Gandil and some of the other fellows who were bunched around the .250 mark a couple of weeks ago. All of these fellows are natural .300 batters, and unless they have some frightfully bad luck they'll all be where they belong before long.

Some of the papers have attributed Speaker's slow start and my own to the large salaries they credit us with receiving. Well, you can be sure that the figures on my bi-weekly check have nothing to do with those in the box score opposite my name. I hit because I love to hit primarily, and whether I am getting $15,000 a year or $1,500, I am always going to be in there trying to land the ball. Speaker must feel exactly the same way about batting.

There is something more in playing ball than the money you receive. Most players really love the game, and when they are out on the field they have something else to think about besides how much dough they are getting. We like to be paid for our talents, and to be paid well, but because a man gets a raise in salary he isn't going to swell up so that he can't see the ball any more.

SOMERVILLE HIGH DEFEATS EVERETT

Red and Blue Scores Second Suburban League Victory by 4 to 2.

Somerville High won its second Suburban League game of the week when it defeated Everett High on Recreation Field, Somerville, yesterday afternoon, 4 to 2. Over two thousand people witnessed the battle.

Both Pierotti for Everett and Fitzgerald for Somerville pitched splendidly, both allowing but three hits. The Everett boy struck out ten, while Fitzgerald got six on strikes.

The game was nip and tuck up to the eighth inning. Everett made a gallant but valiant rally in the final chapter. The score:

hurdles. Jackson, the star colored hurdler, was shut out in the opening heat. Though he took the lead at the start, Potter, the Yale flyer, caught him at the half-way mark, while Shedden shot by going over the last stick. Potter equalled the dual record for the event when he was caught in 15 4-5 seconds.

The second heat was easy for Willetts of Yale, though Harvard got a man in when Freeman outfooted Davidson of Yale.

Captain Barron of Harvard restored confidence, however, by going out in the century and taking the first heat away from Cornell, Yale's best bet, in a thrilling fight to the tape. The Blue runners took the other two places.

Foley, the only Harvard runner in the second heat, had too much speed for the field and won easily in 10 2-5 seconds, the same time as made in the opening heat.

POUCHER SETS NEW RECORD.

There were six starters in the mile. Poucher, the Yale favorite taking the lead at the gun and holding it for half a lap when MacLure of Harvard shot out with Peckham at his heels. They made the first quarter in 59 2-5 seconds and the half in 2.07 1-5, running in the same order.

Passing the half-mile mark, Poucher again jumped to the front, followed by Smith and Hatch, two other Elis. The long Yale star set a hot clip to the three-quarter mark, which he reached in 3.21. MacLure made a game effort on the last lap, but could not catch the flying New Haven trio, who chalked up eight points for Yale. Poucher smashed the dual meet record by finishing in 4.23, three seconds better than the mark made last year by Norris of Yale.

WILKIE WINS THE QUARTER.

The quarter was a great battle all the way between Wilkie of Yale and Bingham of Harvard. The Yale sprinter cut out a furious clip at the start, and at the halfway mark had a ten-yard lead. Bingham tried hard to get him, and did succeed in cutting down half a dozen yards, but had not enough speed left to pass him. Rock of Harvard finished third, six yards back of his team mate. The time, 49 1-5s., was not quite as fast as had been looked for.

Yale netted eight more points in the high hurdle finals, when Potter broke the tape, closely followed by Shedden and Willetts, his team mates. Freeman, the only Harvard man who qualified, never had a chance against the Blue flyers.

Harvard's first win of the afternoon came in the 100-yard dash, which Captain Barron of Harvard won by showing a wonderful burst of speed from the gun to the tape. He was fully 3 yards ahead of Cornell at the end. Ricketts of Yale was a close third. Barron's time was 10 1-5 seconds, though he probably would have done even had he been pushed at the finish.

BROWN SETS NEW RECORD.

Captain Brown of Yale lived up to all the good things said about him when he went out and beat Capper of Harvard and hung up a new dual record doing it, his time, 1 minute 54 seconds, being 3-5 seconds better than the mark he made last year. The winner took the front at the gun and started off at a furious gait, with Capper and Scotten tacked on right at his heels. They reached the quarter well bunched in 57 seconds, then Brown let out a notch and opened up half a dozen yards on the field. Capper made a gallant attempt to nail him coming in the home stretch, but was not equal to it, and Brown won as he pleased by about a dozen yards.

Yale qualified three men for the finals in the low hurdle, Potter winning the first heat and Shedden the second. Jackson of Harvard worked his way in by finishing second to Potter while Willetts of Yale took the place in the other heat.

BARRON AGAIN WINS.

Once again Captain Barron of Harvard showed his great speed in the first heat of the furlong, in which he easily outfooted Yale's best sprinter Cornell, in the rather poor time of 22 4-5 seconds. Ricketts of Yale also had a walkaway in the second trial breaking the cotton several yards ahead of Foley and Rollins, both of Harvard.

The two-mile run was easily the greatest race on the meet and was won by Boyd, the Harvard cross-country captain, after a desperate battle with Clark of Yale. These two fought it out practically over the entire distance, though Wilbur of Yale and Blackman of Harvard stayed up with them until the mile and a half mark was reached. From that point on the two went out and had a furious give and take battle over the last two laps. Going into the final quarter Clark sprinted and held the front till the turn into the home stretch was reached, fighting off all Boyd's hard attempts to go by him coming into the home stretch, however, the Crimson star undid a spurt and came to the tape going like a dash man. Clark was about eight yards back. Southworth of Harvard, who had trailed the field the greater part of the race, came strong in the last lap and got third. Boyd's time, 9m. 42 4-5s., was a new dual meet record, breaking the one he established in 1912 by 3 1-5s.

POTTER SECOND TIME WINNER.

Potter of Yale repeated in the long hurdle event, having very little trouble coming home well ahead of Shedden, his team mate. Jackson of Harvard was a poor third. Captain Barron also turned in his second win in the final of the 220, the last track event on the program. Coming strong at the finish, after a poor start, he broke the worsted two yards ahead of Cornell, who, in turn, led Foley of Harvard by a couple of feet.

DORCHESTER TEAM LOSES TO LATIN

Dolson Pitches Great Ball and Takes Fast Game by 5 to 2 Score.

Boston Latin's strong nine went to the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester yesterday afternoon and took Dorchester High's scalp in a 5 to 3 game, both nines showing the best kind of baseball throughout the contest and keeping the large crowd on edge.

H Gill pitched a star game for Dorchester, striking out seven of the heavy hitting Latin boys, and although his team hit for the same number of bases as the Latin players, the safe blows were so scattered that they did not count for runs.

NEWTON TOO FAST FOR MECHANICS

Boston High School Boys Beaten 9 to 3; Kellar Pitches Star Game.

Newton High trounced Mechanic Arts High, 9 to 3, yesterday, in an errorless game on the Claflin field, Newtonville. The home team got an early jump on the visitors and piled up its runs in the first two innings.

Kellar, Newton's substitute pitcher, pitched six innings and struck out seven men. Wansker was the star hitter, getting three safeties out of four times at bat, one of which was a three-bagger.

YANKEE GOLF RAID ON BRITAIN BEGINS MONDAY

TOURNEY FOR AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP

WALTER CAMP SAYS ENGLISH FEAR TRAVERS

OUIMET, EVANS AND J. D. TRAVERS ARE THE LEADERS

Americans, for the First Time, in a Formidable Invasion of Great Britain.

TOURNEY IS AT SANDWICH

Play Begins Tomorrow in the Series for the British Amateur Title.

Written for the Boston Sunday American

By WALTER CAMP.

Beginning tomorrow the interest of every golfer in this country will centre on the English course at Sandwich, where begins the first round of the British amateur championship. We have had men there before, but never such a strong invasion as the body of American players who will represent us on this occasion.

In the year when Walter J. Travis won this event six Americans went over—Byers, Emmett, Horstmann, Maeler and Burton being the others. Horstmann and Maeler were put out in the first round. Byers and Burton lasted until the third.

This will be Jerome Travers' second visit, for he played in the championship at Muirfield in 1909 and was put out in the first round. In 1911 "Chick" Evans stayed in at Prestwick until the fifth round.

Heinrich Schmidt, as will be remembered, at St. Andrews last year was only put out in the round before the semi-final by Harold Hilton, who won the championship, and that, too, on an extra hole.

BRITISH HAVE MANY STARS.

All our golfers on this side are familiar with the prowess of Hilton from his actual demonstration here, but they do not realize what class means over there in regard to numbers. Our best men are as good as theirs, but the number of our first-class men is less than the number of plus men they can turn out.

Hilton, Johnny Ball, Harris, Lassen, Lord, Charles Hope, Maxwell, Blackwell, Graham, Robb, Laidlay, Scott are all good men, liable to win at any time, and it takes wonderful mental poise to go on meeting these plus men round after round, for any one of them may do a marvelous performance, and very few of them can be reckoned upon at any time to play badly; so that when one of these plus men gets one of our men by perhaps a brilliant streak two down, it is going to be mighty hard to get those two holes back.

However, we have in Travers a match player of the highest quality, who, when once well started—that is, getting by the first round or two—will play better and better as his opponents extend him.

TWO MORE GREAT ONES.

"Chick" Evans and Ouimet are two other men to be reckoned with. All the Americans will be more or less affected by the change in conditions, and the putting may bother them, although Travers seems to have conquered his new putter and is using it well.

Webber of Toledo is a good standard golfer, and Fraser Hale is a brilliant player just out of the youthful [illegible], being only twenty-one years old.

As to experience on the course, Evans started over late, but he played [illegible] open championship on that [illegible] in 1911, and has already gotten some practice since he landed. Jerome Travers' 74 at Westward Ho and [illegible] at Sandwich have impressed the English more than anything else.

Evans thinks well of Ouimet's chances and also believes that Parker Whittemore, another man who did well over there in 1911, is liable to come to the top. In fact, as it is known about Boston, he has beaten Ouimet at both medal and match playing.

Fred Herreshoff, with a succession of brilliant days, might get to the final, as he did with Hilton over here, and, at any rate if he goes far along in the rounds will certainly put out some dangerous men.

BRITISH GOOD "DOPESTERS."

To the American enthusiast the cold, calm, unexcitable sizing up of the English critic is seldom entirely understood. Here in this country, just previous to a boat race, partisans of each crew are apt to see nothing but the merits of their own men, while the outsider forms his judgment largely without any basis on what the crews have done the year before.

In England hardly a university race is rowed where the predictions and betting do not conform exactly to the relative merits of the crews, and the result usually confirms this judgment.

So in golf the English critic cannot see how the American golfing writer or enthusiast, who [illegible] a few months before the open professional tournament in the United States, had hardly heard of Ouimet, and when asked about him at Garden City consigned him to only average, should, simply on account of Ouimet's one success in the open, now be convinced that he is the greatest golfer in the world. It is quite true that we are much too prone to this sort of enthusiasm which warps the judgment.

TRAVERS' RECORD BEST.

To come down to a real cold-blooded study of chances in the British amateur championship, therefore, our best man, from his records carried over a number of years as to quality and match play, is Jerome Travers.

The English critics recognize this, and fear that our other men may put Travers to come through to the point, a couple of rounds from home, where the field is narrowed down, and he has a chance to exhibit that fighting spirit of his.

Finally, to come to our weaknesses, we all know that Travers has been many times badly off in his wooden club play, and has had to rely upon the big iron, which, as every first-class Englishman familiar with Sandwich knows, would probably take away Travers' chances of winning.

OUIMET STILL UNSTEADY.

As to Ouimet, he has not shown his form in the early play over there. He has no long period of years' record of victories over here. Should he play in the inspired way which carried him through the open and the play-off at Brookline, it would bring him through, and we can hope for probabilities and not possibilities.

Evans has always been more or less troubled with his putting, and he has never been a lucky player. As the professional baseball player would say of a pitcher, he "has everything but it hasn't served to bring him through.

Perhaps the real point is that he is not hard enough on his opponent in his determination to make the most of everything.

'CHICK' EVANS' STORY OF BIG GOLF TOURNEY

Famous Player Says America Has a Fine Chance to Win British Title.

PRAISES FRANCIS OUIMET

By "CHICK" EVANS.

The Boston American's Special Correspondent with the American Golfers in England.

LONDON, May 16.—There is a great deal of divergent opinion concerning the chances of the American entries for honors in the British golf championship which takes place next week, but as the time for the contest draws near there is a general tendency in golf circles here to regard the Americans as far more dangerous than first indications seemed to make them.

The entrants from the United States have taken considerable time to get acclimated, and their early practice games were by no means an indication of their normal form. During the last few days they have been rounding into shape, and now there is every hope that one of them may win.

Francis Ouimet, whose name will go down into golf history in connection with his wonderful performance at Brookline last Fall, will be a far different Ouimet from that seen by local golf experts on the Kentish links a week or so ago. He has been constantly improving and there is the best of reasons to hope that he will display the same characteristics next week as he did in Brookline. If he does, there is small doubt that he will be the leading factor in the championship.

TRAVERS PLAYING STRONG GAME.

I am sure it will be hard for the Englishmen to defeat Jerome Travers, who has won our national four times out of his last five attempts. His golf in England this Spring has been considered the best of all the Americans and he is the most feared by the Britishers. He goes round the links in unbroken silence, a look of firm determination on his face. His winning the Easter medal at Westward Ho this year was a notable achievement and he has been playing the Sandwich course exceedingly well.

Fred Herreshoff is certainly one of the strongest players among American golfers and while he has not been playing very well over here, having a sprained ankle, he ought to be good for two or more of the enemy and if he rounds into form his prospects are excellent.

One of the West's best golfers is Fraser Hale. He can always give any player a good match and he has been playing very well of late and ought to make a good headway in the big event. Harold Weber was a semi-finalist in the National championship in 1906 and seems to be an open champion wherever he competes for the title.

MASSACHUSETTS PLAYER.

He has played a good deal of golf this year and made a good showing at St. Andrews last Spring.

He is also well acquainted with the contest course.

A. G. Lockwood is not so good as he used to be, but there's always a possibility that he may show the way to the others. He was Massachusetts State champion for three years and has won many major events. C. W. Inslee gave Hilton a good run in the national amateur in 1911 and should do well next week.

GOLF

[illegible] the fourteenth [illegible]. The new [illegible] traps and mounds near the green [illegible] many, but the [illegible] players liked the new [illegible] than the old and voted it a great imp[illegible].

W. Wimbierr as a golfing architect does not [illegible] the taint of professionalism as his work is done purely from [illegible] motives. He is trying to make the Country Club course the best, and so to arrange all the holes so that there will not be an indifferent one in the round. The eventual outcome of such golf [illegible] a raising of the status of golfers in Massachusetts.

* * *

In speaking of the fourteenth hole, it would be interesting to see just how many of the home club members and visitors who semi-annually compete at Brookline would like to have the big chestnut tree to the left cut down. Golfing experts say trees have no place on a golf course, [illegible] of the one that carries close to 200 yards would be penalized by a carom out of bounds, a second [illegible] into the deep quarry [illegible], or ruined at the fourteenth hole by this mammoth mass of [illegible].

* * *

A young golfer, who will bear watching this [illegible] year has been very good and better things are promised in the future. He is one of Francis Ouimet's closest friends, having played interscholastic golf and friendly matches with the open champion for several years.

* * *

Sullivan has been more fortunate than many other Boston golfers who are seeking news from across the water, for Ouimet has sent several epistles to his chum in which golf is not [illegible] theme. Sullivan, however, admits that Ouimet feels that he is going to do himself justice in the English amateur championship this week, as the latest letter stated he was doing much better scoring than he did during his first few weeks in England.

* * *

There is one American golfer abroad who has not been mentioned as a possibility in any of the events, and his golf in New England has [illegible] Long[illegible], Wannamoisett is the man, and from the fact that he and H. J. Topping, Greenwich, have been playing together for the St. Georges Vase it is evident that he took his clubs abroad, at least.

* * *

A practical joker might have lost his social prominence at Palm Beach the past Winter had he been discovered. At the first tee there is a large sign which reads, "High heel shoes are prohibited on the course." The women do not pay any particular attention to rules and regulations and do not believe in signs, but [illegible] ere. The postscript read, "But petticoats are not."

* * *

Mrs. Hunter Ekhart, of Reading, Pa., won three important tourneys at Southern Pines the past Winter. As this is her first year at the game, considerable interest was aroused by her play. She will visit her brother "Ted" Wilder, of Boston, very shortly and will probably play a few matches with friends at local clubs. Ted [illegible] the Fenway and make up some mixed foursomes matches for the links instead.

Keeping a golf course in condition is a tremendous undertaking. At the Country Club motor-mowers are used for the most part. They are equipped with cutters and rollers that do [illegible] mendous umbrella attachment which is supposed to keep the heat of the sun from the operator.

W. R. Simons of Garden City, the amateur golf champion of Florida, is equally proficient when it comes to dancing. When a tango or maxixe was played at Palm Beach the Winter visitors always gave the champion the floor, realizing that he knew how to dance. It would be a real treat for Boston dancers to see his steps and poses [illegible] would be left out of [illegible] dancing here in Boston where any "flop" "dip" or "dive" dubbed thusly.

Don't forget to get your entries in, secure your partners, and get a starting time for the open amateur meeting at Woodland the last three days of the week. While it is not essential that the entry be sent in prior to the start, [illegible] their place for the comfort of all. Post entries will be accepted.

T. G. Stevenson has not been seen in local golfing circles for nearly two years. Business and his wedding were responsible in part for his absence, but he again entered in an open event, and did well considering that he has played so little. He was one of the three on the anxious seat tied for the last two places in the recent qualification round at the Country Club.

Golfers' colors defined. "Blew" and "Yaller."

* * *

Rodney Brown of Meadowbrook had a good round of 81 recently at Sippican. He found the greens very fast, requiring a 5 after driving the [illegible] one, but seemingly gaining experience enough from his mistakes at that green to aid him throughout the round. One remarkable feature of his golf, was the fact that he missed all the bunkers, which are so placed that a golfer must be accurate all the time to avoid them.

Proverbial "golf widows" have existed ever since the game of golf was invented, but actual "golf widowers" will soon form a new sect around Boston on account of the two important tourneys that will keep the married women [illegible].

During that time, practice for the competition in the individual championships of both the Boston women's and Eastern Women's Golf Association, and the team matches for the Griscom Cup following the latter leave only the intermission afforded by Memorial Day and a Sunday.

Eaton Wins Match at Bear Hill Links

Theodore Eaton was the winner of the kicking duffers handicap held this afternoon at the Bear Hill Golf club, Wakefield, by pulling the lucky number from the hat at the close of the contest. The best net card for the play was turned in by Charles E. Walton, who assisted by a 23 handicap got a 66. The best gross for the 18 holes was made by Theodore Eaton. The scores follow:

Meadow Brook Golf Is Won by Nowell

READING, May 16.—The event at the Meadow Brook links this afternoon was a grave yard tournament, and was won by Charles H. Nowell, his alloted stokes landing him five feet to the left of the 19th green. His runner up in the match was G. Paul Forbes, who finished within four feet of the 19th green. Next Saturday the Meadow Brook Club will entertain the members of the Massachusetts Golf Association at its annual tournament. A large number of entries from prominent amateurs have been received.

WILDER CAPTURES SPRING MEETING

Country Club Golfer Wins on Clyde Park Course for Third Time.

By H. P. FARRINGTON.

For the third time in his golfing career, which dates back over fifteen years, Henry H. Wilder of the Country Club captured the classic Spring meeting on his home course at Clyde Park. He defeated F. H. Hoyt of Woodland, the runner-up last year in the Fall meeting, and a several-time semi-finalist, at Brookline, by 5 up 3 to play.

Wilder played the best golf of any individual after the qualification, and won on his merits.

F. H. Hoyt met J. D. Standish, Jr., the titled Michigan player, in this "Marathon" contest, and it was nip and tuck all the way around. Hoyt led the greater part of the time, but never by more than one hole, which his younger opponent would take back, and lose again with equal celerity.

Standish appeared to have his chance at the first extra hole where his second shot nearly reached the 430-yard green. Hoyt was short in two but nicely on the green in 3. As Standish over-ran his approach the hole was eventually [illegible]. Hoyt had the opportunity at the next, after Standish had missed his second stroke, and was well over the hole in 3. Hoyt was in a good position to reach the green in 2 but pulled into a trap short of the green from which he recovered beautifully to within 4 feet of the cup. Standish made a valiant attempt to hole a 25-footer and the ball would have gone down had it been going a trifle slower. Hoyt was not equal to the opportunity offered to clinch the match, and another half in 5 resulted.

At the deciding hole both drove well. Standish sliced his second and Hoyt topped his to keep matters on an even keel. The latter was short of the green in 3, while Standish failed to get out of the bunkers and mounds until he had played 5, his putt for a 6 was short. Hoyt had no difficulty in winning the hole and match in 6 to 7.

The other semi-final contest between Wilder and Jessie Guilford, the long swatting State champion of New Hampshire, brought out many amusing holes. Guilford kept up his batting average from the tee but messed under-hand strokes, showing little finish with his irons and mashie play.

The cards of this match follow:

Wilder—Out	6	5	5	3	5	4	4	5	5	—42
Hoyt—Out	6	4	7	4	4	6	4	5	8	—48
*Wilder—In				3	4	5	3	6	4
*Hoyt—In				4	5	7	3	4	6

*Bye holes not played.

COUNTRY CLUB CUP—SEMI-FINAL.

H. H. Wilder, Country, defeated Jesse Guilford, Intervale, 3—2.

F. H. Hoyt, Woodland, defeated J. D. Standish, Jr., Detroit, 1 up, 21 holes.

Final—Wilder defeated Hoyt, 5—3.

Harvard Stars Add New Tennis Scores

Harvard's tennis stars added another victim to their list yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Longwood Club, Brookline, when Princeton was disposed of in singles by 5 sets to 1 on in doubles by 3 sets to 0.

The Crimson suffered one humiliation, Cooper of the Tigers spoiling their clean slate of straight sets won. Six men represented each university, and Cooper defeated Hastings by 9-7, 7-5, not after a hard fight.

With Princeton and Harvard both undefeated, the playing was for blood, but the veteran Crimson racquet stars managed to win every other game in straight sets. The summary:

GOLFERS CROWD LOCAL COURSES

Good Cards Turned in by Big Fields at Many Country Clubs.

Golfing was a popular diversion at all of the Greater Boston courses yesterday and large fields took part in the members' tourneys. Woodland led for numbers, with 67 entered in two classes for the Handicap vs. Par trophies. In Class A, B. L. Longley with 1 down was the victor, while T. P. Cole with 3 down was best in Class B.

Brae Burn held a four-ball medal handicap with [illegible] players [illegible] and C. B. Gleason and [illegible] so well and used [illegible] handicaps to such great [illegible], that they won with a fine total [illegible]. They were closely pressed by F. [illegible] Nason and F. P. Hayward, who totaled one stroke higher.

Prescott Bigelow, Jr., led a field of 15 players at Belmont Springs with a 90 and in fact was the only player to get under 100 for gross honors.

Chestnut Hill held a handicap medal sweepstake and A. M. Jones, and M. L. and A. M. Crosby led the field.

VANITIE MAY MISS FIRST CUP BOAT CLASH

May Not Be Ready to Meet Defiance and Resolute June 2

Here are the Jolly Tars Who Will Sail the Three American Cup Yachts.

In the upper picture are a group of the sailors of the Resolute—the Herreshoff boat, built at Bristol, R. I. They wear the old-fashioned sailors' suits and caps. In the centre are the men of the Vanitie—the Gardner boat, built at Neponset. They're wearing working clothes of dull colored canvas. Below are the men of the Defiance—the Owen yacht, built at Bath, Me. They are clad in the white duck suits and caps of the type used in the navy.

Neponset Boat Not Yet Rigged, But Resolute Is Well Tried-Out, and Defiance Comes to Marblehead This Week

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

Arrangements have been practically completed for an informal reception to the big New England built, New England designed and Boston backed cup boat Defiance at Marblehead on Wednesday. The Defiance is due to leave Bath, Maine, where it was launched last Monday with all sorts of pomp, on Tuesday morning if the weather permits.

The boat will be towed out of the Kennebec and up the coast to Marblehead by one of the tugs of the Boston Towboat Company. The Boston contingent, headed by Colonel Charles Hayden, the Boston banker, will be at Marblehead, making their headquarters at the Eastern Yacht clubhouse at Marblehead Neck.

Several of the men from Philadelphia and New York who are also members of the syndicate which is financing the big mahogany racing craft that New England is practically pinning its faith on to defeat Nat Herreshoff and the Resolute on June 2, will be present. Weather conditions makes this program tentative.

IROLITA AS ESCORT.

Escorting the Defiance will be the steel racing schooner Irolita, owned by P. Walter Clark, a Philadelphia and Boston banker, and the fast power cruiser Zip-a-Long, also one of the Clark fleet of yachts. Mr. Clark has turned his big private racing yacht Irolita over to Captain [illegible] Howell and the crew of the Defiance for a tender and they are living aboard and will continue to do so during the racing season that starts June 2 with a race for three cup class boats under the direction of the New York Yacht Club.

After [illegible] inspection, the Defiance [illegible] taken in tow and carried along the Massachusetts coast [illegible] around Cape Cod to Greenport, L. I., where it will be fitted for the [illegible]. The Defiance will be hauled out on May [illegible] for the June 2 race.

A set of sails made for the Vanitie has arrived at the Lawley plant at Neponset and they may be tried out before the boat is taken around the Cape to City Island, New York, for a [illegible] but it is doubtful.

WHY HE WENT ALONE.

An unconfirmed story is going the rounds among those interested in the three big boats that what induced Alexander S. Cochran to build the Vanitie with his own money rather than that of a syndicate was because some of the leading members of the New York Yacht Club who formed the syndicate building the Herreshoff boat and also those that have some money in the Defiance syndicate were [illegible] inviting this wealthy young man to come in. He refused when asked and built a cup boat of his own.

Although the story [illegible] confirmed [illegible] does not look good on its face, the fact remains that the Resolute and the Defiance have on their sterns, [illegible] after their names in gold the letters N Y C, meaning New York Yacht Club. The Vanitie has just N [illegible] New York.

It is a [illegible] possibility that the Vanitie, which was built at the Lawley [illegible] Neponset, may not reach [illegible] at Glen Cove, N. Y. on [illegible]. If it does the work will have to be rushed, as it will be at least [illegible] before the big steel mast can be stepped and the boat rigged. [illegible] still on over at Lawley. [illegible] At first it was said that this [illegible] being done by orders of Alexander S. Cochran of New York, who has been game enough to build a cup class boat without the aid of any syndicate and at a personal expense of a quarter of a million.

But now it is rumored that possibly threatened labor troubles may be the cause. Whichever it is, all the satisfaction one can get is from a watchman, who says "no admittance." Even if you ask for one of the firm or the designer, William Gardner of New York, you receive the same answer.

The Resolute, built by Herreshoff at Bristol, R. I., with the [illegible] amount of [illegible] is now in the hands of the syndicate of [illegible] members of the New York Yacht Club, managed by [illegible] and Charles [illegible] Adams [illegible] of Boston. The Resolute will be [illegible] up Long Island Sound from Newport early this week to give the New Yorkers [illegible] creation from the [illegible] Herreshoff's [illegible].

Mr. [illegible] Newport that the boat [illegible] present [illegible] the very best of satisfaction and everything was progressing smoothly. [illegible] the other two boats that [illegible] meet the Resolute [illegible] five races that start [illegible].

The Resolute has been [illegible] every sail that [illegible] possess [illegible] crew [illegible] at a stretch [illegible] weather.

This fact [illegible] to the Herreshoff [illegible] will have a crew [illegible] thorough [illegible].

A NEW ENGLAND FAVORITE.

The Defiance seems to be the [illegible] of the New England people generally. It is the nearest to a boss [illegible] any of them.

The Resolute, however, [illegible] the reputation of the Herreshoff [illegible] the [illegible] favorite [illegible] certainly be a [illegible] weather conditions are [illegible] well worth going to see. Hundreds of tugs and pleasure steamers [illegible] as private craft, have already been engaged to go to the races.

The June 2 [illegible] will be the first meeting at which Captain [illegible] B. Howell of the Defiance, Captain Chris Christensen of the Resolute and Captain Bill Dennis of the Vanitie have met. These three skippers need no introduction to one another and they are frank enough now to say that they are out for blood.

On board the Defiance as one of its crew will be the son of Captain Christensen of the Resolute. On the Vanitie will be, as assistant, Harry Haff, son of famous old Captain "Hank" Haff.

The crews of the Defiance and Vanitie will have but a short [illegible] previous to the race of June [illegible] to get any sort of a line on their boats, but from their appearances they are a [illegible] active bunch of sailors.

DEFIANCE CREW HITS.

It's ancient history to tell of the pools that have been held [illegible] the various crews [illegible] the story [illegible] Defiance crew down [illegible] ready with the money [illegible] never seen [illegible].

The [illegible] internation[al] [illegible] ever before.

Aboard the Resolute will be [illegible] of Harvard College, Robert W. [illegible] one of the best football players Harvard ever had [illegible] Jr., another old-time Harvard athlete.

The Defiance will have [illegible] George Owen, the designer, who carries the colors of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and George S. Pynchon, another college graduate.

The Vanitie [illegible] equipped with [illegible] have one [illegible] size, and [illegible] who [illegible] dson [illegible] of New York [illegible] has been sailing yachts since he was in knee pants, and who now designs, builds and sails his own yachts, and WINS.

ANDOVER TRACK TEAM IS WINNER

Worcester Academy Athletes Are Vanquished in Spirited Games; Score 55½ to 52½.

ANDOVER, May 16.—The Phillips Academy track team defeated Worcester Academy this afternoon in a very closely contested meet, by the score of 55½ to 52½. The final result was in doubt until the pole vault, the last event of the meet, was run off. Andover secured a tie [illegible] first and third in this event and [illegible] points to win. FIVE COUNTRIES REPRESENTED IN 500-MILE RACE

Two Days of Racing Will Be Necessary to Reduce the Field of Entries to Thirty Contestants Permitted by Rules of Contest and Size of Track

By J. C. KERRISON.

The big men of the motor racing world are beginning to establish their headquarters at the Indianapolis track and take up the work preliminary to the 500-mile event on Memorial Day next. The list of entries this year is greater than in any previous race and brings about rather an unusual condition of affairs. The race itself is limited to thirty entries and yet there have already been received no less than forty-five. This means that in the preliminary work some fifteen cars must be relegated to the shelf, for under no condition will more than thirty vehicles be permitted to be driven on the track at one and the same time. Consequently the preliminary trials take unto themselves a greater importance than in previous years.

Heretofore the speed trials have been considered as perfunctory performances, it only being necessary for the cars to negotiate a certain distance within a given time. More than that will be demanded this year, and fifteen cars showing the poorest time for a given distance will be eliminated. Therefore the speed trials will, to the student of racing, be more interesting than heretofore, and it is probable that two days will be devoted to this elimination process.

The trials will undoubtedly start on Tuesday the 26th and continue to Thursday the 28th. Friday, the day before the race, is a day of rest, no speed work being permitted on the Indianapolis track the day prior to the 500-mile race. That day is usually spent in giving the final touches to the different cars and completing the final details of the arrangements.

The Indianapolis race has but once been won by a six-cylinder car, when three years ago, Harroun, in a Marmon Wasp, secured the victory. In all other races the victory went to a four-cylinder car and it now looks as though history will repeat itself this year. Of the forty-five entries thirty-nine have four-cylinder motors, five have six-cylinder motors and from one, termed the "Mystery," but little, if any, mechanical data has yet been received. Of the six-cylinder cars all but one are of foreign construction, two being numbered among the English representatives, one a Belgium and the other a German product.

Five nations are represented in the cars entered, they being France, England, Belgium, Germany and America, but, strange though it may seem, the nationalities of the drivers are confined to four, there not being an English driver in the field. The cars of the English teams are manned by either Frenchmen or Americans.

Goux, who won the race last year, has returned to defend his honors and if possible take the trophy once more to France. He, however, will find a strong competitor in his teammate, Georges Boillot, who has performed some wonderful driving feats in continental Europe. He has never driven on the Indianapolis track before and so recently has [illegible] out a lot of preliminary work for himself. This year the Peugeot cars have been [illegible] for speedway work and the same [illegible] be said of the Sunbeams, the English representatives, which last year experienced so much trouble [illegible] owing to their long wheelbase.

All of the foreign drivers are men of experience and the majority of them have already driven in this country, although it is true that but few of them have had any experience on this famous track. All of the American drivers of note are entered and it can be said that these men will renew the battles of previous years.

The French representatives together with the mechanics, numbering twelve in all, arrived in New York on Friday and are expected to reach the track no later than Tuesday next when it is presumed that the majority of entries will be on the field.

Several improvements are being made on the track, including the construction of a new stand on the south turn. This makes the eighth pavilion to go up and gives the Speedway practically a mile of grandstand frontage, with seating accommodations for 60,000. A general overhauling of all structures on the grounds is now in progress, in order to be sure that they are in shape for the big day. A tunnel has also been dug under the south end of the track, reaching into the infield, allowing ingress and egress while the race is in progress.

All holders of the various intermediate speedway prizes and trophies have returned them to the management in accordance with their deed of gift.

The full list of entries of cars, drivers, cylinders, size of motor and piston displacement will be found in another column.

Taxicab Companies Use Nobby Treads

It is a far cry from Stockholm, Sweden, to San Francisco, California, not so far, however, but that both cities have found a common ground on which they have arrived at the same decision respecting a very important part of their city transportation problems.

In the Swedish capital, the principal taxicab operators, after thorough and exhaustive tests with various makes of tires, adopted the United States "Nobby Tread" and during [illegible] purchased many thousands of dollars worth of tires from the United States Tire Company.

In San Francisco, a city eight or ten thousand miles away from Stockholm, another company, and that the largest in the city, has arrived at the same conclusion in respect to the tire equipment with which their taxis should be shod. As the result [illegible] this company has a contract to use only "Nobby Treads" on all their machines.

In New York City the famous Yellow Taxicab Service uses "Nobby Treads" exclusively on the rear wheels, United States Smooth Treads on the front, [illegible] companies everywhere [illegible] adopting Nobby Tread.

TO EMPTY INNER TUBE.

Once or twice removal of the core of an air valve will usually impair the holding ability of the small rubber washer. A small screw having a groove lengthwise on one side, and threaded to fit the inner part of the valve, may be run down so as to press on the core and keep the valve open until the air can all escape, without removing the core.

Location of Tool Box Important

Accessibility Is One of Main Points Considered.

From the early days of the automobile industry, when changes in design came so fast that a new model bore very little resemblance to its predecessor of the year before down to the past year or so, there have been one or two details of design that were never satisfactorily disposed of. One of these, says J. H. McAlman, was the location of the tool box. For many years this important adjunct of the motor car was carried on the running board—accessibility was important and that was the easiest place to put it.

When makers began to look to the appearance of their cars, however, and gradual refinements brought the straight line, flush-sided body into vogue, the tool box looked decidedly out of place in so conspicuous a position—it marred the effect of the clean body lines. The important point being to get it out of sight, most makers provided a compartment under the seats and tucked the tools away in that, although a few stuck to the old running board location on account of its accessibility—some even stick to it yet.

It remained for the F. B. Stearns Company of Cleveland to provide in their Stearns-Knight cars for the current season a location that offers the utmost in accessibility without detracting from the appearance of the car, or, in fact, being in evidence at all.

In the Stearns-Knight, instead of one box, two compartments are provided, one on each side of the car. These compartments are located directly under the front seats between the chassis frame and running board apron, extending back underneath the frame.

THE DEADLY TOP.

A great majority of deaths from "turning turtle" are due to the top being up so that escape is impossible.

VIBRATION AND RATTLE.

A soft leather washer placed between two iron washers will often serve to stop the rattle of fenders and brace rods.

Salesmen Are Great Users of Roadsters

Motor Vehicles Save Travelers' Time and Money.

"The demand for cars by large corporations for the use of their traveling salesmen is steadily increasing," said R. C. Rueschaw of the Reo Motor Car Company of Lansing, Michigan. "Only a short time ago the American Radiator Company bought a quantity of Reo the Fifth roadsters for the use of their traveling salesmen, and an order has just been received from the U. S. Gypsum Company for the same type of cars for the use of their salesmen, several grain elevator and milling companies in the Western States have been heavy purchasers. In those territories salesmen are able to cover the ground more rapidly and economically by means of the automobile. For example, on a recent trip to Sioux City I met a traveling salesman of my acquaintance whose chief complaint had always been that the hardest part of his job was idling Sundays in small towns where he was not acquainted, but he solved this disagreeable feature by purchasing a Reo roadster, in which he now makes all of his weekly trips in four days, which enables him to spend his week ends at home."

Employes Rally to 'Safety First' Slogan

Goodrich Foremen Hold "Smoker" and Plan to Make Work Easier.

One of the most unique series of industrial meetings ever held in this country took place at the rubber factories of The B. F. Goodrich Company, Akron, Ohio, recently.

To the slogan of "Safety First" almost a thousand foremen, inspectors, managers and superintendents gathered to hear talks on safety, discuss ways and means of increasing efficiency throughout the huge rubber plant and hear their Works Manager, E. C. Shaw, tell them what the ideal working condition is.

The Goodrich Company, by this means, has started a safety campaign throughout its seventy-five acres of floor space and among its 15,000 employes. The object of the campaign is to make "Safety First" as much a part of the manufacture of its tires and other rubber goods as it already is a part of the tires' design and construction.

The meetings extended over several days and brought out practically every man in the Goodrich plant in authority. The sessions were experimental and the large attendance, enthusiasm and interest shown marked the idea as successful.

LITTLE KIDDIES TO HAVE OUTING

About [illegible] "kiddies" will be taken on the outing. They will represent the majority of the charitable homes in Greater Boston. Over 70 motor cars will be needed to transport this army of children to and from Nantasket. The Boston dealers have subscribed about half of the cars needed so it is evident that at least [illegible] persons will have to volunteer the use of their machine for this outing.

Last year about 1,500 little "shut-ins" were taken on this outing, and it was indeed an impressive scene. Many of the children rode in an automobile for the first time and their joy knew no bounds. Luncheon was served and quite an elaborate entertainment was provided. The expense is large and Secretary Campbell suggests that if car owners cannot loan their autos that a donation of money would be acceptable.

The outing is strictly nonsectarian. Children from the Salvation Army, St. Vincent Orphan Asylum, Home for Jewish Children, New England Peabody Home for Cripples, Sunnyside Day Nursery, Morgan Memorial Home, Margaret Fuller Home, South End Day Nursery, Cambridge Neighborhood House and many other charitable homes attended the outing last year.

All communications regarding the loan of cars or donations of money should be made to Chester I. Campbell, No. 5 Park square, Boston.

OUR SUCCESS PROVES OUR CLAIMS

If a man applies to you for a position, you would undoubtedly ask him for recommendations and inquire as to what he had accomplished. A man buying an automobile should ask the same things of the automobile salesman.

Find out for yourself the facts about the company, the number of years in business, the success of each car made, the general reputation. These things mean much to you.

And it is these things that we want you to find out about us. We are proud of our record. We have accomplished much, and, naturally, it is gratifying to us.

When buying an automobile you either get a success or a failure. Your car will be in proportion to the strength or weakness of the organization producing it. There is no other way of figuring it.

The Oakland has been a success since its inception.

Oakland cars are made in four and six-cylinder models, in a wide range of body designs, $1150 to $2600, fully equipped, f. o. b. factory.

LAST week we told the public that we were able to materially increase our factory production.

We told them that we would have Overlands for "immediate delivery" in practically every city and town in the country.

The effect was astonishing! Overlands moved faster and were sought and bought more rapidly than ever before!

All previous sales records were smashed into obscurity!

Now, Mr. and Mrs. Buyer—

If there is still the slightest doubt in your mind as to which is the best car to buy, the following facts alone should bring you to an immediate decision:—

The Overland is outselling every other similar car on the market—not because it is the only good car made, but because it does offer more downright value for less money than you can get in any other car manufactured.

And further—

This car is as accurately and as thoroughly manufactured, both from a quality and mechanical standpoint, as any of the highest priced cars in the world!

Hesitate no longer. Time lost is money lost. The Overland sales are leaping ahead every day. We are delivering over 5000 cars a month. If you wait until they are all gone you'll be compelled to spend a great deal more than is necessary.

Order yours today and save the difference.

SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING AT BETHLEHEM

Arrangements Completed for the Gathering of Members of A. A. A. Early in July.

The semi-annual meeting of the American Automobile Association will be held at Bethlehem, N. H., [illegible]. This meeting will immediately follow the close of the [illegible] from Chicago to Boston and should bring into New England a large number of tourists, especially [illegible] at the opening of the White Mountain touring season.

The selection of [illegible] the meeting was [illegible] of Chairman Lewis [illegible], Boston, who by the way has [illegible] his committee several members and it now includes [illegible] of Chicago, Dr. H. M. [illegible], Baltimore, Laurens Enos of Buffalo, Robert P. Hooper, of [illegible], Alfred Reeves, of New York, and James Fortescue of Boston, secretary of the Massachusetts State Association.

Judging [illegible] early reports there will be touring parties from all sections, and [illegible] delegations are already assured from Chicago, Indianapolis, [illegible], Cleveland, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Newark, New York, Providence and Hartford. Of course [illegible] will probably supply the most generous quantity of participants, as early July figures [illegible] opening of the regular White Mountains season. It is expected that after the Bethlehem meeting there will be supplemental trips to Maine and Vermont, while some [illegible] parties have in mind continuing on into Canada.

Five Carloads En Route to Boston

The Cole Motor Company of Boston, local distributors of the Cole car, are in receipt of information from Indianapolis to the effect that the first five carloads of the Cole new service Ten-Fours have been shipped. The entire shipment is already sold and it represents the sales of this model since its arrival in Boston a week ago. In speaking of this instance C. A. S[illegible], the local manager, says: "The Cole Motor Car Company have adopted a somewhat original policy in following the trend of the times, that is, manufacturing what the public demanded rather than trying to sell what the public did not want. This has always been their policy and will continue to be so in the future. Standardization alone has made this possible, as a purchaser can procure the very latest development in motor car construction immediately.

"This method of manufacture is also responsible for the low price on the new model. The absence of enormous overhead expense is one feature that makes this method capable of reducing the cost of production. The Cole Motor Car Company are the originators of this method of manufacture and standardization has now spread to all lines of business."

Automobile shows, a familiar story to the motorists of this country, are a novelty in the Philippines, of which the island people have just had their first taste. The Philippine Exposition was recently held in Manila and the motor cars on display aroused the widest interest.

The Cadillac display was especially elaborate and complete. The Cadillac was rewarded with two gold medals. One was awarded for the "most instructive special automobile exhibit showing the Cadillac chassis in operation." The other was awarded for an example of special excellence.

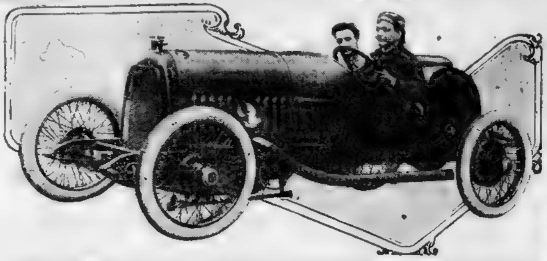
A CONTESTANT IN THE 500-MILE RACE

◆◆ ◆◆ ◆◆

CAPABLE OF GREAT SPEED AND ENDURANCE



Teddy Tetzleff, world's famous road driver, at the wheel of the Maxwell car he will drive at Indianapolis.

BIG FUND TO BE RAISED

Fifty thousand dollars, instead of the originally planned $25,000, is the amount of the guarantee put up by Sioux City business men to back the purses offered by the Sioux City Automobile Club and Speedway Association for its inaugural meet on the two-mile speedway, June 30-July 4. This fund has been raised and it makes certain that $25,000 will be offered as prize money in the feature event of the meet on July 4th, which is to be a 300-mile race, while thousands of dollars will be put up in the earlier events on the program [illegible] world's record trials and [illegible]. There has been some skepticism in certain circles as to the ability of Sioux City to make good on its promise of these prizes, but the Sioux City Automobile Club and Speedway Association is in a position to back up its claims and pay these large sums of money to get the cream of the world's drivers.

Visits His New England Dealers

Manager Bradford of the Velie wholesale branch, has just returned from a visit to New England Velie dealers and reports excellent sales on the Velie line, particularly the new 1915 Velie 3[illegible]. In regard to the new model, Mr. Bradford said: "In every section that I visited this new model has met with unprecedented success. Our agents are busy from morning until night with demonstration and closing sales. Our Springfield agent sold three cars the day I was there, Providence two, New Bedford two, and so on throughout the territory. We are receiving now four carloads a week from the factory and are still a little behind on our deliveries."

Oakland Output Completely Sold

With the cars sold during the month of April showing an increase of 47 per cent over the April business in 1913, and the 1914 output all on order, Oakland officials are well pleased with the showing.

"Total sales to date are 30 per cent greater than last year," said General Sales Manager Fred W. Warner, "and our sales have already passed our production mark.

"The cars sold and delivered during the past month represent the largest single month's business we have ever had and one-half more cars were sold than during the same period last year."

Great Growth of Spark Plug Industry

One Plant Has Daily Product of 26,000 Plugs.

With the announcement that it is now turning out an average of 26,000 spark plugs per day, the Champion Spark Plug Company of Toledo, Ohio, has given another striking illustration of the marvelous growth of the automobile industry. For a concern engaged in the manufacture of a small, but nevertheless important part of an automobile, the Champion company's rise in the industry has been a wonderful demonstration of business development.

Four years ago the Champion Spark Plug Company began the manufacture of its product in a little dingy factory space in Toledo. The best efforts of officials and workmen could bring about the production of only about 400 plugs per day. Now, with a daily production of 26,000 plugs in one of the largest and most completely equipped factories in the country, the company has not only increased its business by 6,500 per cent, but has reached the stage where, in nine hours it produces more plugs than, in the old days, were manufactured in a month.

Efficiency Prize Is Added Feature

A prize unique in the history of automobile racing has just been offered to entrants in the big 500-mile international race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The prize known as the "Waltham Efficiency Prize" is unique both for itself and for the conditions of the award. It consists of "the finest and most accurate solid gold watch made anywhere in the world," and it is to be given, not necessarily to the winner of the race, but to the driver of the car who finishes among the first three and at the same time displays the greatest efficiency.

Efficiency will be established by the length of time spent "at the pits," that is, for making repairs, adjustments or tire changes. The driver finishing third or better and spending the least amount of time "at the pits" will carry off the Waltham Efficiency Prize.

The offer was made by the Waltham Watch Company and accepted by the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on behalf of the entrants. The winner will be decided by David Beecroft, official representative of the A. A. A.

FOR GOOD ROADS AND GOOD LAWS

Aims of the Metropolitan Motor Association, Just Organized.

The Metropolitan Motor Association was formally started on Saturday last at the Art Club with the following officers:

Samuel L. Powers, president; Charles E. Hatfield, vice-president; Arthur F. Clarke, treasurer; James Fortescue, secretary and assistant treasurer.

A list of proposed directors contains the names of some of the most prominent motorists in the Metropolitan district, and there is every hope that the association will be a success, as it has for its object the two laudable aims, good roads and good laws, and it does not include any social feature. It will be affiliated with the State and the American Automobile Associations. The dues are nominal, just enough to pay for the literature and the necessary office expenses. The headquarters of the Metropolitan Motor Association will be at No. 93 Massachusetts avenue.

New Argument in Favor of Trucks

The newest and one of the best arguments ever advanced for the motor truck as against the horse and wagon system of transportation has been produced by a Kansas City firm. The day that this enterprising firm purchased and put into commission its fleet of Willys Utility three-quarter ton trucks it began a systematic advertising campaign, calling the attention of the public to the fact that its bread and other baked goods were absolutely clean, from raw materials to delivery, a campaign which was made possible only by the use of the power vehicles.

"Clean bread, delivered clean" is now the slogan of the Pauly bakery, and the people who buy baked goods have been quick to see the desirability of purchasing products in which cleanliness is made indeed "next to Godliness."

Becomes Iidentified with Boston College

Day Baker, who so frequently lectures [illegible] boards of trade and associations [illegible] the use of the electric truck, has [illegible] been called upon by the Boston University College of Business Administration to talk to the classes [illegible] salesmanship.

During the past week Mr. Baker delivered his first lecture on "The Dignity of Salesmanship," illustrating many of the points which he made by citing personal experiences.

Motorcycle Day in Philadelphia

May 30 is to be known in Philadelphia, Pa., as "Motorcycle Day." On that day riders of the Quaker City are planning a huge street parade, inwhich 3,000 motorcycles and 400 bicycles are expected to participate. Riders from many towns outside of Philadelphia are asked to take part in the parade, and suitable awards will be offered for the best decorated machine and also for the most novel and comic display.

Shows an Increase in Business

Franklin business for the first three months of 1914 shows an increase over the corresponding months of 1913 of 93 per cent.

Conditions with the Franklin have been unusual for the past six months. The factory has been running under high pressure and has been unable to get within a couple of weeks of its schedule for shipping cars. The capacity of the factory has been steadily increased.

Shortage of Cars Is Predicted

"The Spring season of automobile buying has sufficiently advanced so that a good line can be drawn on the probabilities," says Ralph Ketchum of the Kissel-Kar. "It looks to me as though the first of July would see a shortage of cars of the more desirable makes, and that a great many people who are delaying selection will regret it. This applies, of course, to the better grade of cars, as there seems to be an ample production of the low-priced vehicles."

Business Basis Tires

Automobile owners everywhere are rapidly learning to buy tires on a real business basis, viz:—the basis of ultimate economy.

That is the reason why "Nobby Tread" Tires are today the largest selling high-grade anti-skid tires in the world.

Take the taxicab as a concrete example,—taxicab companies have to operate on a business basis—they have to buy tires on a business basis.

That is why today——

In Europe and the United States thousands of

Taxicabs use "Nobby Treads"

Taxicab companies are the most constant users of tires. They have to watch tire mileage expense all of the time.

Taxicabs must have real anti-skid protection—real tire dependence—real freedom from puncture delays—and lowest cost per mile tires.

Some of our best taxicab customers are in Europe—in spite of the extra cost of freight charges, duties, etc., they import "Nobby Tread" Tires simply because on a business basis they are cheaper in the end.

"Nobby Tread" Tires solve any automobile owner's tire problems the day he decides to buy tires on a business basis.

Based upon their remarkable mileage records

"Nobby Tread" Tires

are now sold under our regular warranty—perfect workmanship and material—BUT any adjustments are on a basis of

5,000 Miles

Thousands upon thousands of veteran motorists now use "Nobby Tread" Tires on their front and rear wheels through all seasons, because they give real anti-skid protection and the lowest cost per mile.

BOSTON MEN MAKE RECORD

Four Local Men Sell Over a $1,000,000 Worth of of Cars.

A Boston automobile organization has admittedly earned the double honor of American leadership and world-wide supremacy in a contest for number of motor vehicles sales and volume of business covering a period on one hundred and one days just brought to a close.

Over three hundred salesmen in all parts of America took part and met a crushing Waterloo simply because they could not follow the fast pace set by the invincible Boston contingent, headed by Alvan T. Fuller.

Bonafide sales orders for new vehicles accompanied by deposits were received by the Boston organization during the competition aggregating over a million dollars, said to be a world's record for actual retail sales to users of motor vehicles.

Of the ten maximum pleasure vehicle salesmen in the United States who excelled in final honors and prizes the Boston Packard organization is credited with four, Fred C. Graves being victorious over the entire field with C. S. Henshaw, C. A. Robinson and F. E. W. Howe closely following in the order named, while out of the ten maximum truck salesmen Boston had five, headed by C. W. Sawyer, with A. S. Holly, H. F. Klagge, S. L. Prime and Benjamin Barrows not far behind.

"How is the current outlook for business in New England?" Mr. Fuller was asked. "It is difficult to prophesy," he said, "but it seems one of the best [illegible] would be the record just established by a company such as the [illegible] cars were sold [illegible] Boston in less than fifteen weeks [illegible] customers in over seventy-five different kinds of trades. Our factory produced business for the first four months of 1914 that was 21 per cent greater than for the corresponding period last year, and the tremendous demand has absorbed all our available supply up to August.

"Their future manufacturing program, barring unforeseen calamities to business as a whole, for the next twelve months will be the greatest we have ever experienced. Surely there is no overproduction of high-class cars."

Chevrolet Wins Quaker City Contest

The Chevrolet Baby Grand touring car won the great Quaker City motor race at Philadelphia last week and attained the distinction of being one of the best cars of its class in America. The race was from Atlantic City to Lakewood, a distance of 125 miles, and was contested by veteran drivers, a hard race. There were twenty-two entries.

The winning Chevrolet car beat its nearest competitors by 2 minutes 33 seconds, which is saying a good deal for a race of this kind. Another factor to be taken under consideration was that the Chevrolet was the only car under $2,000 entered in the affair. George E. Wright was the driver.

Will Consider Many Questions

Electric Vehicle Interests to Hold Convention at Engineers' Club.

Extensive arrangements have been made for two-day sessions of the New England convention of electric vehicle interests at the Engineers' Club in this city on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. In order that [illegible] included in the convention [illegible] the New England section will hold its May meeting and dinner at the American House, on Monday evening, at which F. A. Hortter of the Boston & Maine Railroad, will talk on "The effect of the Motor Truck on Terminal Freight Congestion."

Tuesday morning will be devoted to the reading of papers at the business session and in the afternoon a special trip will be made to the garage of the Edison Company. This will be followed by a beefsteak dinner. The business session will be held in the service building of the Edison Company. Wednesday the organization will have an outing and dinner at Bass Point.

NEW MANAGER IN NEW YORK.

Announcement is made E. S. Jordan, general sales manager of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company, makers of the Jeffery Four and Six, that A. H. Humphreville, formerly manager of the Newton Humphreville Company, Newark, N. J., has been transferred to the management of the Stratton Auto Sales Company, New York city.

Mr. Humphreville, who is one of the veteran automobile men of the East, will start within a few days on a tour of the New York agencies established by the Stratton concern, to get in touch with this end of the New York business.

Test Show Decided Gasolene Saving

Test after test has been made by the Goodrich Company in Akron, as the result of which it is announced that the Goodrich Silvertown Cord tire will cut down gasoline bills, often as much as [illegible] per cent, that it will increase the efficiency of the motor, tests of record showing as much as [illegible] per cent greater horsepower developed, that it will give more mileage, that it will enable the motorist to start quicker, steer easier and coast farther, and will give him practical immunity from stone bruises, which are the greatest enemies of tires.

Mr. E. C. Tibbitts, advertising manager of the B. F. Goodrich Company, spent two days in Chicago last week with M. L. P. Rowen, Chicago branch manager of the Goodrich Company, and while there conducted a series of tests on the road that are actually startling in their results.

The car used was not a testing car nor one specially equipped for the experiments conducted. It was one which is in daily use, and was drafted for the tests on a few moments' notice.

The main object of the road tests was to show the greater "life" given to a car when equipped with the Goodrich Silvertown Cord tires as against an equipment of fabric tires. The definite results of the tests were certainly impressive.

QUICK TIRE DESTRUCTION.

A good way to spoil a tire casing quickly is to start your car with a lunge, and stop it with a sudden application of the brakes.

Strength and the Lightness of Cars

Two Important Factors That Enter Into Car Construction

In speaking of the lightness of cars, Joseph Donovan, local distributer of the Studebaker, says:

"Strong cars of unwieldy weight are not satisfactory cars. They will endure for many years, but every mile traveled is at a wasteful expense for gasoline and tires. Nor can such a car ever impart to its passengers the sense of exhilaration caused by that instant response to the driver's will found in a lighter vehicle.

Plainly one of the great tasks of a designer is to plan an automobile strong enough for any emergency, yet light enough to register a reasonable economy in maintenance and to retain the quality of acceleration which we term "life."

There is no questioning the strength of Studebaker cars; not one of them yet, so far as we know, has worn out in service, and many of them have covered more than 100,000 miles.

CRANK YOUR OWN CAR.

Courts have decided that if an owner asks another party to crank his car, and a broken arm results the owner is liable for damages.

KEEP OUT THE DIRT.

When the spark plug is removed a cork should be put in the spark plug hole to keep out dirt and grit until ready to replace the plug.

ROAD POLICY TO SATISFY ALL

How Durable Trunk Lines and Better Farm Roads Can Best Be Built.

How automobile authorities may reconcile the demands of automobilists and business men for permanent intercity highways, those of farmers for improved tributary roads with the objection of taxpayers to increased road taxes by following these rules formulated by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce after a study of the opinions of prominent highway authorities:

Build brick, concrete or other durable roads wherever there is much heavy hauling, motor trucking and automobile driving.

Such roads should be built wherever the cost of properly maintaining any other kind would amount to more in twenty-five years than the cost of maintaining the durable road plus its extra first cost and interest on the excess.

Issue fifteen-year to twenty-five-year bonds to pay for permanent work if sufficient funds are not available. It is sound economic policy to raise money with bonds for all road work that will outlive the term of the bonds.

Pay out of current funds provided by general taxation and assessment the cost of surfacing with any material that is not as durable as brick or concrete.

Make gravel roads where traffic is comparatively light and there is not much automobile travel, first grading and draining the foundation thoroughly.

Extend the mileage of permanent highways with money saved by building gravel roads instead of macadam roads.

Confine construction as far as possible to durable roads and gravel roads, so that the total cost will not exceed that of an equal mileage of macadam roads nor increase the State or county expenditure.

Use quartz, shells, burnt clay or a mixture of sand and clay where gravel is not readily obtainable. They are all good substitutes.

Concentrate the expenditure of State funds on the improvement and maintenance of intercity or trunk lines because they carry about 80 per cent of the total traffic.

There Is Always a Slight Skid

"As a matter of cold, hard fact, there is no such thing as a tire that won't skid at all, because if it didn't slip just a little on turns cars would turn over," says a man in the Ajax tire store. "But this skid is so slight as to be negligible. A non-skid tire, so called, must be made on certain principles not to slip when the asphalt is wet, and ours conforms to those principles. Theory and practice confirm this statement.

What makes a skid? That is when a greasy film remains between the tread of the tire and the road surface. The tire slides on this. What is a non-skid tire? It is one with a tread such that it breaks up the film and gives the tire a chance to roll on dry places. That is the Ajax tread whose diamond shaped cross hatching is just right for this work."

DRAW FROM FOUR MAKERS

One and a Quarter Million of Tires Will Be Used in Year.

DETROIT, Mich., May 16.—One million two hundred and fifty thousand tires for this year's production of Ford cars is the estimate made by officials at the Ford factory, Highland Park, Mich.

This immense quantity will be supplied by four leading American tire companies. The tires arrive in daily shipments of sufficient quantities to keep pace with the production of the Ford factory. Each carload contains about 400 sets of tires, so that during the months of January, February, March and April when the factory production was around eleven hundred cars daily, approximately three carloads of tires were required for each day's production.

With 400 sets of tires to a freight car, it will require approximately 781 cars, or a train approximately five and one-half miles long to bring the year's tire supply to the Ford factory. One of the visitors at the factory recently figured out that if every tire received at the Ford factory this year travels in the course of its lifetime five thousand miles the year's supply of tires will have traveled a total distance of 6,250,000 miles, or 250,000 times around the world before the last one is scrapped.

Suggestion for the Car of Tires

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company has issued a new series of what are known as "Tire Conservation Service Bulletins," for the purpose of enabling tire users, by proper care, to obtain more mileage from their tires. Goodyear believes that the only good customer is a satisfied customer, and the company is for cooperation to obtain the utmost mileage.

There are eighteen bulletins in the series, with such titles as "Wet Tires Sometimes Go Wrong," "Under-Inflation Its Consequences," "The Story of a Neglected Cut," etc. The subjects are covered concisely and clearly and the information made as practical and helpful as possible. The following brief quotations from bulletin No. 1 give the spirit of them all.

"An automobile tire, like the human body, does a magnificent service if treated fairly. If abused, it wears out long before its allotted time. As a help to those who would get utmost mileage, many suggestions are offered."

RUNNING MASTER VIBRATOR.

The primary current should not be run through a master vibrator coil when the secondary circuit is not in use.

STICKING TIRES.

Make the surface of rim smooth with emery cloth, apply graphite to the rim and beads of the tire, and your tire will never stick.

Export Business on the Increase

Shows Great Activity in England, France and Sweden.

"Our export business for this season shows an increase of from 175 to [illegible] per cent over the corresponding period of last year," says F. L. Jewett, export manager for the Paige Detroit Motor Car Company. "We have been especially active in England, France and Sweden, where the increase over last season is at least [illegible] per cent. The increase of our Australian business is considerably better than 100 per cent. Seventy-five per cent of all our export business consists of the smaller models.

"The success of the Paige and other American cars selling around $1,000 or less is not due to the fact that Europeans and other foreign people are especially fond of Americans and their products. It is purely a business proposition. They get far more for their mo[illegible]

Brockton Colonials Humble Pawtucket

BROCKTON, May 16.—A monster street parade and a hair-raising rally by the home team in the fourth inning of the game were the dominant features of the inauguration of the Colonial League in this shoe town this afternoon. To the delight of 2,000 "fans" Brockton defeated "Jeff" Pfeffer's Pawtucket Tigers 3 to 2.

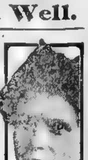
J. Buchanan Wins Marlborough Stakes

GATWICK, Eng., May 16.—The Marlborough stakes, $2,500, were won here today by J. Buchanan. Marten My Prince ran second and Duke Humphrey finished third.



Look at Me I am Well.

"I cannot say too much for Peruna. It has entirely cured me of my trouble. My eye lids were thick and red nearly all the time. My eyes were especially sensitive to light. Catarrh was my trouble. I had had my eyes treated and took a great deal of medicine, but nothing seemed to help me until I tried Peruna. I always use Peruna when my family need it. Always find it very good: it helps wonderfully. You can use my testimonial anywhere you wish to." So says Mrs. C. Skehan, No. 814 S. Leavitt St., Chicago, Ills.

AFTER SUFFERING TWO LONG YEARS

Mrs. Aselin Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Minneapolis, Minn.—"After my little one was born I was sick with pains in my sides which the doctors said were caused by inflammation. I suffered a great deal every month and grew very thin. I was under the doctor's care for two long years without any benefit. Finally after repeated suggestions to try it we got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the third bottle of the Compound I was able to do my housework and today I am strong and healthy again. I will answer letters if anyone wishes to know about my case."—Mrs. JOSEPH ASELIN, 628 Monroe St., N. E., Minneapolis, Minn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy we know for woman's ills. If you need such a medicine why don't you try it?

No other medicine for women's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills.

LAUGHS IN THE NEWS

A HARVARD professor has discovered that telephone girls become heavily charged with electricity during the Winter.

Which is absolutely nothing to worry about. The telephone subscribers are overcharged all the year 'round.

One of our brave marines, learning he was to be sent to Mexico, promptly got married.

He won't learn much about the horrors of combat until he returns and begins married life.

In discussing the silver service for the battleship New York, Governor Glynn was asked what he would advise as a substitute for the punch bowl, since liquor has been forbidden in the navy.

"A pickle dish," replied the Governor.

In our humble opinion a punch bowl is one of the most successful "pickle" dishes known.

President Wilson is going to move his office into a tent during the hot weather, and every paragrapher (except this one) will spring something about the "intense" heat or work, or something of that sort.

We wouldn't.

A leading jeweler informs us that the latest cutting for engagement solitaires is square instead of round.

At least one thing about the engagement will be on the square.

Brooklyn suffragists sent an appeal to President Wilson by carrier pigeons.

Never again will that bird be regarded as an omen of peace.

"In riding habit," said a head line, "she wished for pants."

Wonder what happened.

"Nurse gets his estate," was a very recent headline.

And it might have added, "Also the goat of each relative."

"Barber with a record," says a headline over a Cleveland, Ohio, date.

No deed to read the item. We know all about it. It was a talking machine record.

Argentina is sending Secretary Bryan a new llama to replace the first one which was deported owing to some ailaming disease.

Bryan, several believe, needs a lam or two.

"Babies will be checked while mothers vote," is a statement all the way from White Plains, N. Y.

If anyone thinks voting is going to put a check to babies they don't know much about women.

"In case of war our government will raise money by various taxes," said a Washington dispatch.

Why not tax the tango? Make the dancers wear a stamp on the heels of their shoes for each dance.

Congressman Moore of Pennsylvania declares women are twice as costly as the canal.

These artificial locks cost money.

We all know what Sherman said about war.

What he would have said about it today, with Secretary Daniels barring all drinks, is difficult to imagine.

Woman was silent a year. Now an effort is being made to break her will.

Oh, yes; on the grounds of mental derangement.

Some one jokingly put a "Not Wanted" sign on a baby carriage containing a baby. In this instance the mother was indignant.

But many a truth is spoken in jest.

Harvard has added a course on lumbering.

Nearly every other paragrapher will doubtless spring some wheeze about blockheads. Not us, we merely hint at the chips of the old block taking to the tall timber, and let it go at that.

"Hen House" is the name just bestowed by Wellesley College girls on the structure, a temporary affair, which will house them until the burned building can be replaced.

Wellesley girls are modest. From personal observation of Wellesley girls and a knowledge of the strict rules of keeping them in, we would not hesitate to call it the "Chicken Coop."

Our Garden Patch

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

About This Time Things Are Coming Up in the Garden, with the Aid of Nature and Friendly Hens. There Are Flowers as Well as Vegetables, as You Can Prove by Any Seed Catalog. Read What Lewis Allen, Author of "Rows and Rows of Roses," Writes About These Mid-May Things.

MAY 20—Sir Arthur Sullivan wrote the music to Gilbert's famous "Flowers that Bloom in the Spring, Tra-la!"

The "Tra-la" part of that song was his gentle method of giving the "ha-ha" to the amateur florist who sees a Grandifloriana Gloriana advertised, buys and plants the seeds, and raises quite a flock of dandelions, almost as large and yellow as those he digs out of his front lawn.

MAY 21—Four hundred and thirteen years ago Amerigo Vespucci started on his third voyage of discovery. Columbus called the land he discovered "a veritable garden spot." Naturally, the people got sore and named it after Amerigo, who was more discreet.

Now is the time to set out pansies. They won't stand, but have to be set. Ninety per cent. of them will have to be laid out within a week on account of cut worms, who build their little nests underneath them and flit merrily from root to root.

MAY 22—Alighieri Dante, like many others, started an amateur garden early in life, which enabled him to write that classic known as "Dante's Inferno."

Prepare your flour beds this week. Some graham seeds are needed, also pancake seeds for the lighter flours. Buckwheat seeds should be planted separately and watered with maple syrup. If you care for decorative shrubs in your garden, plant doughnuts, being careful that the soil does not clog up the holes.

MAY 23—Eighty-four years ago Mt. Aetna blew up and poured mud and other delicacies down over the garden plots in eight villages, making them look much like your own garden after your dog has gone out and buried a bunch of bones in it.

In preparing a flower bed, see that both sides are opposite. Particular gerdeners will also have the ends opposite. A good combination is made of planting yellow canary seed for border. If your place is near the seashore plant flowers with ultramarine tints. Never plant sunflowers on a cloudy day.

MAY 24—Five thousand and seventeen years ago a man said: "Every seed I planted came up and developed into a vegetable or flower. My roses were the best, my tomatoes the biggest and my peas the earliest in all Palestine." The man's name was "Ananias."

About this time watch out for the plant lice on roses. Buy a box of twenty-five-cent pure Havanas and smoke them in the garden, blowing the smoke on the rose bushes.

MAY 25—Know the innocent little flowers, so you may recognize them whenever you see pictures of them. Here are a few:

ASTER—One of the richest known. Color of gold, about $300,000,000.

AFRICAN DAISY—Flourishes in the kitchen and can broil chicken and fry pancakes to perfection.

BACHELOR'S BUTTON—Generally invisible. Single, free blooming. Keeps coming off almost as soon as it appears.

CALIFORNIA POPPY—Like any other pop, extremely proud and always bragging about it.

CANDYTUFT—A hunk of molasses taffy stuck in the forelock of little Hortense, aged five.

LOVE-LIES-BLEEDING—A joy-rider's sweetheart after the smash.

MARIGOLD—The very best possible advice if you marry at all.

MORNING GLORY—Sunday morning when you don't have to pay any attention to the alarm.

PANSY—Generally the third from the left in the front row, wearing pink ones.

PINKS—The kind Pansy wears in the first act.

PRIMROSE—The only worth-while decoration along the path of life.

SUNFLOWER—A freckle.

WALL FLOWER—The sort that haven't learned to do the "knee hunch" in the tango.

MAY 26—Fifty-nine hundred and sixteen years ago this date the Garden of Eden flourished. If Adam had refused to bite the pippen we wouldn't have had to do $300 worth of work to make a $3 garden.

Do you really want all the flowers pictured in your seed catalogue in your garden? It is a simple thing. Cut out all the pictures, glue them to sticks and jab the sticks in your garden.

MAY 27—Know the vegetables. Here is something about them considerably different from anything you may learn in catalogues:

BEETS—The only things known that are as intelligent when pickled and boiled as when perfectly natural.

CORN—Delicious on the ear, unmentionable on the feet.

CARROTS—The Titian blondes of the vegetables kingdom.

CABBAGE—Some greenery to wrap around a bouquet of pigs knuckles.

RADISHES—Little red things you eat today and remember for a week.

CUCUMBER—Long and straight on the vine, but pretzel shaped after eaten.

EGG PLANT—The darned things that scratch up your garden.

PEAS—First described by Joe Miller as the things that roll off your knife.

ENDIVE—What a man does when he slips on wet ice.

KOHLRABI—The only Rabi that doesn't know the Talmud.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS—Chin whiskers on a German.

LETTUCE—See "Kale."

KALE—See "long green."

SUMMER SQUASH—And some are pumpkins.

MAY 28—Jabrosken, a Hindu, discovered poisons three thousand and eleven years ago.

Now is the time to use poisons in your garden. By applying vitriol, prussic acid, cyanide of potassium and such things to your flowers and vegetables, and by pouring a mixture of these poisons about the roots, you will fool all the slugs, grubs, cutworms and such things in your garden. Your poisons will kill the plants and leave the insects to starve to death.

MAY 30—Thomas Hood, a great and happy humorist, born in 1798. He was born in London and never dallied, meddled, or fussed with a back-yard garden plot. All his plots were in prose and verse, from which he reaped an abundance of pounds, shillings and pence.

If, by this time, you are disgusted with your attempts at growing flowers and vegetables, plant hops and malt and call it a beer garden.

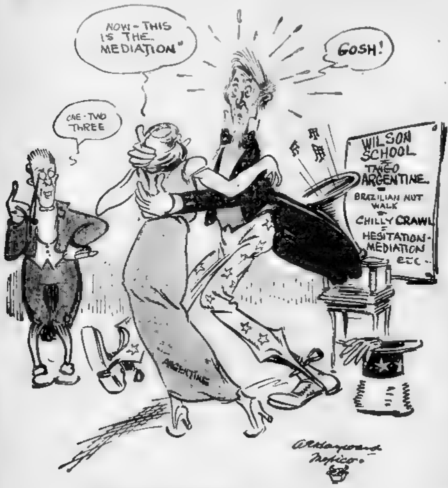
EDITOR City Life Section:

Dear Sir—In accordance with your instructions I let Vera Cruise around by herself and hustled over here in the hopes that I would be able to untangle the situation somewhat. The walking was dreadful and I have been up two nights plucking cactus points out of my shins. As Sherman so aptly put it—it sure is!

I think everything will be all right if we watch and wait a little while longer. I feel sure of this, on account of the warm reception tendered me on my arrival in town. Aside from a sort of meat cleaver aimed at my head as I crossed the Plaza, and demonstrations of approval in the shape of assorted, superfluous fruit and vegetables from street urchins, I say, aside from this, I noticed little indication of hostility.



"Two Steps Backward, Hesitate for Two Counts, Then Forward Two Counts and Mediate."

It is a beautiful morning. Everything is so peaceful and serene as I write this. Though it is nearly noon, there have been only nineteen attempts made on my life, and it looks as though it is going to be a rather tiresome day. Yesterday was bright and more interesting, there being thirty-two separate efforts to present me with a harp and wings.

It started early, when the belhop purposely spilled the hot water over my bare feet. They seem to have the derndest way of making war down here!

Next thing I know they'll throw a caterpillar on me.

I located Huerta sipping Anesette on the back stoop. His nerves are in a frightful condition. He says of late he can not order more than ten executions between drinks without feeling the strain. When I approached he was writing a bunch of resignations. He tells me that the market for resignations these days is positively bully and the demand exceeds the supply.

So many friends are asking for them now, he tells me that it keep him working overtime to oblige everybody. Every afternoon he writes a batch of papers, resigning from the presidency. These he mails to himself, and the next morning when they arrive he refuses to accept them.

There seems to be great misunderstanding among the natives as to the meaning of the word "mediate." Most of those I speak with seem to think it means a kind of soup or one of the new dances we are popularizing. It just occurs to me—why not?

Why not what? says you.

New dance step, says I, stepping back two, and pivoting on the third count. The "Mediation." It all goes so well together, continues I. "A. B. C.," "Argentine Tango," "Brazilian Nut Walk," "Chilly to the conservatory and talk it over. Then you could return to the floor and continue the other figures of the "Mediation." which might consist of dancing around an imaginary point in a circle, but in reality getting nowhere Castle House please note.

Huerta wants to know whether, in the event of his stepping out, will there be any effort made to prevent him from accepting an engagement at Hammerstein's. I told him I could not altogether Crawl," "Hesitation," "Mediation."

Geat opportunity, What's the matter with our dancing innovators. Two steps backward, with the right, hesitate for two counts, then forward two counts and "Mediate." This would be a peach of a dance!

One could start off right down the floor as though they really intended to go through the entire dance, but you could fool 'em. When you come to the "Mediation" you retire assure him on that point, but that I thought if he confined his monologue to some "uplift" topic it would be all right. He said he thought of doing this and if Hammerstein would handle him, he has a pippin of an act doped out.

It commences with a song in which the orchestra doesn't quite get the key, and big noise by the drummer. Then a few fancy steps and a good anti-rum talk. Photographs for sale in the lobby.

Huerta started to tell me of a play he is writing, which he thinks will draw pretty good, but he is stumped when he comes to one scene. One of the character is a war correspondent who is strung up by the thumbs. He says he is not quite sure as to the dialogue here.

He wore a thoughtful look as he told me this, so I suddenly remembered I had an engagement at the hotel. I am no sacrifice to the interests of the drama, says I.

Another dastardly attempt was made a few moments ago on my life. A big Mexican greaser entered the room, took my hat off the rack and jumped up and down on it. It was a perfectly good hat, too, respectable and wouldn't harm a fly. Now, I ask you again, is that any nice way to fight?

Sincerely,
A. E. HAYWARD.

ADMIRAL DEWEY, on being complimented on his superb health, smiled and said: "I attribute my good condition to plenty of exercise and no banquets. One-third of what we eat, you know, enables us to live."

"In that case," said his friend, jestingly, "what becomes of the other two-thirds?"

"Oh, said the Admiral, "that enables the doctor to live."

Only One Glance.

"DID you notice that woman who just passed?" inquired he.

"The one," responded she, "with the gray hat, the white feather, the red velvet roses, the mauve jacket, the black skirt, the mink furs and the lavender spats?"

"Yes."

"Not particularly."

Calling the Kettle Black.

"I DESPISE a hypocrite."

"So do I."

"But you appear to be his best friend."

"Oh, yes, I try to appear friendly toward him. It pays better in the end."

Andy Rice on Marriage

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

TAKING marriage purely on a business basis, when I negotiated my marriage I should have made a better deal. The goods had been on the shelf for a long time. I had no competition. When her father first promoted the holding company the prospectus looked very good, but I shouldn't have taken any stock in it.

You know when a partnership for life is consummated and you start out to make the venture a success you find that the expenses to maintain the business are greater than the value received. Because after you take an inventory of what you have on hand you find that the face value has been overrated, the figure shows a deficit—very little collateral and all bonus—and you realize that you should never have given a mortgage for what has been unloaded on you.

But when your partner appoints herself the receiver of all your finances and hypothecates your funds for fancy figures, you find your assets shrinking, and you can't give her a stop-loss order or a check because she won't let you utter a note of protest. Of course, the first season is brisk, but after that, when you find fifty per cent. depreciation for wear and tear, although it's your duty, with all your good will, you can only show a half interest in the enterprise, that's a tax on your resources and you have to go out and liquidate.

Somebody sent us a Morris chair. A fine chair. Only, the back was broken. As soon as I sat in it—so was mine. I could have had lots of pleasure with that chair—only my wife wouldn't sit in it.

We had caviar at the wedding feast. Nobody wanted it. Nobody liked it. But everybody ordered it. I asked Finklestein, the caterer, "What is caviar?" He said, "It's the eggs from the sturgeon. It costs a dollar a half ounce." So I ate some. Eggs from a sturgeon. I don't know whether those eggs were good or bad—I never ate any before—but I'm sure they were bad—already they were black.

Then came the roast. While they was serving, a swell baby sitting across she give me a little kick with her foot under the table, chucked me over a smile and said, "Mr. Rice, are you fond of chicken?" And I answer, "Of course, but have a little respect for my wife's feelings."

I said to Rosenblatt, the lawyer, "Excuse me, but why don't you throw up the law and go into a respectable business? Learn an HONEST trade—or something?" He said, "Never mind. Don't worry about me. I'll get there. Look at Abraham Lincoln. He studied for ten years in a log cabin, and when he came out of the log cabin he became a President." I said, "Why don't you do the same thing? You've been studying law for ten years—why don't you become President?" And he said, "How can I? I ain't got no log cabin."

We had our wedding in a hall. I told my father-in-law it's more stylish to have a private wedding and just invite the immediate relatives. He said, "Stylish or not—it must be in a hall. If I only invite the immediate relatives I'd lose money on it."

Hashimura Togo Swats the Fly

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

Being a Letter of a Japanese Boy-of All Work to the Editor of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE.

To Editor Good Housekeeping Magazine, noble editor who make fly-chasing delightful among national sports.

DEAR SIR—Last Wednesday midnight p. m. were historical date when I bade sad kiss-a-by to employment from home of Mrs. K. W. Pumphrey, North Bourbon, Ky. This were too bad accident from my helpless-ness.

When I enter this sweethearted home Hon. Mrs. Pumphrey says me, "Tango," she relate, "I am most particular about flies."

"I am sure you must raise some delicious varieties of these live stocks," I collapse for chivalry.

"O not to do!" she renig hashly. "I would sooner have a tiger in my home than a fly."

"A tiger might be more noisy," I negotiate.

"A tiger merely contains six claws in his feet," she snagger, "while a fly got 10,000 scratchers each containing 10,000,000 germs. From this you can estimate."

I attempt to do so until fatigued.

"From national science report arranged by boss doctor of John Hopsmith University I learn considerable valuable diseases which come from flies. Asthma, miasma, phantasma, connection of the menbranes, loss of memory worms (hook, book @ ring), hydrophobia, anglophobia, colic, bibliography, and jaw-lock. All these are brought home from footprints of this poisonous bird."

"They should not be permitted to fly," I abhor.

"It is not when they fly they are harmful. They do the damage when they land," she tell.

"In this they are similar to aeroplanes," I snuggest.

"Perhapsly!" she combust. "At any rates, I give you instructions. Whenever you see a fly, track him to his hole and shoe him at once."

"Only horse-flies can be shoed," I determinate.

She could not assimilate this reply I said.

"Whenever I see flies," she say furthermore, "I shodder, not so much for self & husband as for dearie Baby Alexander, who are endanger."

"Expect me to fear nothing including flies," I narrate cruelly like a Samurai.

Mr. Editor, when housewifely lady got fears for something she got it even when it are not there. I once did kitchen labor for one lady who imagine tramps was somewhere all time. When grocer arrive with order expression, she holla, "Tramp!" till he say otherwise. She yall, "Tramp!" when welcoming book-agent peddle-man come. One day gentleman in very tired-looking clothes arrive up to door. She screech, "Tramp!" and quench him with hose-water. "I am preacher," he yellup. "I thought you was tramp," she oblige. 'At my salary I should be,' he negotiate while walking awayward.

Thusly it were with Hon. Mrs. Pumphrey about flies. Each morning she examine fly-paper lovingly like mariner studying charts.

"How much flies we caught this a. m., Togo?" she ask it.

"Six," I say it. "Five house and one butter."

"Unloosen Hon. Butterfly," she dement. "We should not punish nature's lovely insex, because of sins of others."

So I grab that lovely insex and attempt to remove him from his sticky toes. But when I done so he turn meanly and bit me on thumb with hot end of his poison tail.

"That butterfly are a wasp!" I lecture amid Japanese word curse.

"Wasps does little harm," she say sweetishly.

"What little they does can be noticed immediately," I snarrel.

And so onwards.

After 2½ days of continuous flymanship I become extremely skilful in murder. My ears became very bright by listening for flies. At distance of 66 ft. I could hear Hon. Fly walking up windows. Then was time for me. My eyebrows containing gunpowder expression peculiar to Bwana Tumbo, I hide behind curtain-shade with cruel hand containing swat-stick. Hon. Fly approach, little imagining. Now and occasionally he stop and rubb his mitten together so they will be more ready to catch more disease. Still I await. Of suddenly I arise uply, silently like eels drinking milk. And then. Swats!!!

By this warfare I broke considerable flies and other dishes.

Hon. Pumphrey, husband, come home saying scorn about flies.

"What are so fatalistic about this bugs all of a suddenly?" he ask it. "In childnood of youth I was affectionately acquainted with flies. While enjoying cradle-ride of infancy, flies was allowed to buzz round my head angel whispers. And yet I live."

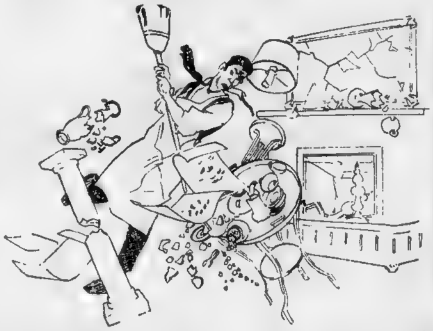
"Man who talk like that never had any infancy," snagger Hon. Mrs. with peev.

"If folks in this neighborhood could pay less attention to screen door and more to window-lock there would be less burglary," he otter. "6 homes has been burglarized while everybody was busy snubbing flies."

He remove one enlarge coltish revolver filled with bullets and lay him doggishly on table.

"O!!!" This from Hon. Mrs.

While you are executing flies I shall mutilate burglars," he narrate with militia voice. "And let us see who gets it first."



Hon. Fly Approach, little imagining. Now and occasionally He Stop and Rubb His Mittens Together So They Will Be More Ready to Catch More Disease. Of Suddenly I Arise Uply, Silently Like Eels Drinking Milk. And Then, Swatts! By This Warfare I Broke Considerable Flies and Other Dishes.

"Kindly not to point him this way while doing so," elocute Hon. Mrs. Madam looking calm but nervus.

Another weeks go by and I am very much embossed in my work. Once in occasionally Hon. Fly come walking into home on deceptive wings, yet I pursue. Sometime I make masher motion with broom & impale him flat against wall. Other time I allure him gently with towel so he flop to fly-paper where his feet-steps becomes glue.

Once Hon. Fly alight downward on Baby Alexander nose, shaking his cruel feet, intending to leave 10,000 symptoms. Spank! I capitutate that insex by stroking Hon. Baby on head with apron. Yet he cry without thanks for my bravery.

At lastly that house were so scarce of flies you could not find him without advertising. All day, while not sweeping other rugs, I search back & forthly with cruel fly-spank. Yet never a buzz was there. Such was accomplishment of my great science.

Night of Wednesday approach up. When dinner-eat was accomplished and dish-wash ceremony doneup, my Cousin Nogi arrive to kitchen for make conversation from Japanese politics while eating cake, kindness of Mrs. Pumphrey who didnt know it. Lateness of hour arrive. When time of 11.63 p. m. come, Nogi make sleepy go-home while I emerge to my bedroom expecting tomorrow, as usual.

I light gass. What was? Buzz! Ah, Hon. Fly, where was it? I turn my eye-sight behind window-curtain—and sure enough! There stood one entirely enlarged buzzer washing his front thumbs.

With sneekret expression I borrow slipper from myself and stole forth. Crouches. Of finally, when Hon. Fly seem to be looking at his nose, I lep. Bangs! Yet he was too soon. He flew uply, aeroplaned circular for moments, and then—when less expected—start to fly outward through door.

O!! This escape must not! Slightly down hallway were child-room where Hon. Baby Alexander layed enjoying innocent nightmares. That fly must not arrive there to sting him with medical diseases. If no hero was there to have him who must? I must!

Therefore I rosh forwards with slippershoe in my Samurai thumbs. With talented stroke of match I lit gass. O yes! There were Hon. Fly smuggling in air right over eyebrow of that infantile. I make talented swing to lash him with slipper, yet he were too collusive for me. Ere I could brush him dead he make slippery wing motion & flew to window-curtain where he hide shyly like poets avoiding praise.

I should get him yet! I crouch downly, my slipper raised uply. But while I do so—O look! Who there?

Standing distinctly in doorway of child-room I observe Hon. Mr. Pumphrey standing like a cold ghost in pajamas. And in his right-hand finger he held that enlarged coltish revolver.

What is?" he whasper ghastly.

"I chase one in here!" I gollup. "He are now coyly hiding behind curtain of window."

"Were he stealing my child?" gawsp him.

"Not yet but maybe," I narrate.

"Wait while I shoot," he narrate while making target movement.

"Ah not!" I holla. "Permit me to do so. I have killed several with slippers."

"How foolhardened his courage!" he stotter while I lep forwards. Swatts!! with dareless heel of slipper-shoe I collided Hon. Fly so certainly that he broke and fell amidst dead kicks. Prides filled my lungs. Joyly I reach downly, and pick Hon. Fly by fingers.

"I save your child without expense!" I naturalize. "Here is!"

"Here is what?" he require, peevly chewing his breath.

"Hon. Fly," I reject, like militia.

"You mean say you approach in here so stealthily at midnights for catch flies?" This from him with flashes.

"I say it!"

"Great Scotch! And I thought it was a burglar!" he say disappointly.

"So sorry I could not find one," I gosp.

Hon. Mrs. Pumphrey come in while she fainted away.

"Next time you come into my Baby's room don't do so!" she snarrel.

"Mrs. Madam," I decry, "how can you talk so crosswise? You tell me how slaughter flies for their rattlesnakish crimes, yet you say scolds when I do so."

"Midnight is not fly-time," she narrate.

"Maybe you are enraged because it were not a burglar," I snuggest. "Yet what is more horble to have in house than a fly?"

"A Japanese foolboy is!" corrode Hon. Mrs. & Mr. in together voice while dejjecting me outside of screen door where I still remain, feeling quite dissolute.

Hoping you are the same,

Yours truly,
HASHIMURA TOGO.

BEST JOKES OF THE WEEK

Uncle's Knowledge.

LITTLE JIMMY came to Toronto from his northern Ontario home, where he had never seen a colored person. One day when he was out walking with his Uncle Bob, they happened to pass a colored woman, and the little fellow asked:

"Say, uncle, why did that woman black her face?"

"Why, she hasn't blacked her face—that is her natural color," replied the uncle.

"Is she black like that all over?" asked Jimmy.

"Why, yes."

"Gosh, uncle, you know everything, don't you?"

Good Idea.

BALD-HEADED PARTY—No, I can't go to the masquerade tonight, I've no costume.

Warm Friend—That's all right, just stick a black patch on your pate and go as the cue ball.

Getting Scared.

A CUSTOMER had ordered lunch in a restaurant at 2 o'clock. He waited half an hour without result.

"Waiter," he called out, "what time do you close?"

"Half past six, sir."

With deep concern in his voice, the customer said:

"You're not going to lock me in, are you?"

We Trust So.

"HERR SCHMIDT is so fat that he can't get near enough to his counter to sell goods."

"H'm! Sort of a corporation in restraint of trade."

The Economist.

SOME people seem to think that, to get rich, one must economize like Jones.

Jones' faithful old dog had turned sickly and savage and so Jones said to his wife, on arriving home from business Saturday evening:

"I'll shoot Towser tomorrow morning before church."

Jones paused, then added, sternly:

"So remember, please, that he won't need any breakfast."

Correct.

"ONE-HALF of the women in this world retail gossip," remarked Mr. Stubb, as he lit the after-supper cigar.

"Quite considerate of you not to say all of them retail gossip," snapped Mrs. Stubb, as she washed the dishes.

"Oh, no, only half, Maria. The other half wholesale it."

Rather Harsh.

THE GIRL—I say, Algy, why do you make your own cigarettes?

Algy—Because the—er—doctor said that I must take more—er—exercise.

Wise Father.

BROWN—I wanted to get married when I was twenty-one, but my father said I didn't have sense enough. So I waited until I was thirty.

Cora—And you married at thirty?

Brown—Oh, no; at thirty I had too much sense to want a wife.

Good Illustration.

LITTLE WILLIE—Pa, what's a redundancy of expression?

Pa—Using more words than are necessary to express one's meaning, such as "wealthy plumber," "poor poet," etc.

RAYMOND—Hello, August!

CAVERLY—Don't call me August, it makes me hot.

RAYMOND—You don't look well today. Why is der reason?

CAVERLY—I tink I got suggestion.

RAYMOND—What have you been eating?

CAVERLY—A tango sandvich.

RAYMOND—What is a tango sandvich?

CAVERLY—A little chicken, mit very little dressing, und not too much mustard.

RAYMOND—Vat is der latest from Mexico?

CAVERLY—Der American Eagle has gone down dere und is flying around to lay der eggs of prosperity und is vaiting for a chance to hatch 'em.

RAYMOND—Who is interfering mit his good intentions?

CAVERLY—A bunch of diplomats who shoot off hot air faster dan Mount Vesuvius, und vhile der eagle is screeching for liberty der diplomats are valting und drinking grape juice.

RAYMOND—Grape juice is a tonic.

CAVERLY—Yes, for der feeble-minded.

RAYMOND—Vat is a diplomat?

CAVERLY—A person who understands how to get money midout vorking und hold his job at der same time.

RAYMOND—Vat is der trouble mit Mexico?

CAVERLY—Der trouble is, everybody vants to be der president.

RAYMOND—Are you going to enlist?

CAVERLY—No.

RAYMOND—Den you are not patriotic.

CAVERLY—Sure I am! Why, I'm so patriotic I von't vear anything but a union suit.

RAYMOND—I am going to enlist und choin der navy.

CAVERLY—You are too old to choin der navy. Remember, you are no chicken.

RAYMOND—I know, but giff me credit for being game.

CAVERLY—If you are going to enlist, take my advice und choin a regiment of plumbers or taxi-cab drivers.

RAYMOND—Vhy?

CAVERLY—Because dem fellows know how to charge.

RAYMOND—Vat does a man haff to be in der army to be buried mit military honors?

CAVERLY—He's got to be dead.

RAYMOND—I see where Admiral Fletcher vent und took Vera Cruz.

CAVERLY—Is do so? When did he marry her?

RAYMOND—Marry who?

CAVERLY—Vera Cruz.

RAYMOND—Vera Cruz ain't a she. It's der capital of Mexico.

CAVERLY—I thought Chile vas der capital.

RAYMOND—No, Chile is der capital of Con Carne.

CAVERLY—Vat does A. B. C. mean?

RAYMOND—American Bull Con.

CAVERLY—Vat's der use to talk about der var when Rosefelt is miles away, und Carnegie is villing to pay millions for peace?

RAYMOND—Dot's der trouble. Rosefelt don't want peace. If he can't find trouble he goes in der jungles und fights mit animals. Why, Rosefelt at der head of Coxey's army can march into Mexico, throw his hat in der ring and make every Mexican salute it.

CAVERLY—I see where he has discovered a new tribe down in Brazil.

RAYMOND—It may be new to him, but I tink it's der same tribe vat voted for Bryan years ago whe he first ran for President.

TWO actors met on Broadway. One of them was in deep mourning, and the other asked who was dead.

"My grandfather," was the reply; "we buried him yesterday."

The other actor murmured sympathy. "Many at the funeral?" he asked.

A gleam of satisfaction broke over the other's gloomy face.

"My boy," he exclaimed, "we were turning 'em away."

He says, "My car broke down, and while the chauffeur was repairing it I entered a farm house to get warm. The farmer and I chatted in the kitchen before the wood stove, and when he asked my name I told him modestly that I was Caruso.

"At that name he threw up his hands.

"'Caruso!' he exclaimed, 'Robinson Caruso, the great traveler. Little did I expect ever to see a man like you in this here humble kitchen, sir.'"

General Grouch on Mexican Affairs.

YOU know what Sherman said about war—and he wasn't even killed. What would he have called it if he had lost a leg?

Down in Mexico a gun in the hand is worth two in the closet.

If our naval officers would bombard some of those Mexican ports with ordinary washing soap the natives wouldn't stop running for a week.

The last time we had war with Mexico it cost her Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and most of California. On that ratio she won't have enough territory to pay her debt to us if we fight to a finish this time.

General Haas hid under a bed. If it had been a folding bed he might have escaped by way of suffocation.

Uncle Sam is taking a mean advantage of the Mexicans. Just as soon as he learned Huerta was begging for trousers for his [illegible] in with his army. How can [illegible] is so terribly exposed to the enemy.

Once it was "Remember the Alamo," then "Remember the Maine," now it is "Remember the Salute we didn't get."

We seemed to overlook Huerta's refusal to salute us and heaped coals of fire on his head by saluting him anyway—with solid shot.

Senator Borah said, "If the Stars and Stripes go up in Mexico it will never come down." Tell it to Huerta, Senator, we should worry.

There is naught so sweet as gentle Spring,
It has got it over everything.
Soon the wild flowers will be blooming

Vol. III. Boston, Sunday, May 17, 1914. No. 23.

THE DIARY OF A DICTATOR

From Hitherto Unpublished Documents Found in the Cellar of the National Palace, Mexico City.

SUNDAY—Quiet afternoon at the bull fight. Everything passed off as usual, even to the riot in which 390 were shot. By a strange coincidence 389 of these were sympathizers with the Constitutionalists.

In the evening visited El Globo cafe. Had the proprietor shot at 11:59 p. m. for running out of brandy.

At midnight everything became a blank.

MONDAY—Did not feel very well this morning. Thought I needed a stimulant, so swallowed a couple of bottles of brandy. Felt a lot more cheerful.

Usual afternoon riot occurred near barracks. Very remarkable and fortunate that out of 471 killed, 470 were friends of either Zapata or Villa.

Spent the evening in El Globo. The new proprietor knows his business. He showed me two cellars entirely filled with brandy. Although not feeling very well, the sight cheered me considerably, and I refrained from having the man shot.

Said I stayed there until 6 in the morning, showing in a practical way my appreciation of the host's efforts to provide entertainment.

TUESDAY—Ouch! Very bad head this afternoon when I awoke. Man tells me I sent eight telegrams to various presidents, kings, etc. Wonder what the deuce I said in them. However, what does it matter.

Three bottles of brandy for breakfast. A substantial meal.

Strange to say, all but one of the 435 killed in the afternoon rioting were Carranzistas. I promoted the colonel in charge of the riot and he is now a general.

A quiet evening at El Globo. Appears I had the Minister of War executed.

WEDNESDAY—Find I must have made a mistake last night. It was the Secretary of the Treasury I meant to have executed. However, I can have that fixed up tonight.

Had a light breakfast of 1½ quarts of brandy. My digestion is not what it should be.

(Here the Ms. has been torn.)

IN THE SMILE'S LETTER BOX

IN THE GRAPE ARBOR.

TO THE EDITOR—I heard a man say yesterday "Well, a buffalo must have it's grapes." What did he mean by that remark? Do buffaloes eat grapes? If so, how do they obtain the grapes?

JOHN VERAX.

(Certainly buffaloes eat grapes. They obtain the grapes by climbing the trees after them.—Ed.)

DREAMS.

TO THE EDITOR—The other night I dreamed that I was falling out of bed. When I awoke I was lying on the floor. That made me believe in dreams, until some one told me that I had gone to sleep on the floor originally. Now I don't believe in dreams.

Mutterzolb and Son

By D. Darby Aaronson

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

"TELL me, Milton," said Mutterzolb, "is this country going crazy in the head or what? Mit the whole world nearly they're fighting war. First wuz mit Mexicow, then mit Tampicohn, now it's mit Vera Caruso. Next I bet you will be mit the Japasneezers.

"And what is the whole fighting about anyway? On account of that murder Hurtem from Mexicow not saluting the United States American flag. He must be a terrible murder to let people get killed on account of a thing like that, especial yet when saluting don't cost anything. And you think that General Village from the Rabbis"——

"Rebsl," corrected Milton.

"Well, whatever is it," returned Mutterzolb, "as bad as business is mit me I could almost laugh when that General Village comes out and says that he'll help the Americans. Sure he'll help the Americans—to get killed.

"You know I feel like writing a letter to President Bryan telling him that he shouldn't trust that General Village. And in the same letter I would want to ask him if he could find for me maybe in Mexicow that new salesman I had mit the red hair who ran away mit my case of sample coats. I wound out yesterday he's got a cousin a soldier. And, believe me, I wouldn't be afraid to write him that I voted for him, too. Of course, he maybe knows that mitout me telling him. Say, what them politicianers don't know!

"But the reason I want to tell him about it is because I like to show him that I am not one of them fellers who's looking for favors all the time. Believe me, if everybody wuz like me we would never have war. War, I tell you, is one of the most terrible things there is. Look at the taxes we'll have to pay. It's true what General Shulman from the Civilized war said what was war.

"And you think there would be today a war in Mexicow if they gave the people there what they wanted? They want education and you can't blame them for it. You see so soon as they commenced to learn them only A-B-C how they're already keeping a little quiet.

"But it's a shame, I tell you, to see our soldiers risking their lifes in in Vera Caruso, where they allow swipers to shoot from the roofs. The ones to blame for that is the landlords from the houses who allows them fellers on their roofs. I wouldn't be surprised even if you could sue them for a thing like this. Well, now, maybe mit that General Funstein there it wouldn't be so easy for them swipers, because that General Funstein is the same feller who catched Aguinalderman, the King of the Phillipeanut Islanders.

"Between me and you, Milton, I think that grafting is got a little to mit that war, too. Do you think that them fellers what they call [illegible], who goes up in the air warships to look around, to find out where the enemy is, do really look around? Yes, they look around, but for what? To see maybe where they could find the best lots cheap.

"For the grafting is bad enough, but the killing, that's already a little worster. A person's life today in Mexicow ain't worth a cent on the dollar. Believe me, Meyer Yukman could thank me that he's alive today, because it wuz me who saved his life. He asked me maybe thirty times I should lend him a thousand dollars to go in business in Mexicow, and it wuz his luck that I couldn't spare it every time he asked me or he would be today a dead man. Don't you think I told him about it last night and made him treat me to a good schnaps and a cigar for that?

"And while I wuz drinking the schnaps I looked in that Meyer's face and would you believe it the tears came right to my eyes to think that such a good A No. 1 feller like him could be dead. There ain't one day passes what that feller don't treat me to either a good cigar or a schnaps. He should only live to be a hundred and twenty years old and I mit him, so that I could show mine appreciations and give him a treat, too.

"After the schnaps we took a walk over to the lodge and commenced to disgust about the war, and so soon as Yusselmayshee, Popkowitz, who wuz sitting alongside of us, heard we got war mit Mexicow, he right away wants to send his whole four sons to be soldiers. You know his brother Abe, who wuz a soldier in the Spanish-American War, made a fortune selling dry goods furnishings to the soldiers. Why don't you be a soldier, Milton?"

"If they call for volunteers I'll gladly go," replied Milton.

"Oh," said Mutterzolb, "so they got to call for you yet? To go yourself you're too high toned. Tell me, if they did already call for you and you wuz a soldier, what would you do?"

"What would I do? Serve my country, of course."

"What would they pay you?" asked Mutterzolb. "Of course duty is duty, and I don't care what the pay is, but just I like to know."

"I think it's about thirteen dollars a month," answered Milton.

"Well," said Mutterzolb, "while business is slack and you ain't doing anything just now, go ahead, be a soldier."

"But I'll never be able to get along with that thirteen dollars a month. I expect you to send me my allowance every week, which I'm sure you'll do, won't you?"

"Sure I will," replied Mutterzolb; "what do you ask such foolish questions for? I couldn't have the cheek to call myself a father if I didn't. But you know, Milton, I'm just thinking that on account of the busy season coming on I'm a little afraid that I can't let you go as a soldier, because I'll need you here mit me."

Loney Haskell on "Innocence"

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

WE now present for your approval Miss Charlotte Davies, the original "Innocence"—the only one left—in this neighborhood. Miss Davies wears a smile and a union suit. The reason she wears a smile is to cover her features—and because her husband is now suing her for divorce she wears a union suit. If her husband won't protect her the union will, for in union there is strength, and the girl needs strong support.

She deserves credit for working so hard, posing twice daily for ten minutes at a time for $400 per week, while the poor working girl working ten hours a day receives only $6 per week. That's because they don't wear union suits and don't get mixed up in law suits. Miss Davies won the $10,000 prize as a model. If you look up the definition of the word model in the dictionary, you will discover that it means the imitation of the real thing. If you look carefully through your glasses you will find Miss Davies is not an imitation. Her union suit cannot bear false witness. She is striving to make as good a showing as possible. She is ambitious to go up in the world. Most of us try to go up and up, and some of us change at Ninety-sixth street. Others continue to go up as far as the Bronx. They don't care what becomes of them.

"Innocence" may be seen in most any art store window, but to see the real flesh and blood one must look at this picture, earning more than a bare living. I call your attention to the various poses, such as "The White Slave," "Cast Up by the Sea," "September Morn." The only change is in the expression.

Would that style of dressing were more popular, what a saving for poor married men and Pittsburgh millionaires. Innocence is the greatest thing in the world, and yet the scarcest. most everybody that is arrested claims it, men worship it and abuse it, women admit it and deny it, and you can't buy it. Yet you can come here and see it. Oh, Innocence, what sins are committed in thy name! With these few words, ladies and gentlemen, I leave you with the seal of purity on my lips. Adieu. Adieu.

Our Own Spring Lexicon

Have You a Little Garden in Your Yard? Are You Troubled with Your Neighbor's Hens and Advice? Then Drink in These Facts.

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

BUDS—There are two kinds of buds, those that come out in society and those that come out in the Spring. Only the latter are green and tender. When you see buds on the fruit trees it is a sign there will be a frost and kill the crop. When you see the other buds it is a sign there will be a wedding, then a frost, with little chances of a crop.

CHICKENS—These are a sign of Spring. One variety break out of their shells in the Spring and go "peep, peep, peep." The other kind cross a muddy street and the men go "peep, peep, peep."

DUST—Always noticeable as soon as Spring comes. Half of it gets into the house and the other half in your eyes just as you want to see what's going on, or by. None of it gets in your pocket.

ENGAGEMENTS—In the Spring a young man's fancy turns to getting married. The dictionary says "fancy" is an imaginary figure, which shows that Webster was hep, as most figures are that way.

FLIES—Another sign of Spring. If they do not wipe their little feet and you get familiar with them, it is a sign you may not see another Spring.

FLOWERS—No Spring is complete without flowers. Flowers are things that grow on magazine covers and in florist's windows, but never in the country where you can find them.

GRASS—The stuff poor children cannot step on because rich tax payers pay for it and then never visit the parks. It is the stuff children will scuff over you if you try to grow a lawn! It is the stuff that grows beautifully in your neighbor's lawn, but only in spots like rash or measles in your own lawn. It is the stuff poets rave about and suburbanites swear about. (See "lawn mowers.")

GARDENS—A garden is a sign of Spring—and softening of the brain if you try to make one. It is also a place where the suburbanite raises hopes and blisters. A rendezvous for your neighbor's hens. The place where you bury $9 worth of seeds and grow seventy-four cents worth of dwarf vegetables.

HEAVY ONES—U—yes, you have guessed. The things we take off too soon in the Spring to please anyone except doctors and undertakers.

HENS—Sociable creatures which scratch up our flower and vegetable gardens. Also a specie of creatures who get out on the veranda during the warm afternoons and guess where the stork will light next.

LEAVES—In the early Spring the leaves remind one so much of the modish skirt—the limbs are not half covered. Leaves are things that look pretty in the Spring, but remind us of the "fall," Garden of Eden and all that sort of thing, you know.

LAWN MOWERS—Cute little machines that run as lightly as thistledown and click as merrily as a cash register the first five minutes, after which they push like a steam roller and sound like the Dead March in Saul.

LAWNS—A narrow bit of ground around the house in Winter which stretches to several acres in lawn mowing season. The place where grass grows unevenly and has to be cut every fifteen minutes.

HOUSE CLEANING—Only sure sign of Spring extant. It never fails. That is why we speak of the tired feeling. When your wife has all the furniture piled up in your den and makes you eat off the gas stove and asks you to beat seven rugs and move the piano upstairs, what is your general impression of "Gentle Spring"? (The answer cannot be published in this paper. Try the Hades Herald.)

MOSQUITOES—New Jersey canaries, half buzz-saw and half crocodile. They arrive each Spring. They invented malaria and boomed the quinine trade and the woven wire business.

MUD—A combination of rain and dust designed to keep wives shouting, "Wipe your feet." If it were not for the fact that the ladies have to cross muddy streets now and then the town fathers would have every street paved.

NEIGHBORS—People who borrow your lawn mower, garden tools, carpet beater, step ladder and window brush—AND BRING THEM BACK!

MOVING—Moving is a Spring habit. It is so much cheaper to move into a renovated flat or house than it is to get a woman to clean house. One move takes the poetry out of Spring, two moves takes the desire out of living.

SCREENS—Sure-fire signs of Spring. Heavy objects we have to bring down from the attic each Spring and then spend a week guessing which one belongs to which window, or vice versa.

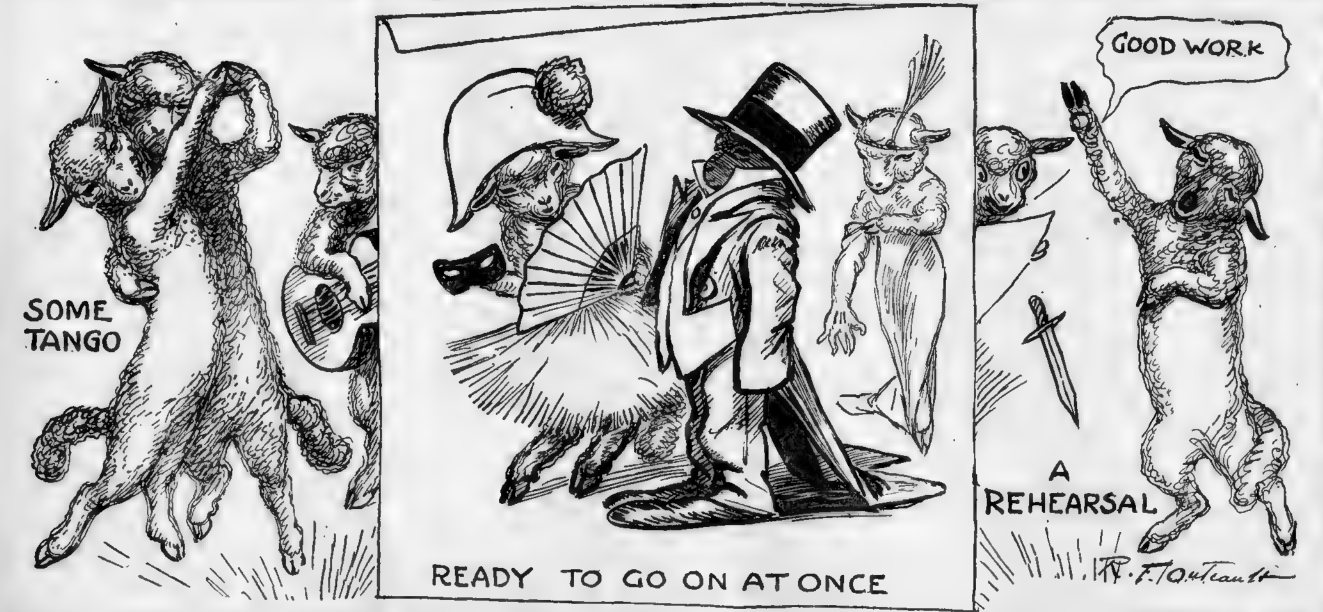
Artist Outcault's Impressions of the Lambs' Gambol in Boston



THE Lambs is an organization of star actors, star writers, star artists in every sphere of intellectual activity. A star actor is one who draws well. Mr. Outcault draws well—hence he is a star, and a Lamb. Not only does Mr. Outcault draw well, but he draws well at the counting room for drawing—hence he is a particularly good Lamb.

Mr. Outcault gives here his impressions of his fellow Lambs who are preparing for the public gambol to be given at the Boston Opera House on the evening of Saturday, May 30 (Decoration Day). Mr. Outcault got his impressions at the fold in New York city, so it may be inferred that no one has pulled the wool over his eyes. He wants it distinctly understood that this drawing is absolutely impersonal. For instance, the Lamb on the right is NOT William Collier, nor are the tangoing Lambs John Philip Sousa and DeWolf Hopper, though all of these stars will take prominent part in the forthcoming entertainment, together with 158 others—for there will be just exactly 160 men in the show, including Sousa's sixty bandsmen.

If you suspect that Julian Eltinge is flirting with Digby Bell in the centrepiece it only shows that you don't understand the real significance of this drawing.

The actual meaning is this: The picture is full of surprises, and so will be the performance; you wonder what is coming next, and that's what you will be guessing about as the elaborate program of the gambol is unfolded at the Opera House. Almost all the stars of theatredom you ever heard about will be there, interpreting the dramatic and musical and dancing sketches contributed by most of the famous writers you have heard about. Someone has figured out that the combined salaries of the artists to be seen in this gambol during the eight working days of the tour, that includes fifteen performances in eleven cities, would cost $112,657.

That doesn't include Sousa's band, which will march at the head of the parade when the Lambs get to town, nor the services of such men as David Belasco, Irvin S. Cobb, George Broadhurst, Winsor McCay, R. F. Outcault, Hy Mayer, Edward Kemble—all of whom are contributing their time and their talents to this very remarkable entertainment.

All in all, the Lambs' gambol promises to be the most notable "show" ever given in this city. The actual program will be announced within a few days, but in the meantime it is sufficient to say that, besides those mentioned above, William Courtleigh, Bruce McRae, William Farnum, Harry Woodruff, George Nash, Frank Lalor, Thomas A. Wise, Edwin Stevens, Maclyn Arbuckle, Frank McIntyre, Andrew Mack, Nat. M. Wills, Brandon Tynan and ninety other stage favorites will form the most remarkable cast ever assembled on any stage.

DECREASE IN ACTIVITY OF REALTY MARKET

Number of Sales in All Sections, Except West Roxbury, Shows Falling Off.

NOTABLE NORTH END DEAL

Trading was somewhat below normal in the real estate market during the past week. Rain was one of the principal factors which served to reduce the number of sales, particularly in the [illegible] market.

The first two days of the week particularly were productive of scant returns to brokers. Towards the end of the week, however, there was a perceptible improvement.

Reports from West Roxbury furnished an interesting contrast to [illegible], more than [illegible] being reported by brokers operating in this section.

In the downtown section only one deal of note went to record. This was the sale of the property located at Nos. [illegible] Atlantic avenue, Nos. 114 to 1[illegible] Commerce and 117 to [illegible] Market street by George B. [illegible]. The purchaser was [illegible] Liberty, trustee.

[illegible] brick buildings and [illegible] feet of land were involved in the transaction. The total tax valuation of the property is $2[illegible], of which $[illegible],000 is on the land.

[illegible] the dwellings at No. 23[illegible] Massachusetts avenue were sold by Charles Groves to Dr. A. K. [illegible]. The estate comprises two three-story brick dwellings and 5,526 square feet of land. The total valuation is [illegible], of which $25,500 is on the land.

Mortgage Market Shows Slight Drop

Conditions Continue to Remain Favorable, However.

Notwithstanding a slight decrease in the number of mortgages that went to record during the past week, conditions underlying the market continue to remain unusually good.

A large quantity of money from various sources—savings banks, co-operative banks and trustees—is in the market available for loans on property.

Rates are considerably lower than last Fall. Mortgages on downtown property are being placed at a rate a shade under 4 per cent. One big downtown property was recently mortgaged at a flat rate of 3 per cent.

On suburban property the average rate is 5 per cent., with plenty of money available. This is in marked contrast to conditions a few months ago, when money for suburban property was scarce and difficult to secure.

Auction Roxbury Realty Saturday

Sale Announced of Two Properties at Public Auction.

The sale of two properties at public auction is announced by George P. MacLellan, a Roxbury auctioneer, to take place next Saturday. The first property is located at Nos. 28 to 64 Terrace street and comprises four three-apartment houses, together with 5,115 square feet of land. The property is assessed for $11,000.

The other property, which adjoins the first, is numbered 60 to 66 Terrace street and contains four three-apartment houses, assessed for $11,000.

Sell Many House Lots in Arlington

A number of lots were reported sold at Arlington Terrace, Arlington, last week. The property lies midway between Arlington Centre and Arlington Heights. It fronts on Forest street and Summer street extension.

The following sales were closed during the past week: Lot No. 136, to Mary Sousa, No. 14 Quincy street, Somerville; lot No. 172, to Thomas A. Bishop, No. 1 Salem street, Cambridge; lot No. 137, to M. W. Besser, No. 10 Pembroke street, and lot No. 71, to B. E. Prest, No. 16 Laurel street, Arlington.

Brisk Demand for Lots in Arlington

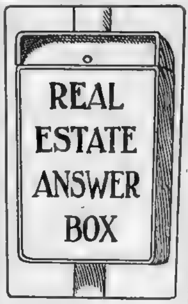
A large demand has developed for lots at Highland Park, Arlington Heights, which is being developed by the W. E. Jewett Land Company. The property fronts on the proposed State boulevard to pass through Arlington. The property is centrally located and has been restricted to insure a good class of dwellings.

MELROSE HOUSE BOUGHT.

A. H. Robertson has sold his estate at No. 48 Rockland street, Melrose Highlands, comprising a house of nine rooms and lot of land containing 11,910 square feet. Frank L. Jones of Cambridge is the purchaser. The property is assessed on a valuation of $4,425. The Edward T. Harrington Company were the brokers.

TURN-VEREIN BUYS LOT.

The sale is reported of a lot on Washington street, opposite Iffley road, Jamaica Plain, containing 11,349 square feet and assessed for $3,400. The grantor was Frank E. Granger, trustee, the purchaser being the Boston Turn-Verein. The Edward T. Harrington Company were the brokers.



Address all questions to the Real Estate Information Bureau, Boston American. Questions should be plainly written on only one side of the paper. Full name and address of the inquirer must appear, or the question will be disregarded. In addition, place on the inquiry a number under which the answer will appear.

No. 1098—We would advise you to make no further payment on the lot and to place the facts in the hands of the Postoffice Department, provided you have dealt with them through the mail. The concern in question is of unsavory repute, and the methods pursued are extremely questionable.

There have been a number of New York concerns exploiting the public by means of puzzle picture advertisements similar to the one solved by you. One of their methods of "working" the public, as in your case, is to present one lot free to the person solving the puzzle, which is of extreme publicity. Before the title is delivered, however, another lot must be purchased. The lots are usually next to valueless. The AMERICAN refuses to carry puzzle-picture advertisements of this nature because they are almost always of a questionable character.

No. 163—Co-operative banks in Massachusetts are widely recognized as unusually safe and sound institutions. They are conservatively managed. Their accounts are subjected to close scrutiny by the Massachusetts Bank Commissioner. Consequently, no means of savings is so strongly recommended. The institution about which you inquire has been established for almost twenty years. Though small, it is sound and affords ample protection to its shareholders.

• • •

No. 475—The dissolution suit against the concern in question is still pending in the New York courts. The security behind their bonds consists of equities in New York real estate. They are not secured by a direct lien on any property. Hence, their safety is dependent on the solvency of the firm. At best it is purely a speculation. A number of New York concerns of a similar nature have gone into insolvency, with almost complete loss to bondholders.

• • •

No. 703—If the property has been probated by the court you can sell it. If no decision has been given, consult the clerk of the Probate Court in question as to the status of the case.

• • •

No. 5—We know of no concern such as you refer to. Co-operative banks are institutions which were expressly established to aid persons in acquiring their homes. Co-operative banks are permitted by statute to loan 20 per cent. of the value of a house. Usually they require at least 25 per cent., in order to be safe in case of depreciation. On a house valued at $2,800, consequently you would be required to have at least $760 equity.

• • •

No. 38—The property about which you inquire is valued by the Mansfield assessors at $2,250. Of this amount $1,500 is apportioned to the house, $75 to the two poultry houses. The remainder is on the land.

• • •

No. 332—You may pursue one of two methods in selling your farm. One would be to advertise the place yourself in the newspapers. The other would be to place it in the hands of a broker. There are a number of brokers who specialize in the handling of farm property. The usual commission is 5 per cent., though this varies. We refer you to the names of a number of farm brokers whose advertisements appear in this section.

• • •

No. 26—Your description of the property is too vague. The exact location—street and number—of the property must be submitted, in order for you to secure the desired information.

ACQUIRE HOMES BY CO-OPERATIVE BANK SAVING PLAN

Co-operative Banks Prove Big Factor in Aiding Suburbanites to Own Homes.

ERNEST A. HALE.
Treasurer, Suffolk Co-operative Bank.

One of the most important features, if not the most important, of co-operative banks is the lending of money, for it is this which enables its members to build or buy their homes. Only shareholders can be borrowers, but anyone can qualify, that is, buy enough shares to cover the amount they wish to borrow.

The usual form of lending, until a few years ago, was to auction off the money each month to the highest bidder. But now the more progressive co-operative banks have a minimum rate fixed by the board of directors at which they take all loans in the order that the applications are received. This rate is usually 5½ per cent.

The total interest paid these banks is sometimes more than that charged in the regular channels of banking, although the fact that the borrower, as a shareholder, is participating in the earnings of the association generally makes the net cost of the loan less than if it were made through any other source.

The borrower usually has a piece of ground on which he wants to build or has found a house that he wants for his home. He gives, as security for his loan, not only the pledge of his shares, but also a first mortgage on his property. Often, however, people begin to buy shares when they do not own property, and accumulate funds with which to buy. In this way they get a start for a home of their own which they could a piece of property by buying shares get in no other way.

The one great advantage of the co-operative bank loan over all other methods of financing a home is that the plan of payment favors the borrower, as he pays both interest and principal in small monthly installments, seldom more and often less, than the amount formerly paid for rent.

A few other features not to be found in the so-called "straight loan" are that the co-operative bank mortgage can never be called if the monthly payments are regularly met. A partial payment on the principal can be made at any time, or the mortgage paid off in full whenever it is so desired. In about twelve years, with no other payments than the monthly dues and interest, the mortgage will be paid off and the home cleared of all indebtedness.

New Type of Dwellings Said to Solve Apartment House Problem.

Boston architects and builders are studying the "staircase apartment houses," the latest wrinkle in apartment house construction.

The "staircase apartment," which originates in Paris, is put forward by the architects who developed it, as the solution of the apartment house problem. It possesses a number of advantages over the ordinary type of structure, and its architects claim that it can be built at smaller cost.

The photograph shows a row of "staircase apartment houses" recently completed in Paris, showing balconies in front of each floor.

The peculiarity of the "staircase apartment" is that the front of each floor is some feet back from that of the floor immediately below it, thus providing adequate light and ventilation to many more apartments than would get them under ordinary circumstances, and permitting the architects to run the building up to a greater height than would be allowed by the Paris authorities if the fronts of all the floors were directly above one another in a straight line.

APARTMENT WELL LIGHTED.

The "stop," or staircase, arrangement provides a number of floors, all equally well lighted from the street. Each of the upper floors of the house has a terrace garden on the roof of the floor immediately below, which enables its occupants to be out in the fresh air as much as they please without stirring from home.

On account of the additional light which reaches the street on which their novel building is situated, the architects say that it has sunlight for almost one hour longer than thoroughfares parallel to it.

The apartment house is built of reinforced concrete in such a way that no floor has to support the weight of those above it. This is secured by pillars perpendicular to the street level, to which beams supporting each floor are attached. By employing this method, the architects claim to have proved something better than the usual type of apartment house construction.

ROSLINDALE ESTATE SOLD.

Clara Whicker has sold the property at No. 11 Tyndale street, Roslindale, to Mrs. Margaret McManus. The property comprises a single family dwelling and 4,000 feet of land taxed for $5,600. Robert R. Fowler was the broker.

TO BUILD IN ROSLINDALE.

Final papers have been recorded transferring the lot of land on South street, Roslindale, containing 11,034 square feet, from A. L. Walker to M. Kenney. The purchaser will build a single family dwelling. Windsor R. Porter and son were the brokers.

TRANSFER E. B. DWELLING.

Thomas O. McEnaney reports the sale of the property at No. 57 Brooks street, East Boston, to Julia Fann. The grantor is Mary A. McCarthy. The property contains an eleven-room dwelling and about 2,000 square feet of land. It is assessed for $2,800.

SALE IN EAST BOSTON.

Margaret Miller has sold her house at No. 345 Border street, East Boston, to B. F. Nay. The dwelling contains eleven rooms and includes 2,132 square feet of land. The broker was T. O. McEnaney.

ARCHITECTS MEET GREATER DWELLING COST

Solve Problem of Greater Cost of Material and Labor by Skillful Planning.

ECONOMIZE IN ARRANGEMENT

F. H. GOWING.

With the cost of raw materials and labor constantly mounting, the problem of the architect in devising plans for a moderate-priced home is becoming more and more difficult.

The architect is consequently obliged to use greater and greater ingenuity and skill in planning a home which will be of sufficient size to meet requirements and at the same time fall within the cost specified.

Of course, one offshoot of this greater cost of material and labor has been the development of the frame "three-flatter."

In the single-family dwelling, however, higher cost has resulted in distinct tendencies which have, in a measure, been improvements over old conditions. These tendencies have been along the lines of the replacement of frame exteriors by those of brick and stucco; increased simplicity of design, and greater attention by architects to conversation of space by economic arrangement of rooms.

INCREASED COST OF LUMBER.

The increased use of brick, terra cotta tile and stucco in single-family dwellings has been due to the fact that lumber has increased in cost faster proportionately than any other building material. For example, lumber that could be bought in the woods on the stump from $5 to $8 per thousand now brings from $10 to $15. And to this must be added the increased cost of transportation from distant points.

As a result, a brick or cement dwelling may be constructed at a price which represents only a small fraction of increase over a similar structure constructed of wood. And deducting from the difference the saving in repairs, depreciation and lessened cost of insurance, the cost is practically equalized.

In addition to this, other factors, such as reduced fire hazard and heightened beauty, account for the increased vogue of these non-inflammable building materials.

TENDENCY TO SIMPLICITY.

The second result from increased cost of construction—the tendency towards simplicity of design—is evident in almost every dwelling constructed within the past few years. Not alone in structures where the price factor looms large, but in houses where cost is no object, the designs are of the severest simplicity. By omitting fancy ornament the cost is not only reduced, but the beauty enhanced, particularly in stucco structures, where beauty is almost entirely dependent on simplicity of design.

Conservation of space, finally, is the third angle from which designs have been studied by architects. By paying proper attention to this matter houses with smaller exterior dimensions have been made to yield equal living space. This has been accomplished by reducing the size of kitchens and closets, and by skillful arrangement of rooms.

RAPID GROWTH AROUND BOSTON

Percentages of Increase in Population of Towns Near Hub Show Good Growth.

Analysis by Secretary Frederic H. Viaux of the Boston Real Estate Exchange of the 1914 estimates of the Census Bureau of the population of many communities of Metropolitan Boston, shows gratifying percentages of growth in many cases.

Revere shows a large increase which at the rate of the 1914 estimate foreshadows an increase of 50 per cent. for the decade ending 1920. In the ten years between 1900 and 1910 Revere gained 7,924 in population, an increase of 75.27 per cent.

Winthrop figures point to a 50 per cent. growth by 1920. Somerville showed a gain of 25.33 per cent. between 1900 and 1910, and her 1914 percentage points to a much larger growth by 1920, if sustained. Brookline gained 39.28 per cent. in the last decade. Her 1914 gain presages a further growth of 25 per cent. by 1920.

The average percentage of gain of the twenty-one communities outside of Boston is 9.67, somewhat less than the 9.43 gain of Boston, showing that the parent city is holding her own. The growth of Metropolitan Boston is indicated in the following tables:

	1914 Estimated	1910 Population	Increase	Percent

Largest House of Its Kind in the World

A late Spring makes it possible for you to purchase your late model touring car or runabout from us at a price lower than you will pay others for older models of the same make. We had stocked up at rush season prices, and now you have the advantage of these conditions. These cars must be sold to make room for our June and July supply, and we must sacrifice any car sold for "Half Down and Balance Monthly if Desired," with no extra charge, and you deal direct with us. Many of these cars have been consigned to us by concerns that must have ready cash for their supply of new cars. This is your opportunity. A call will convince you that in our stock of over 175 cars we have what you want.

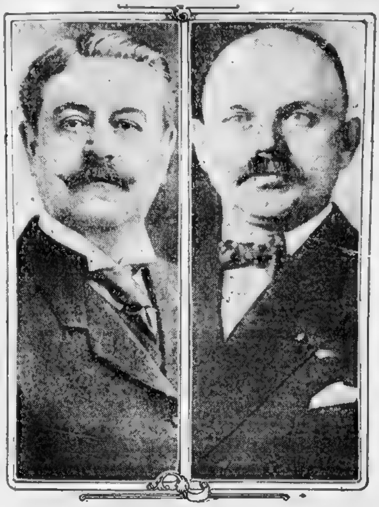
LINK AUBURN, ME., SHOOTING WITH FAMOUS BIBBER CASE

Recent Attempt to Assassinate Aretas A. Rowell Strangely Similar to Mysterious Murder of John W. Bibber, in 1912

Description of Assailant in Each Case Almost Identical—Both Shot from Behind—Collar Button Saves Rowell's Life

THE victims in Maine's strange mystery: John W. Bibber, at left, of Lewiston, who was shot to death two years ago, and Aretas A. Rowell of Auburn, recently shot and seriously wounded in much the same manner.



AUBURN, Me., May 16.—That there is a connection between the shooting of Aretas A. Rowell, a prominent Auburn man, who is now at the Central Maine General Hospital, Lewiston, in a serious condition, and the murder of John W. Bibber of Lewiston two years ago, is the belief of those who have studied the striking similarity of features of the two cases.

The descriptions of the assassin of Bibber and of the assailant of Rowell are almost identical. Bibber was slain near his home on Oak street on Wednesday night, April 24, 1912, about 9.40 o'clock. He was shot from behind in the head and shoulder.

Rowell was shot on Wednesday night, May 6, at about 9.30 o'clock, near his home, No. 116 Goff street. He also was shot from behind in the neck and shoulder.

One of the shots entered Rowell's right shoulder near the base of the neck; another grazed his neck and the third struck his collar button and glanced into the flesh, causing an ugly wound, but not a fatal one, it is believed. Surgeons say the collar button saved Rowell's life.

Rowell is a well-built man of fifty, and for several years had been head clerk in the clothing establishment of Fred W. Robie, Court street, Auburn. His general physique was similar to that of Bibber, who also was fifty years old and had for many years been head clerk in the custom tailoring shop of Fred H. White, Main street, Lewiston.

BOTH PROMINENT.

Both were prominent in their respective communities. Bibber was unmarried and active in club circles. Rowell is married a second time and has one daughter by his first wife and a stepson. He was in the habit of spending his evenings at home and gave little attention to social clubs.

So far as known the officers have found no motive for the shooting of Rowell. During the investigation of the Bibber case it was openly asserted by detectives that there was a "woman in the case," and it was believed that the motive for his killing was jealousy.

The night he was shot Mr. Rowell remained at the store until a few minutes after 9 o'clock, and then started to walk to his home half a mile away. When he was within a few steps of his home his would-be assassin stepped out from behind a tree and deliberately fired five shots at him. The wounded man staggered into the home of Dr. C. C. Peaslee. He was conscious, and, after saying he had been shot, remarked: "I didn't deserve this." He was then hurried to a hospital, where he now lies in a serious condition and is not allowed to see any one except the attending surgeon and the members of his immediate family. He is not known to have made any statement to them except to positively assert that he could not identify the person who shot him.

NO CLEW DISCOVERED.

Under the direction of Chief F. B. Taylor of the Auburn police department an investigation promptly was begun. Various clews have been run down, until now the officers are at a loss as to which way to direct their probe. The Auburn committee on police, Mayor A. W. Fowles and Aldermen McGibbon and Chase, have authorized the payment of $500 reward for information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the person who attacked Mr Rowell.

Chief Taylor declares he has been unable to find the slightest motive for the crime. Miss Irene Rowell, daughter of the victim, said she believed the shooting was deliberately planned. If she can see a motive upon which to base such a statement, she has failed to mention it to the police. The officers are inclined to believe that Mr Rowell was mistaken for another person, but they have no idea as to the identity of the "other person." The "mistaken identity" theory was early advanced in the investigation of the Bibber murder, but was later abandoned.

The man who did the shooting was seen by at least two persons, Mrs. G. H. Field, Jr, and her son, who were returning from the theatre. They describe him as being about five feet eight inches tall, smooth shaven, dressed in a dark suit and a light-colored overcoat and cap or soft hat.

Miss Blanche Plummer and Irving Brown walked up Goff street a few minutes before the shooting and were followed by a man answering perfectly this description. As the young couple passed along this man stepped suddenly out from behind a tree and eyed them closely as they passed him. Then he turned and followed them for some distance. Miss Plummer became frightened and suggested that they cross over to the opposite side of the street.

MAN FOLLOWED PAIR.

The strange man followed them across the street and then walked close behind them for some distance. Miss Plummer was completely unnerved when she reached her home and suggested to Mr Brown that he return home by another street.

As in the case of John Bibber, it is believed that Mr. Rowell had been watched for several nights, that the man who shot him had been prowling about the houses in that section of the city, either to familiarize himself with the intersecting streets and back alleys to enable him to make a quick getaway or else learn the habits of Mr. Rowell. Miss Mabel Hill, who lives near the Rowell house, beleves she heard a man in the yard of her home late the night before the shooting.

That Bibber was watched and possibly warned several nights prior to the fatal shooting was revealed by the investigation. A strange man, whose description tallies exactly with that of Rowell's assailant, was seen prowling about the section of the city where Mr. Bibber lived at least two nights before the murder. He was seen by at least two persons, but was not identified.

In neither the Bibber or Rowell case was robbery the motive. Bibber's slayer leisurely walked away from the scene of the shooting, according to Fred Eaton, in whose house Bibber lived and who was attracted to the window by the shots in time to see a man bending over Bibber's body and then slowly straighten up and walk away. Rowell's assailant ran from the scene of the shooting in Auburn and is believed to have boarded an electric car on Troy street.

Conductor Walter Lowe recalls that such a man came running down Troy street at about 9:40 that night and jumped aboard the car while it was moving. The man acted strangely and called for a transfer to one of the main line cars out of the city. At this time Conductor Lowe did not know of the shooting.

There are so many similar features between the two cases that many are inclined to believe that a solution of the Rowell shooting mystery will shed important light on the Bibber murder.

STRIVE TO SOLVE PUZZLE.

Mr. Rowell was well known in both Lewiston and Auburn and highly respected. He had served as a member of the Board of Aldermen of Auburn and held other offices of trust in his city. He was not known to have an enemy in the world. Neither was Bibber, for that matter. The people of Lewiston and Auburn are deeply concerned over the second shooting and a determined effort is to be made to clear up the mystery.

There is strong talk of resuming the investigation of the Bibber case, which has been closed for several months.

It is said that only recently new and important facts relating to the killing of the Lewiston club man have come to light, and if developed might lead to the connecting link with evidence already in the possession of the officials. No inquest has ever been held in the Bibber case and the mass of evidence, much of which was of a very sensational character, gathered by detectives, has never been presented to a coroner's jury or given judicial consideration of any kind.

Walsh to Speak at Worcester Tech

WORCESTER, May 16.—President Henry Hollis of Worcester Polytechnic Institute received an acceptance from Governor Walsh today of an invitation to be one of the commencement speakers on June 11.

There was considerable disappointment at Holy Cross College that the Governor was unable to be present at the Yale baseball game, although by being absent His Excellency escaped seeing his Alma Mater beaten by the Eli bulldog to the score of 1 to 6.

Children Dance in Dorchester Party

A most successful May party was given to the children of Dorchester by the Dorchester Guild in Whiton Hall, Centre street, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon. The hall was crowded with little ones who enjoyed themselves in general dancing, and a Punch and Judy Show. Refreshments were also served during the performance.

Loads of Rubbish in Clean-Up Week

In a statement telling the good results of Boston's "clean-up and paint-up" campaign, the committee enumerates these articles as having been put out on the sidewalks as rubbish by citizens: "Trunks, suit cases, hand bags, lounges, Morris chairs, parlor suites, kitchen chairs, spring beds and iron bedsteads, hundreds of mattresses, bicycles, wash boilers, hot water boilers, straw matting, oilcloth, stove pipe, gas stoves, wire fencing, broken screens, crockery, old bottles, iron and wooden barrel hoops, silk hats, straw hats, derby hats, hundreds of Christmas trees, sleds, baby carriages in great variety, ice chests, bath tubs, umbrellas, iron roofing, rags, carpets, etc.

The output was astonishing in amount, as well as variety, many families having six, eight and ten barrels of rubbish, with bulky material on top."

Poultry Department

During the past five years the experiments carried on at the Storrs station have shown most conclusively that bacillary white diarrhea is an infectious disease which is caused by a definite micro-organism, Bacterium pullorum. While the disease is spread from chick to chick, through infected droppings, the real source of the trouble is the mother hen.

A large percentage of female chicks which survive an attack of the disease appear to become permanent bacillus carriers; that is, they continue to harbor the germ of the disease for an indefinite period or perhaps permanently.

The ovary is the seat of this persistent infection, hence, eggs produced by such ovaries carry the disease bacterium in them, and when used for hatching purposes, convey the infection to the developing chicks which, therefore, acquire the disease prior to their escape from the shell. Such chicks become the centres of infection for other chicks with which they are brooded.

A campaign for the eradication of bacillary white diarrhea, to be successful, must be aimed at the complete elimination of the permanent carriers, that is to say, the infected hens, from the mature stock. In other words, none but sound uninfected stock should be employed for breeding purposes.

Since the Storrs station began to advocate this important means of prevention numerous requests have been received for information as to where eggs for hatching and day-old chicks might be purchased which were free from any history of white diarrhea infection. The station has examined thousands of eggs by the bacteriological methods and by practical incubation and direct observation tests. Furthermore, bacteriological examinations have been made of numerous dead chicks and of the ovaries of many hens obtained from various sources.

The significant fact was revealed that of the many flocks that were examined there were only two that did not show evidence of white diarrhea infection. This revelation explains the station's present inability to suggest or recommend sound breeding stock to those desiring such information.

One writer (Kaupp) says that of all the chicks hatched in this country 10 per cent. die from white diarrhea. The disease is probably more prevalent in New England than in the country at large. In the station's own experience it has been most difficult during the past five years to obtain for its investigational work hatching eggs from stock wholly untainted with bacillary white diarrhea. The situation in Connecticut is not thought to be any worse than in the greater part of the New England and Middle Atlantic States.

Since, therefore, it is so difficult to secure good eggs from outside sources it seems necessary to resort to additional measures for the eradication of white diarrhea. The blood agglutination test as devised by Jones of Cornell furnishes the much-sought means.

The value of the test is such as to leave no doubt in the minds of those who have employed it. It has been applied during the past year to hundreds of fowls at the Storrs station, and has been found to be most practical and reliable as the bulletin will show. Infected hens may be distinguished with ease from the uninfected by means of this agglutination test, and thus be completely eliminated from the breeding stock.

The Storrs station is now in a position to carry on a system of blood testing whereby flocks of mature hens that are to be kept over as breeders in 1915 may be thoroughly tested, provided the measure meets with a ready response from poultrymen. In order to conduct such a campaign it may be necessary to charge a fee of about five cents for each hen examined, as it will require the assistance of trained men and will involve other expense which should be borne, at least in part, by owners whose stock is tested.

The Station will give a certificate of testing in all cases where a thorough examination has been made and will offer such additional aid and information as may appear to be necessary in the elimination of infected hens, and the future safeguarding of the stock against infection. No publicity will be given to conditions, as found, in any of the flocks tested.

The agglutination method of determining ovarian infection involves the drawing of a very small amount of blood from the wing vein, and in such a manner as not to injure the fowls or to retard or otherwise affect the egg yield.

The object of this undertaking is the ultimate eradication of bacillary white diarrhea which is the cause of such great financial loss to poultrymen, and which indirectly affects the welfare of all persons. For the accomplishment of this aim the full cooperation of poultrymen is not only desirable, but necessary.

What to feed to get the best egg results has been demonstrated at Cornell, the experiments covering a sufficient length of time to make the information worth while.

The tests, made over a period of three years, found two hens which went over the 600 egg mark and two others well over the 500 mark. Cornell Supreme laid 665 eggs in three years, and a surprising feature of the test was that in the third year this hen laid 225 eggs. The ration for laying hens is given below, the following whole grain mixture to be fed morning and afternoon in a straw litter.

By weight, Winter:—		By weight, Summer:—
60 lbs.	Wheat.	60 lbs.	Wheat.
60 "	Corn.	60 "	Corn.
30 "	Oats.	30 "	Oats.
20 "	Buckwheat.

By measure, Winter—		By measure, Summer—
32 qts.	Wheat.	32 qts.	Wheat.
38 "	Corn.	30 "	Corn.
30 "	Oats.	30 "	Oats.
20 "	Buckwheat.

The following mash is fed in a dry hopper kept open during the afternoon only:—

By weight, Winter and Summer:—		By measure, Winter and Summer:—
60 lbs.	Corn meal.	77 qts.	Corn meal.
60 "	Wheat middlings.	71 "	Wheat middlings.
30 "	Wheat bran.	67 "	Wheat bran.
10 "	Alfalfa meal.	20 "	Alfalfa meal.
10 "	Oil meal.	8 "	Oil meal.
50 "	Beef scrap.	41 "	Beef scrap.
1 "	Salt.	½ "	Salt.

The fowls should eat about one-half as much mash by weight as whole grain. Regulate the proportion of grain and ground feed by giving a light feeding of grain in the morning and about all they will consume in the afternoon feeding in time to find grain before dark. In case of pullets or fowls in heavy laying, restrict both night and morning feeding to induce heavy eating of dry mash, especially in the case of hens. This ration should be supplemented with beets, cabbage, sprouted oats, green clover or other succulent food, unless running on grass covered range.

Grit, cracked oyster shell and charcoal should be accessible at all times. Green food should not be fed in a frozen condition. All feed and litter used should be strictly sweet, clean and free from mustiness, mold or decay. Serious losses frequently occur from disease, due to the fowls taking into their bodies, through their intestinal tract or lungs, the spores or fungi causing molds.

Advice from Prof. Graham

Professor J. C. Graham, through the Extension Service of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, gives the following timely advice:

"For baby chicks, bread soaked in milk and squeezed makes a very good mash. Some get good results by feeding nothing but chick feed. Others start them out on bread or cracker crumbs and johnny cake. The infertile eggs are sometimes fed raw by mixing them with oatmeal and bran. This should not be done unless we are sure they are of good healthy stock. Usually they are boiled hard, chopped up shell and all, and mixed with ground grains. It is not so much what we feed, but how we feed it. I like the [illegible] ing because it brings them along fast. After the first two weeks, if we haven't plenty of bread crumbs we feed a wet mash twice daily.

"In other respects the feeding is the same as the first two weeks except a little cracked corn, hulled oats and what are mixed with the chick feed. When the chicks are six weeks old, the wet mash is displaced by a dry mash and the chick feed is gradually displaced by cracked corn and wheat. The dry mash is composed of the following by weight:

"1 part wheat bran, 1 part wheat middlings, 1 part corn meal, 1 part finely ground oats, 1 part alfalfa (ground), 1 part beef scrap.

"If the chicks have free range, the alfalfa and one-half to three-fourths of the beef scrap should be omitted, as they can get plenty of green feed, bugs and worms will take the place of beef scrap.

Sour Milk for Chicks and Hens

What are the benefits to be derived by the feeding of sour milk?—J. B. Q.

Sour skimmed milk is one of the best feeds for both young and old chicks. The experts at the Pittsfield Poultry Farm say it contains certain valuable elements that lessen the losses in young chicks, increase their vitality, encourage growth, in short counteract any tendency toward white diarrhoea or other diseases.

In laying birds it maintains vitality and supplies egg-forming material without fattening the birds or otherwise putting them out of condition. Wherever it is used, the Pittsfield Farm feel certain a very material increase in the egg production will be noted.

In feeding this observe the following rules.

When once started to feed it do not change to sweet milk or take away, otherwise change in condition of stock or falling off in production will be noted. If you are not situated to feed regularly and continually (except for a first feed in case of chicks) do not start at all.

Keep before stock all of the time renewing it in the pans each day at noon.

Allow the milk to sour until it is quite thick, but not rancid.

Quantity required is about as follows:

Daily, for 100 chicks, 1 quart
Daily, for 100 hens, 5 quarts

Poultry and Supplies

YOUNG CHICKS die of bowel trouble more than any other cause. It is estimated that of every 1000 chicks hatched each year less than 400 reach marketable size. Germozone users raise, usually, 90% of chicks hatched. Germozone keeps the bowels regular. It prevents diarrhoea from overdrinking of water; from eating musty or spoiled food, etc. It should be given in drinking water twice a week from the day they are hatched. It stops the loss. Every chick that dies cuts badly into the profit from the rest. Every chick saved will pay the cost of a bottle of Germozone.

One size only, 50 cents, at dealer's or postpaid.

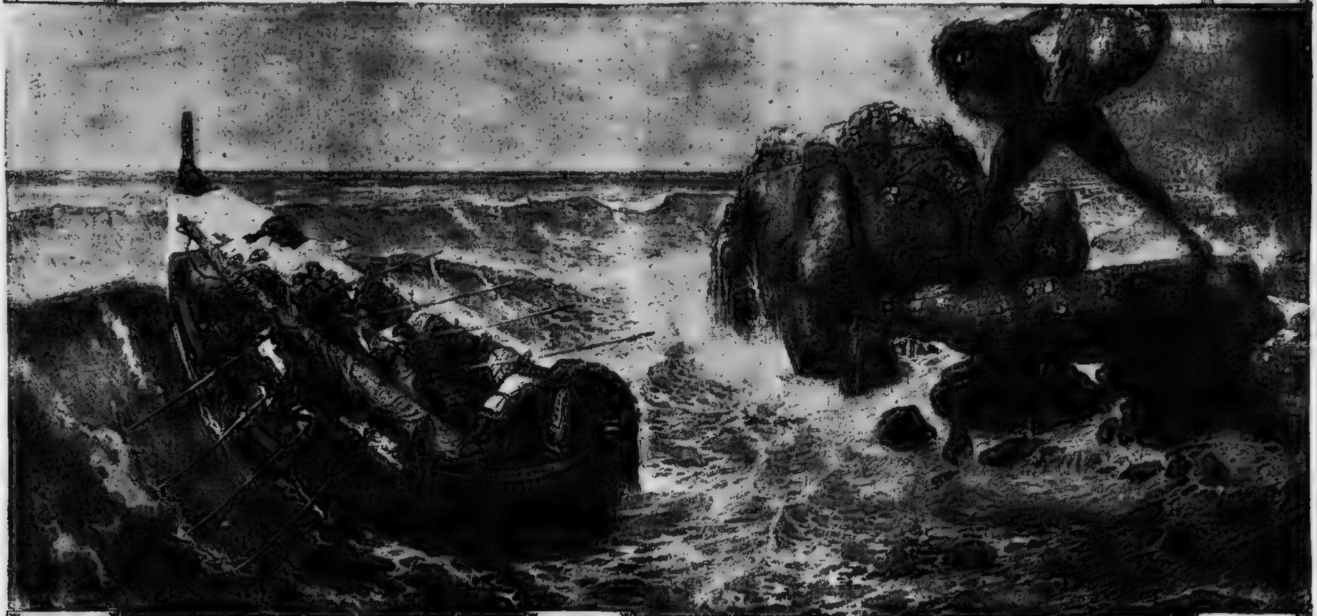
Bones of Homer's One Eyed Cyclops Found!



Polyphemus, the Cyclops of Homer's "Odyssey," Hurling a Rock at the Escaping Ulysses and His Companions.
Painting by A. Bocklin.

Science Discovers in Fossil Remains of Hideous, Gigantic, Man-Like Monsters in Sicily the Basis of the Famous Story and of the World-Wide Primitive Legends of Man-Eating Giants and Ogres

THE story of the Cyclops, the hideous, one-eyed monster who attacked Ulysses and his companions, is one of the most thrilling passages in Homer's "Odyssey."

Similar references to giants and ogres are common in the ancient literature of many countries. In earlier days the belief that such monsters really existed was universal, and it is probable that we should find a very widespread belief in their existence even to-day.

Now science has come forward with the most surprising evidence that Homer's story was founded on fact. Professor Abel, of the University of Vienna, a distinguished palaeontologist, has found in Sicily the very home of the Homeric Cyclops, remains of monsters of human form that compare with surprising closeness to Polyphemus and the other monsters of the great Greek epic.

The remains found in Sicily consist, it is stated, of two huge skulls of a form almost human and of prehistoric character, but strangely distinguished by having a large socket like an eyehole in the centre of the forehead.

Whether the socket really represents an eyehole is as yet uncertain. It may be that it marks the place of a single horn in the centre of the forehead, such as many extinct monsters are known from their fossil remains to have possessed Professor Abel is inclined to believe that the hole marks the place of a trunk like that of the elephant or the ancient mammoth.

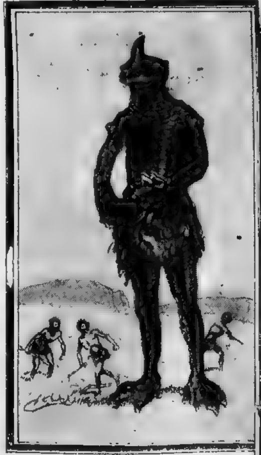
The skeletons found are so imperfect that it is as yet impossible to calculate the exact dimensions of the extinct monsters, but it is certain that they were of immense size, perhaps over thirty feet in height.

The professor recalls that at many times in the past there have been legends concerning the existence of such monsters in Sicily Empedocles, the early Greek philosopher, who lived in Sicily and possessed a scientific mind of a remarkably modern type, asserted their existence, and so did other ancient writers.

Boccaccio in the Middle Ages introduced Sicilian monsters into one of the tales of his "Decameron." There are also curious references to the subject in "Don Quixote." The Don tells Sancho Panza as proof of the existence of giants that "bones have been found in Sicily of such a prodigious great size that thence is infallibly to be argued men of above 100 feet in height."

There is, then, clearly a great deal of evidence concerning the existence of man-like monsters in Sicily, and it is reasonable to argue that Homer, in placing Polyphemus, the chief Cyclops, and the race of Cyclopes there, was guided by some reality. Did Homer build his story upon the bones of monsters that had been found, but were extinct in his time, or did he describe living monsters that had been described to him by travelers? That is a question that may give rise to much discussion among scholars.

Homer lived in the prehistoric period, as long ago, perhaps as the age of Moses, who also states in the Book of Genesis that "there were giants in those days." It is probable that many animals now extinct were roaming the earth in Homer's time. Indeed, we know that the hairy mammoth was living in Siberia considerably later than his day.



How the Monster Whose Bones Have Been Found in Sicily Actually Looked.
Sketch by One of Professor Abel's Companions.

Homer's story of the Cyclops is full of details that suggest that he was describing facts. He tells us how Ulysses on his way back from Troy to Ithaca landed at a certain spot in Sicily because he was very much in need of provisions. He and his men carried with them a jar of wine for a present to the natives. They came to a great cave, which they entered and found stored with cheese, milk, lambs, kids and other supplies.

Presently Polyphemus, the giant monster of the cave, returned. He had one huge eye in the centre of his forehead and was covered all over with hair. He closed the cave with a great rock that twenty oxen could not move.

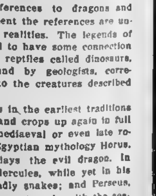
When the Greeks politely asked him for supplies he seized two of them, dashed their brains out and devoured them. The next morning he treated two more of them in the same way. Then he went out of the cave and closed it with a rock, as before.

While the Cyclops was away Ulysses planned to get revenge for his slain companions and escape from the monster. He and his followers sharpened the end of a young tree which the Cyclops used as a staff. When the giant returned in the evening he devoured two more Greeks for supper.

Ulysses offered him the jar of wine. Polyphemus swallowed it at a gulp with much pleasure and promised Ulysses that he would eat him last as a great mark of favor. He asked Ulysses his name, to which the crafty Greek replied, "My name is Noman."

After supper, when the giant had gone to sleep, Ulysses and four companions made the end of the stake red hot. Then they drove it deep into the eye of the monster. He bellowed for help to the neighboring Cyclopses. They asked who was hurting him, and he replied "Noman." Then his friends said they could not help him.

In the morning Polyphemus rolled the rock from his cave door, but stood there to catch the Greeks if they tried to escape. The crafty Ulysses had instructed his companions to tie the Cyclops' sheep three abreast. Each man was then to conceal himself under the middle sheep, and in that way to get out of the cave. The blind Cyclops felt the backs and sides of the sheep, but omitted to examine underneath them. In this ingenious manner Ulysses and his companions safely escaped



Ulysses, the Hero Who Put Out the Cyclops' Only Eye.

Other classical authors besides Homer refer to the existence of the Cyclops in Sicily. Ovid says that Polyphemus was the son of Neptune and the nymph Thoosa.

The significant thing about these stories and legends is that they agree in making Sicily the home of a race of monstrous giants

In the ancient legends and literature of every race there are references to dragons and giants To some extent the references are undoubtedly based on realities. The legends of dragons are believed to have some connection with the prehistoric reptiles called dinosaurs, whose remains, found by geologists, correspond very closely to the creatures described by primitive stories.

The dragon figures in the earliest traditions of the human race, and crops up again in full force in European mediaeval or even late romance In ancient Egyptian mythology Horus, the son of Isis, slays the evil dragon. In Greece the infant Hercules, while yet in his cradle, strangles deadly snakes; and Perseus, after engaging in fierce struggle with the sea-monster, slays it and rescues Andromeda from a cruel death. In England the heroic legend of St George and the Dragon has become a national epic. It is easy to see a common purpose running through these legends. They are considered by many to be solar myths, and have a moral purpose. The dragons or snakes are emblems of darkness and evil, the heroes emblems of light, and so of good The triumph of good over evil is the theme they were intended to illustrate.

They are, for the most part, unnatural beasts, breathing out fire, and often endowed with wings, while at the same time possessing limbs ending in cruel claws, fitted for clutching their unfortunate victims. Wings, poisonous fangs, claws, scaly armor and a long pointed tail usually characterize the dragon Some, however, are devoid of wings, the imperial Japanese dragons show no sign of such appendages. In spite of all the manifest absurdities of the dragons of various nations and times, geology reveals to us that there once lived upon this earth reptiles so great and uncouth that we can think of no other but the time-honored word "dragon" to convey briefly the slightest idea of their monstrous forms and characters.

Did any of the extinct monsters bear a resemblance to man sufficient to account for the Homeric legend of the Cyclops? That monstrous extinct reptile, the megalosaurus, it seems, might have produced this impression on an ignorant and terrified traveller.

The megalosaurus was accustomed to stand up on its hind legs and swallow animals whole. It could have devoured men as did the Cyclops described by Homer.

The lower jaw of a megalosaurus is twelve inches long, with a row of nine teeth, or sockets for teeth. The structure of the teeth leaves no doubt as to the carnivorous habits of the creature. With a length of perhaps thirty feet, capable of free and rapid movement on land, with strong hind limbs, short head, with long pointed teeth and formidable claws to its feet, the megalosaurus must have been without a rival among the carnivorous reptiles of old. It probably walked for the most part on its hind legs. The form of the teeth exhibits a remarkable combination of contrivances. When the animal was young the tip of the tooth presented a double-cutting edge of serrated enamel, but as it advanced in growth its direction was turned backward in the form of a pruning knife, and the enamelled sawing edge was continued downward to the base of the inner and cutting side, but became thicker on the outer side, obtaining additional strength when it was no longer needed as a cutting instrument.

The largest bones of these formidable flesh-eating monsters were hollow, and many of the vertebrae, as well as some of those of the feet, contained cavities or were otherwise lightened in order to give the creature a greater power of rapid movement.

It is not very difficult to imagine a megalosaurus lying in wait for his prey with his hind limbs bent under his body so as to bring the heels to the ground, and then with one terrific bound from those long legs springing on to the prey and holding the mammal tight in its clawed forelimbs as a cat might hold a mouse. Then the sabre-like teeth would be brought into action by the powerful jaws and soon the flesh and bones of the victim would be gone

How Volcanic Fogs and Sunspots Make Cold Weather

A New Explanation of the Unseasonably Low Temperature Such as We Have Had This Spring

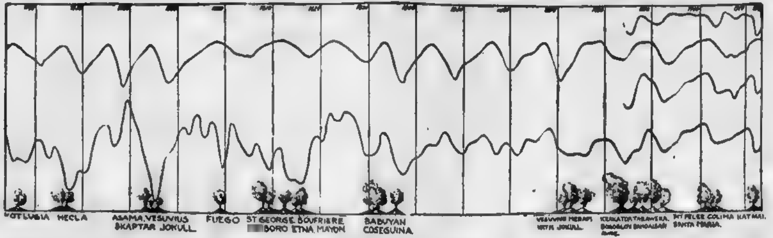

Diagram Showing the Most Important Active Volcanoes and Their Effect Upon the Heat We Get from the Sun. At Top Are Year Dates. Highest Irregular Line Shows Total Amount of Rays Received from the Sun. Next Line Below Shows the Increase and Decrease of Sunspots, Formerly Thought to Have a Decisive Effect on Earth's Temperature. Third Line Is a Combination of These Two. Fourth Line Is the Actual Variation of Temperatures Recorded on Earth. At the Bottom Are the Great Volcanic Eruptions. The Falling of Temperature Shown After Each Eruption Indicates That They Have Shut Off the Sun's Heat in Combination with the Sunspots.

SCIENTIFIC experiments have now proved that the dust thrown up by volcanoes plays an important part in cutting off the sun's light from the earth.

Since the terrible eruption of the Taal, the great volcano on the Island of Luzon in the Philippines, four new volcanic eruptions have occurred in the Pacific Ocean. They are those of the volcano Fama, in Japan, on May 8, 1912; of Mount Katmai, in Alaska, on June 6, 1912, of Ambrym, in the New Hebrides, and of Sakurashima, in Japan. The eruption of Katmai, one of the greatest ever recorded, has been made the subject of very thorough observations by Professor C. G. Abbott at Mount Wilson, in California, and by Professor E. Fowle at Bassour, in Algeria. The dust from the volcano was scattered entirely round the world.

These scientists have found that the strength of the sun's total radiation during this period showed a depression equal to about 20 per cent of the normal. In other words, about one-fifth of the rays from the sun that entered the outer limits of the earth's atmosphere never reached the earth.

In addition, observations with the new and ingenious instrument called the "spectrobolometer" showed that the loss was particularly great in the infra-red region of the spectrum. The spectrobolometer shows the proportion of heat carried by each color of the spectrum in a ray of sunlight.

The use of the spectrobolometer is stated to have proved, among other interesting things, that the particles thrown into the air by the volcanic eruptions were larger than the corpuscles which produce the ordinary appearance of blueness in the sky. The blueness is due to the interception of rays from the violet end of the spectrum.

The diminution of the transparency of the atmosphere was not confined to any particular locality, and was not much greater in the vicinity of the volcanoes than in places thousands of miles away. During the eruptions the sky presented a foggy appearance at every part of the globe. The appearance was similar to that known as a "mackerel sky," although there were no vapor clouds.

Similar suggestions concerning the loss of solar heat due to volcanic eruptions had been made before, but never was such positive evidence of the fact offered as after the Katmai eruption. Professor M. E. Marchand, working at the Pic du Midi Observatory, in France, noticed a diminution of solar radiation lasting from December, 1902, to February, 1906, following the eruption of Mount Pelee volcano, in Martinique.

The quantity of heat received from the sun is also greatly affected by the spots which are periodically seen on the surface of our luminary. In proportion as the number of sunspots increases the amount of heat received diminishes. In order to make a calculation of the total amount of heat received, it is necessary to make a combined curve of sunspots and volcanic eruptions.

Temperature on the surface of the earth is subject to so many varying influences that general conditions are often completely hidden by secondary local causes. Temperature can therefore be only accurately determined from an observatory at a considerable altitude.

Many scientific observers have shown that temperature on the earth shows a periodicity corresponding to the sunspots and that it reaches a maximum once in eleven years at the period of minimum sunspots. It is found, however, that the decrease of temperature is greater than would result simply from the reduction of solar radiation caused by sunspots. Therefore, it was argued that the sunspots are accompanied by some secondary phenomena which affect the terrestrial temperature.

Professors Abbott and Fowle endeavored to find out whether by making a curve showing the influence of sunspots and volcanic fogs combined they could not obtain a closer correspondence between solar phenomena and terrestrial temperature.

They worked out one curve, the uppermost in the accompanying diagram, which is the regular curve of solar radiation for the period 1880-1910. The next curve is that of sunspots according to Professor Wolter. The third curve is a combination of the two preceding. The lowest one represents the actual course of temperature on the surface in the United States.

Although the curves of sunspots and surface temperature show a general resemblance, they also show many points of divergence. For instance, the maximum of sunspots was greater in 1893 than in 1883 or 1906. The temperature curve, however, shows a general increase for the period of 1893. Similarly the temperature began to decrease in 1890, although the sun was at an epoch of minimum spots and began to rise again in 1892, when the spots had not yet attained their maximum. The other parts of the curves display similar discrepancies.

If, on the other hand, we compare the combined curve of sunspots and volcanic fogs with the average of maximum temperature for the United States, the correspondence becomes more striking.

ALL INSECTS Are MAN'S ENEMIES

SCIENCE has discovered that in the insect world there exists an instinct to spread disease. It is this instinct which makes every insect an enemy of the human race and constitutes one of the greatest dangers that threaten mankind.

Mosquitoes have the instinct to spread vicious malaria, yellow fever, blue tongue, and dengue fever. Infantile paralysis is spread by the instinct of some insect not yet identified with certainty. The horsefly was long suspected, but has now been declared not guilty.

The occasional and widely separated occurrence of infantile paralysis is proof that an insect of some sort scatters it; and so is the fact that it is a rural malady and occurs chiefly in the Summer, when insect life is at its highest. Some scientists believe that it is spread by a tick.

Verruga fever, the new disease of South America and elsewhere, characterized by a ferocious attack of warts and fever, is said by Dr. C. H. T. Townsend to be due to the tick insects, which have an instinct to inject this virus into the human body. In South Africa this disease-spreading instinct of ticks, fleas, mosquitoes and flies has almost annihilated the native blacks of that region.

Is the whole human race doomed by this insect instinct? It is not one insect, says Professor Moore, and one disease which must be dealt with, but a legion of different kinds of insects and as many different kinds of diseases.

The blue tick has an instinct to produce Texas cattle fever and another ailment called "spirochetosis." The bonnet tick has an instinct to induce heart water disease in goats and sheep. The dog tick spreads fatal jaundice among dogs and man. The brown tick instinctively gives African East Coast fever to men and cattle. The Cape Town tick causes another malignant fever. The red tick causes three different diseases.

The tsetse fly causes fatal sleeping sickness to man and beast. Fleas carry plague, the bedbug is accused of leprosy; the sandfly is blamed for pellagra. The housefly kills babies and children and is an instinctive enemy of man through being the abode of the typhoid germ.

Dr. Frederick Knob says that it is only recently that zoologists—doctors have neglected the whole matter—have recognized this insect instinct to kill off their human enemies by diseases which do not hurt the insects themselves.

Disease microbes and insects have a co-operative, socialistic working agreement by which they are able to help each other along at the expense of higher forms of animal life.

Since the discovery that blood-sucking insects welcome into their bodies these vicious bacteria of sickness and death, it has devolved upon men to start an eternal war of extermination against all insects, whether they simply crawl and eat or whether they suck blood. All of the insects which become associated with higher forms of animal life welcome disease germs into their tissues in order that they may gratify their instinct to spread disease among men. It is a question now whether man or insects shall survive.

What the fate of the human race would be did we possess the disease-spreading instinct which insects have so strongly developed is too horrible to contemplate. Persons who refuse to be vaccinated to prevent typhoid, smallpox and other diseases have almost the equivalent of this instinct of the insect world, but, fortunately, they are only a small minority of the human race.

How We EAT 8,000 TONS of CAFFEINE a Year

RECENT investigation has shown that (with the exception of the English) Americans are the greatest consumers of caffeine in the world. Most of it we take in the form of tea and coffee.

Caffeine is an alkaloid of coffee. It is the stimulating agent in the beverage made from that berry. But it is also the stimulating ingredient of tea.

The per capita consumption of coffee in the United States is six and a quarter pounds annually. In England it is only about one pound. But the English are much greater tea drinkers than ourselves, consuming over five and a quarter pounds of the herb per annum, whereas we use less than two and a quarter pounds.

Strange though it may seem, tea leaves contain much more caffeine than does coffee. Coffee beans rarely have more than one and a quarter per cent of caffeine (usually less), whereas ordinary tea, as one buys it at the corner grocery, contains three and a third per cent of caffeine.

The younger the tea leaves the higher the percentage of caffeine in them. In the youngest leaves it runs up to nearly five per cent. Inasmuch as the small, new leaves make the best tea, it follows that the higher price you pay for the herb the more caffeine you get per pound.

Our per capita consumption of the drug caffeine, taken in the form of coffee, is 578 grains per annum. Taken in the form of tea, it is 462 grains. This makes a total of 1,040 grains of caffeine per annum for every man, woman and child in coffee and tea alone. There are 7,000 grains in a pound avoirdupois. Thus every American consumes one-seventh of a pound. Estimating the nation's population at slightly more than 100,000,000, this makes a total annual consumption of nearly 15,000,000 pounds of caffeine, or almost 8,000 tons.

England's annual consumption of caffeine is 1,180 grains. Holland comes third, with 1,002 grains. France is next, with 637 grains; then Germany, 508 grains; Switzerland, 505 grains, and Russia, 246 grains.

This reckoning, however, includes only coffee and tea. Most people will be surprised to learn that we consume a good deal of caffeine in the form of chocolate and cocoa. The chocolate bean is not nearly so rich in caffeine as the coffee bean, but it contains a considerable percentage of the drug. We eat and drink in this country immense quantities of chocolate and cocoa—the latter being simply chocolate that has been deprived of most of its fat.

The presence of caffeine helps explain why chocolate is so useful as a stimulant. It is, of course, one of the most highly concentrated of foods, and all foods are stimulating. But the caffeine it contains doubtless helps a lot. Persons who are trying to get rid of the liquor habit find that chocolate quells the craving for alcohol to some extent; and the chocolate habit, which is harmless enough, may itself be not easy to leave off.

The kola nut of Africa is rich in caffeine. So, likewise, are two South American plants, the "yerba mate," which furnishes a widely-used kind of tea, and the "guarana" of tropical Brazil. The latter is a climbing vine, and its caffeine is contained not only in the leaves and young shoots, which are dried for use, but also in the seeds, which are crushed, roasted, rubbed to a paste with water, and dried.

These, it is believed, are the only plants in the world that contain caffeine. All of them have been known and utilized for many generations—which affords an interesting illustration of man's cleverness in discovering things useful to him.

Why We Should Drink Goats' Milk

EXPERTS of the United States Department of Agriculture are urging us to raise more goats and to drink more of their milk. That there is money in goat raising can be seen from the fact that every year we import from other countries nearly thirty million dollars' worth of goat skins. And there is ample scientific authority for the statement that goat's milk is not only the most economical but the most healthful milk we can drink.

Milk is furnished much more cheaply by the goat because the yield, when the size of the goat and the amount of feed and care are considered is proportionately much greater than the cow's.

Goat's milk is also far richer, more nutritious and more easily digested than cows' milk.

Aside from its greater degree of richness there is no appreciable difference in its appearance or taste.

Most important of all is the fact that the goat is the only dairy animal that is practically immune to tuberculosis. Its milk can be drunk freely without risk of taking into the system at the same time the germs of this dread disease.

According to Dr. W. Sheldon Bull, of Buffalo, there is hardly a part of the United States where goats would not thrive.

While it is true that the ideal locality for goats is one that is high and rocky and overgrown with weeds, briers, brush and small trees, as they are by nature and preference browsing animals, in this respect being an exception to all other domestic stock, it is a fact that such a location is not essential. The milch goat will thrive and produce a plentiful supply of rich milk when tethered on grass land, in addition to stall-feeding, if comfortably housed at night and during bad weather, or even when kept constantly in a barn and supplied with all its rations there.

This adaptability to confinement, together with its productiveness, makes the milch goat particularly valuable to the residents of cities and suburban places who desire to secure a regular supply of pure, new milk, without being dependent upon the milkman, whose "milkman's milk" is not always of the best quality and which, under the most favorable circumstances, is received and consumed with more or less suspicion as to its freshness, its cleanliness and its healthfulness.

CARBON to Take the Place of ICE

THE iceman may soon be a thing of the past and the type of refrigerators and cold storage plants now in use may all be discarded. This is what Isidor Hisialve, a Belgian chemist, predicts as the result of experiments he has been conducting with a view to finding a substitute for ice in the preservation of food by cold. Carbon is the substitute Professor Hislaive has at last hit upon and he believes it offers a great many advantages over ice.

Under the new method, the food to be preserved is exposed to the fumes of specially prepared tablets of carbon. This vapor coats the surface of the food with an invisible film, thus effectually preserving it from the oxidation of the air and arresting putrefaction. The food treated remains for months in exactly the same condition, and it is said that it may be safely kept in any temperature thereafter.

In applying the vapor it is necessary that the food shall first be placed in an air-tight chamber. Then the vapor is passed over it, and in a few moments the embalming has taken place.

The vapor is obtained from the melting at 170 degrees Fahrenheit of a white tablet about the circumference of a twenty-five cent piece, but about four times as thick. Ten different ingredients, that combine, to produce a vapor of the purest carbon, go to make up these tablets.

Before the preserved food can be eaten the carbon must be expelled, and this is accomplished by heating in the oven or boiling.

Where KING SOLOMON Got the GOLD for His TEMPLE

THE coast of southeastern Africa is not usually regarded to-day as a region of any especial interest. It mainly belongs to the vast undeveloped territory of Portuguese East Africa. The interior is wild and thinly inhabited, nor, apart from their political position and their rather trifling commercial importance, are the towns—Sofala, Mozambique, and their fellows—especially inviting places.

Nevertheless, there is much that is of great, perhaps supreme, interest in this more or less derelict territory. It is certain that it has been in the past of great commercial importance. [illegible] is by no means an unparalleled phenomenon in history. The decayed town of Novgorod in Russia was once the emporium of northeast Europe; the awful desert of Mekran in Baluchistan has been a great trade highway. There is ample evidence that the region behind Sofala, part of which is now known as Mashonaland, was anciently of vast importance owing to its gold mines. It contains a remarkable series of ruins, mostly, as is plain from the evidence afforded by them, those of gold-mining centres. One of these deserted settlements is tolerably well known under the name of "Zimbabwe," but it is only one of many.

Concerning the people who built these settlements and exploited the mineral resources of this still auriferous region there has been much controversy. So much seems certain that they were not an artistic race. This at once rules out the Egyptians. The almost entire lack of artistic objects and their very poor character might seem to point to Phoenicians, but since the Cretan discoveries the Phoenicians are being relegated to a lower place in history than they have hitherto occupied, and purely Phoenician enterprise in southeast Africa is highly improbable.

The indications rather point to Arabia. The commercial importance of Arabia before the Mohammedan era is certain. The Sabaeans of Yemen might very well have explored the eastern coast of Africa. The distance from Aden to Delagoa Bay is some 2,600 miles less than that from Tyre to the Scilly Isles, and there is really no solid reason against the probability of the accomplishment of such a voyage by Arab seamen; it was merely a matter of lengthy coasting. The goldfields would furnish an irresistible argument for systematic settlement.

It is indeed possible that the country is the land of Ophir wherefrom Solomon obtained his gold. We know that the treasure ship sailed from Ezion-gebir on the Red Sea; we know also that Solomon had relations with the Sabaeans. The voyage was a long one; the ships are said to have come once in three years. This obviously points to a distant country, not to one comparatively near at hand, such as Somaliland. In 1896 a German scholar directly put forward the theory that Ophir was the inland of Sofala; he pointed out that the most important settlement was called Fura. Such comparisons are hazardous, but the facts remain that about 900 B. C. two Syrian kings built a fleet to exploit the gold treasures of a distant land.

The geographers of the Roman Empire were perfectly aware of the commercial importance of southeast Africa. Ptolemy names several towns. One he places, of course vaguely, at 16 deg. 25 min. south and calls it Prasium. The situation corresponds approximately with that of Kilimane at the mouth of the Zambesi. Other trading stations were known. Gold, however, is not mentioned. There is reason to believe that the settlements were then deserted. All show unmistakable traces of having been destroyed by fire, and presumably some eruption of savagery from the interior overthrew them. They were rediscovered about A. D. 1000 by the people of Mogadoxo, and again became immensely important, but if they did indeed furnish Solomon with his treasure their older glory will probably always outshine that of later days.

Artists Learn from "MOVIES"

PROFESSOR HENRI BERGSON, the French philosopher, is the latest scholar to declare his respect for the moving pictures and his belief that they are destined to be of inestimable service to mankind. One of the most useful things they have accomplished this year, he believes, is to put artists on the right path and teach them to produce more life-like pictures.

"Moving pictures interest me," says Prof. Bergson, "just as do all inventions. The philosopher must keep in touch with the progress of life outside his own studies. Anything that I have been able to add to the sum of philosophical knowledge has been based on experience. In order to write my book 'Matter and Memory' I studied for five years hundreds of cases of loss of memory by examining and questioning those afflicted with aphasia. I gave ten years to a study of biology before taking up the work of writing 'Creative Evolution.' Nothing can be treated by the philosopher as indifferent.

"I have been to the moving picture theatres several times. I saw the very beginning of the art. That was several years ago. It is evident that this art, which is a complement to photography, must suggest new ideas to the philosopher. It is possible that we shall find it a real aid to synthesis of memory, perhaps even of thought. If a circumference is composed of a series of points, memory, like the moving picture film, is a continued flow of images.

"Immobility is the state of death; movement is life. Certain students may conclude—[illegible] have already concluded—that life is movement. Is it not a fact that the essence of light, of sound, of sensation? Is not the eye itself a moving picture camera?

"The moving pictures [illegible] put the painters on the right pat[illegible] aware of the enormous revolution [illegible] in painting by the invention of snapshot photography. Artists were able to see that the attitude of a race horse as depicted by them was not correct. They made the correction and here is what happened. Artists produced exclusively figures in which there was no movement, figures expressing no life. Matematical exactness gained, no doubt, but the impression of truth was lost.

"The moving picture came along to show the artists that photography had induced them to fall into error. Continuity of movement must be represented or the moving figure is not depicted. The artist, instead of taking just one impression, must take a series of impressions, remould them in his imagination and thus arrive at the reproduction of life.

"The moving pictures will be above all an inheritance of incalculable value for our successors. What a joy it would be for us if we were able to see, not perhaps Cleopatra, but Napoleon on a film. Already we can have the pleasure of seeing an enormous crowd in movement, a wild revolutionary scene, while placidly taking our ease in an armchair.

The moving picture, in conclusion, while amusing the people in general, will be a valuable ally of the artist, the historian and even the philosopher.

YOU MIGHT TRY--

To Improve Ham.

WHEN you buy ham, and it is hard and salty, try soaking it sliced in milk overnight.

On Your House Plants.

SOOT water is a good fertilizer for house plants during the Winter and will make them blossom.

When a Jar Won't Open.

IF a glass jar refuses to open, set it top down in an inch or two of hot water.

This Good Health Hint.

DON'T forget that microbes are apt to lurk about the mouth of the milk bottle. It should be carefully wiped off before the milk is poured out.

How FLEAS Pass from YOUTH to OLD AGE in THREE WEEKS

IMPORTANT investigations upon fleas of [illegible] have been directed toward the discovery o[illegible] [illegible] a flea may live. This is more import[illegible] [illegible] to discover about fleas than it is about the [illegible] quitoes. Fleas, too, are bearers of many vicious parasites which disseminate all sorts of diseases.

The rat-flea of India, the Philippines, America and other places is the happy hunting grounds of the bacillus which is the source of bubonic plague. The fleas of the gopher, the chipmunk, the squirrel, the beaver and the prairie dog also seem to harbor plague bacilli.

The British rat flea is the one which has been most carefully studied as to its length of life. It seems to pass through its infancy, schooldays, youth, middle age and senile decay within three weeks. If the days be dark, dreary, damp and hot it lives its allotted span of life in ten days or less.

Professors Gautier and Raybaud have just announced their experiments upon the flea that bites the rat in the British Isles. These experimenters succeeded in keeping the militant English flea alive ninety days, on some human blood serum.

This is an important discovery in view of the recent government notice that plague bacilli have been found in Havana and other parts of the Western Hemisphere.

Moreover, these workers unearthed another startling fact. Fleas placed in ice chambers and refrigerators on no food whatever hopped around quite merrily for forty-one days, much to the surprise of the whole scientific world.

Dr. William Meull, an animal psychologist or "behaviorist" announces that the American rat-flea can jump away from the rat—its host, unwilling though it be—and live on air, water, vegetation, or nothing at all for at least one week. Then, like a bareback rider in the circus, it hops upon the back of some unsuspecting, innocent rat.

This period of survival is longer in cold temperature and in the light than in warm ones and in the dark. Excessive dryness as well as excessive moisture seems to send fleas to a premature grave.

Most worrisome, however, of all these new facts about fleas, so far as sanitary science and the protection of health are concerned, is the discovery by Dr. Nicoll that unborn embryo and fleas' eggs, will live as long as a year in sawdust, dirt, grain, clothes, brushings and the like.

Is Somebody Burning Up the Long Island Millionaires' Country Residences?

Investigation Begun to Find Out If the Recent Fires in the Homes of Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mr. Collier, J. P. Morgan's Partner and Many Others Were Incendiary--and Why?

FIVE POSSIBILITIES.

An Insane Firebug.
An I. W. W. Anarchist.
An Ambitious Architect.
A Greedy Residence-Building Contractor.
A Revengeful Servant.

A Photograph of Mr. Paul D. Cravath's Locust Valley, Long Island, Mansion When the Mysterious Fire That Destroyed It, Was Nearly Out. Mr. Cravath Was One of the Legal Advisers of the Late J. Pierpont Morgan.

WHAT is the secret of the long series of disastrous fires that has destroyed so many of the houses of the New York millionaire colony on Long Island?

Since the first of the year there have been nine fires, resulting in the complete destruction of that number of houses in the Long Island colony. The amount of property destroyed was over $3,000,000. The number of fires before this year in the same district had been remarkably large for a number of years.

The fires have been so numerous, they have occurred in such close proximity to one another and they have made victims so evidently of the same set of persons that the suspicion inevitably arises that crime or at least some form of wrong doing is at the root of the trouble.

The owners of the houses are practically agreed that somebody is trying to burn their places down. The representative of Paul D. Cravath, one of the most conspicuous of the sufferers, has made this admission. He and his neighbors are now engaged in a search for the culprit or culprits. There are now on Long Island more persons of great wealth than can be found in any equal stretch of country in the world. The houses are more costly than any other equal area could show.

The possessors of all these palaces are thoroughly alarmed by the thought that somebody is plotting to burn their dwellings down in the dead of night, endangering their art trasures and even the lives of the occupants.

As to the motive for the incendiary plot there is still much uncertainty. Opinion varies between attributing the acts to some hater of the millionaire owners and to some wicked contractor or material man who wishes to make an opportunity to supply new material.

A view that finds considerable favor is that the fires are the work of anarchists or agitators of the I. W. W. type, animated by hatred of the millionaire class. The victims of the fires cannot speak definitely of their suspicions on this point. The possibility that a discharged servant is responsible has also been suggested.

It is pointed out that many of the houses burned belonged to persons who are especially objects of attack by advocates of violence. Several of the Long Island residents who lost their homes had been associated with the late J. Pierpont Morgan, whose name was a red rag to social discontent.

One of the first Long Islanders to suffer was Robert Bacon, former Ambassador to France and partner of Mr. Morgan. The Bacon mansion at Wheatley Hills, Westbury, L. I., was burned to the ground two years ago. The cause of the fire was never ascertained

A year later the beautiful Summer home of Henry P. Davison, another of Morgan's partners, was burned to the ground. This place was located at Peacock Point, near Glen Cove, on the Sound. It adjoined the estate of William D. Guthrie of the law firm of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson, who have frequently represented the Morgan interests, and it was not far from the country place of J. P. Morgan, Jr

So far the Guthrie place and that of J. P. Morgan, Jr., have not been molested, but only a few weeks ago, on April 14, the $500,000 home of Paul D. Cravath, another member of the great law firm just referred to, was completely destroyed. This beautiful establishment was located at Locust Valley, a few miles to the south of the Davison place. No one knows how the fire started, although, as is usual in such cases, it was attributed to defective insulation.

The very same day the country estate of Raymond E. Baylis, at Halesite, Huntington, a few miles from the Cravath place, was nearly destroyed by another mysterious fire, and the following day the mansion of Stephen E. Burgoyne, at Elm Point, Great Neck, and the colonial cottage of Mrs. Peter F. Collier, at Southampton, L. I., were reduced to ashes through fires occasioned no one knows how

Add to these disasters the four fires of April 9 to 10, which were discovered successively on the place of E. R. Chapman, at Great Neck, L. I., the fire of April 3, which completely gutted the $500,000 mansion of Mrs. Jessica Taylor, daughter of the late James R. Keene, at Cedarhurst, the fire of February 18, which destroyed Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr.'s establishment between Jericho and Westbury, and the fire of January 26, which started in the Port Washington ship yards and destroyed $200,000 worth of pleasure yachts owned by millionaire residents.

In the case of the Chapman fires, there is no doubt at all that the fires were of incendiary origin. Four distinct efforts in two days to burn down the place were made in two days, but the identity of the firebug has not yet been ascertained. Mr. Chapman is president of the Hudson Trust Company.

The theory that an anarchistic conspirator is responsible for the fires is based upon the fact that in every case the victims were millionaires. There have been no fires at all in the affected area among the homes of people of average means.

The possibility that the fires are the work of a "pyromaniac" is held by some persons, but no tangible evidence has yet been secured to support this view. The typical pyromaniac is one who is instigated principally by a desire to see the fire apparatus and firemen at work, but in these out of the way country places, which boast of no elaborate fire departments, this motive could hardly have been present.

While the turning out of a big array of fire fighting apparatus is not a characteristic feature of these country fires, however, they do occasion a form of excitement of their own, and it is quite possible that some degenerate mind might derive a peculiar pleasure in starting fires of this character just for the sake of watching the frantic efforts of the neighbors put them out.

A more ingenious theory is that of an insurance man who believes the Long Island fires are the work of some unscrupulous builder or material man, who not having shared in the previous contracts hopes to profit by the rebuilding of the houses which he destroys.

In the same was some ambitious architect who had not shared in the giving out of plans might figure that if the houses had to be rebuilt he might this time be more lucky.—No evidence at all has been secured thus far to support this theory, but the investigators are keeping it in mind.

That the fires may be due to wilfully careless building on the part of owners is the suggestion of a well-known technical publication.

"Owners of pretentious country houses that burn are not deliberate incendiaries," says Safety Engineering, "but are they not passive incendiaries in accepting conditions that favor fires? Certainly they could have afforded homes built to endure; they had money to encourage the languishing craft of perpetuating beautiful architectural creations with lasting materials, and incidentally, to set a few good examples to a country that needs them badly."

Mistakes, it is pointed out, are often made in building a house which must eventually lead to a fire sooner or later. For instance, a plank of the flooring may project into a flue. The protruding plank in the flue would become as dry as tinder as a result of the heat to which it was subjected, and eventually a flying spark from the fire would ignite the plank and the destruction of the house would almost surely follow. No clue at all would be left to tell the tale.

Sometimes, of course, the carelessness of a carpenter might result in a similar situation, and one of the fires in question, this possibility is being considered. T was the case of the Davison fire

The Davison place at Peacock Point is a three-story brick and white stone structure, one of the handsomest on Long Island. It had been closed all the Winter until the day before the fire, when Mrs. Davison, her two sons, Trubee and Harry, and three school chums of the sons, motored from New York to spend the day.

It was cool in the house and the boys decided to build a wood fire. Logs were lighted in a huge fireplace. When the place was sufficiently warmed, they put out the fire and forgot all about it. Some hours later one of the caretakers saw smoke coming from the roof, and long before the firemen from Glen Cove arrived on the scene, the mansion was doomed.

Here was a case where a heat-dried plank protruding into the flue might very readily have been the cause of the fire, but, of course, it was impossible to ascertain its actual origin

The sixty-room mansion of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., which was destroyed on February 18, was a new house. A defective flue was given as the cause of the fire which destroyed it, but whether or not a protruding floor-plank figured in the case will never be known. Mrs. Vanderbilt did not have the chance to live even a day in her new house

The disastrous fire in the Port Washington shipyards, which destroyed several valuable yachts, believed to have started in an outhouse. Whether an incendiary was responsible for it or not has never been definitely ascertained.

State Fire Marshal Ahearn is now conducting a vigorous investigation into the causes of these fires. While there is little hope that the ruins of the splendid mansions will furnish sufficient evidence to warrant arrests, witnesses are being examined with the idea of locating the sulprit.

The owners of the other establishments in the vicinity are planning to form a vigilance committee to protect their property against the torch of the firebug, whoever he may be, and until he is apprehended no Long Island millionaire will consider his country residence safe.

Why First Born Children Are Most Subject to Disease

THERE is an old, widely held belief that oldest children are liable to inherit the weaknesses of their parents. Unlike many old beliefs, this one has been supported by modern science. Professor Soren Hansen, director of the Danish Anthropological Survey, one of the leading eugenists of Europe, in an article in the Eugenics Review, says:

"That the earliest born children are of inferior quality to the succeeding at birth is an indisputable and long-known fact of experience."

The oldest children weigh less than the others, are more frequently born dead and of those that come into the world alive a much larger proportion die in the first year. They are more subject to tuberculosis, short sight and feeble-mindedness than later born children.

Professor Hansen examined the 3,522 tuberculosis patients of the Oresund Hospital, in Copenhagen, and found that 988 were first-born, 713 second-born, and 568 third-born. After taking many possible sources of error into consideration, he came to the conclusion that there were 64 per cent more first-born than there would have been, if these enjoyed average health.

He believes that the weakness of the first-born is due to the fact that the channels of circulation in the mother are not yet sufficiently developed to afford all the nourishment needed to the child. There are also several secondary causes.

The first-born and the earlier children are more subject than the later to imbecility, epilepsy and similar defects, and Professor Hansen intends to investigate these points fully, as he has done with regard to tuberculosis.

The inferior quality of the first-born children is a matter of great importance to the present world-wide propaganda of eugenics. The tendency to limit families is constantly spreading among the more civilized nations. As families became smaller the proportion of first-born to the whole number of children must become larger.

Professor Hansen believes from the experience of France, that there is no hope of stopping the limiting of families. For a number of years France has offered prizes and other inducements to parents to produce large families, but without important results. Professor Hansen believes that our only resource is to take special care of the children, because the proportion of weakly first-born must become constantly greater.

It is scarcely necessary to say that all eugenists do not share Professor Hansen's feeling that it is hopeless to create a sentiment in favor of large families. Most of them advocate families of considerable size in the interests of the race, and they believe that when the science of eugenics is better understood, their advice will be heeded

The idea of having very large families or just as many children as possible is discouraged by eugenists, because the object of eugenics is quality rather than quantity. But eugenists are equally opposed to the idea of limiting families to one or two, or none at all.

Many eugenics advise parents to aim at three, although when all conditions are favorable it is desirable to have more. The idea commonly held in France and other countries that two children to a family are sufficient to maintain the population at its present figure is entirely wrong. If fertile parents have only two children to a family nothing is done to replace those adults who do not marry or are necessarily unproductive. It is not certain that three children to a family would maintain the population at its present standard, but it is believed that with better care of health this number might suffice.

By studying five thousand families in the prosperous north of England, industrial districts, Professor Fraser, of the Eugenics Education Society, has reached some interesting conclusions bearing on first-born and later children. He finds that when the parents marry at the ideal period the third child has the best chance of being strong and able. He decides that the ideal period for marriage is twenty-five for a woman and between thirty and thirty-five for a man

He thinks that a woman who marries at twenty-five will have three children by the time she is thirty. The third child born at this period has the best chances in life, because the mother has reached the fulness of her development and for several other reasons.

He finds that if parents are comparatively advanced in life, the children inherit something of their age and have less chance to live long. This tendency is more noticeable when the mother is middle-aged than when the father is. For instance, the children of mothers around the fortieth year do not have good chances of long life, although they may be well and strong. They inherit the maternal age.

Very young parents also bequeath some of their immaturity to their children and these are not likely to be of fine physical development, although they may be healthy and long-lived. A mother under twenty-three is regarded as immature in the Anglo-Saxon races.

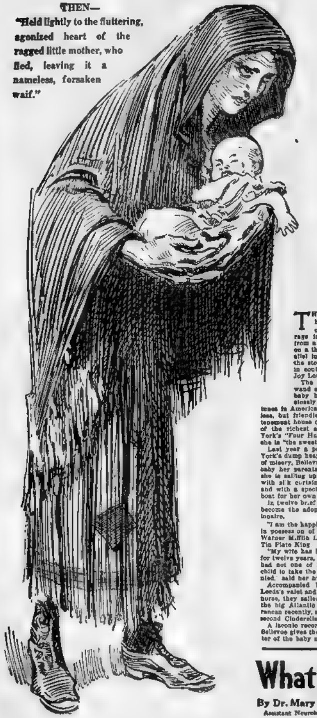
A Real Modern Cinderella

Just Like the Old [illegible]iry Tale, This Story of the Forsaken, Nameless Little Waif, Who Over N[illegible]ht Became the Petted Darling and Daughter of One of America's Riche[illegible]t Women, with Every Luxury That Money Could Buy



THEN—
"Held lightly to the fluttering, agonized heart of the ragged little mother, who fled, leaving it a nameless, forsaken waif."

The Ancient Magnificences of Philae, on Old Nile, Upon Which the Eyes of the Little Modern Cinderella Now Rest from Her Bassinet on the Leeds Instead of Upon the Crowded and Unbeautiful East Side of New York.

THE story, beloved by childish hearts and dear to older ones, of the maid who sprang out of rags into royal raiment, and rose from a seat among the ashes to one on a throne, has at last found a parallel in real life. In some respects the story of Cinderella is surpassed in contrast and interest by that of Joy Louise Leeds.

The fairy godmother waved her wand and within a year a nameless baby bore one of the names most closely associated with large fortunes in America. A year ago not only nameless, but friendless, she was abandoned in a tenement house on the East Side. To-day one of the richest and loveliest women in New York's "Four Hundred" fondles her, declaring she is "the sweetest baby on earth."

Last year a policeman carried her to New York's dump heap of humanity, its final refuge of misery, Bellevue Hospital, saying: "Here's a baby her parents don't want, I guess." Now she is sailing up the Nile in a houseboat gay with silk curtains, with a nurse of her own, and with a special cow carried on the houseboat for her own personal needs.

In twelve brief months the Bellevue waif has become the adopted daughter of a multi-millionaire.

"I am the happiest woman in the world to be in possession of this darling mite," said Mrs. Warner Mifflin Leeds, sister-in-law of the late Tin Plate King

"My wife has longed for a baby of her own for twelve years, and has mourned because she had not one of her own. We have found a child to take the place of the one we were denied," said her husband.

Accompanied by Mrs. Leeds's maid, Mr Leeds's valet and little Miss Joy Louise Leeds's nurse, they sailed in the best suite on one of the big Atlantic steamships for the Mediterranean recently, and are now journeying in this second Cinderella's fairyland.

A laconic record in the archives of grim old Bellevue gives the brief story of the early chapter of the baby millionairess's life.

In alternate red and black ink at the bottom of a soiled and crowded leaf that flutters in a strong cold wind that blows from East River is written the brief record of the early chapter of Joy Louise Leeds's life.

"Foundling. Katherine Kennedy, January 29, 1913, Parents unknown. Female child. Baptized Protestant. Age about two months. Probably native of the United States. Found by Mrs. Irene Balapoulas, of No. 219 East Thirty-third street, at same address. Brought in by Officer Boulger, shield 664. Attended by Dr Rutledge. Only ailment infancy. Transferred to New York Nursery and Children's Hospital, 3 30 p. m., January 31, 1913."

Here is little Joy's story prior to the advent of the fairy godmother and secured with difficulty from behind the records.

On the afternoon of January 29, 1913, the bell rang uncertainly in the little first floor flat occupied by Mrs. Irene Balapoulas on Thirty-third street, near Third avenue. Mrs. Balapoulas had thrown her shawl over her head and had gone to gossip with a neighbor. Her fifteen-year-old niece, Kaliroppi Garaia, thinking the faint tinkle was a mistake made by a caller to the tenement, went on with her sewing Again the bell tinkled.

The girl opened the door Before it stood a short slender woman of about twenty. A plain shawl covered her shoulders. She wore a black straw hat. The hat, drawn low over her face, threw a shadow upon all but the rounded chin and the pale but well cut lips. She was dressed plainly, in a black skirt with a dark blue jacket.

In her arms was a small pink bundle which she thrust into Miss Garaia's arms. She spoke in the girl's native tongue.

"Please hold my baby," she said in Greek, "I will be back in a few minutes."

She darted out of the room and a second later the street door slammed.

Miss Garaia's sewing lay neglected. The child slept quietly on her knees. The young girl watched the clock and glanced anxiously out the window. The woman did not return. Mrs. Balapoulas, returning with some of the neighbors, asked the girl some questions, woke the baby and examined its clothes.

"It was dressed very plainly, but it was very clean," said Mrs Balapoulas "There was no mark on the snow-white dress and underclothes, nor on its white knitted cap, nor pink knitted coat. I searched the pink blanket in which it was rolled, but there was no mark whatever

"Only on its little wrist—I think it was the right one—there was a slight red mark as wide as a lead pencil and perhaps two inches long. It might have been a birthmark, but I suspected it was a slight burn that may be there to identify the child in after years Sometimes unfortunate people who abandon their babies do this."

Mrs Balapoulas, who emigrated two and a half years ago from Greece, and who, at that time, spoke little English, was deeply interested in the child, which she recognized as that of one of her country-women.

"But I have no idea who she was. I think she must have come here because she saw the Greek name on the doorbell," she says. "The child seemed in perfect health, and was well cared for. She was so healthy and sweet and smiling that I would have kept her myself if I could. I fell in love with her brown eyes and golden hair and pink skin. When she had been there two hours and the woman did not come back, I had to take her to the police station."

Here then is little Joy—not yet Joy though—on the way.

In the Greek woman's arms she was borne between the green lights that flare before the entrance to the Thirty-fifth street station. There the big policemen gathered in a group about the pink wrapped bundle, and pinched her cheek, and she chuckled with delight.

"Wish we could keep her," grunted the captain, entering on the blotter: "Unknown child, found at No. 219 East Thirty-third [illegible]et. Found and brought in by Mrs Irene Balap[illegible]las. Wearing white dress, white knitted cap[illegible] pink knitted coat and wrapped in pink blank[illegible]

He wrote after it the next goal of [illegible]er adventurous journey. "Sent to Bellevue." The big shy man, Officer Boulger, boarded a Third avenue car and bore his little charge down the dingy street known as the Lane [illegible]f Misery, which leads from Third avenue to t[illegible]e hospital on the river bank.

The aspect of life was dark for the baby that day Placed in a cot in the babies' ward, but not suspecting the shadow upon he[illegible] life, she smiled and slept peacefully throug[illegible] the evening in her cot. Next day she cone[illegible]as a few cold drops fell upon her head an[illegible] trickled through her fair hair upon her pink [illegible]ly.

The ceremony of baptism was ta[illegible]king place at Bellevue. The differing sects claim every other baby that comes to the hospital. It happened the waif's turn was to be a Protestant

The chaplain himself bestowed the name, a task that takes his invention. There are so many waifs constantly coming he finds it easier to choose two names beginning with the same letter, and the good man has also heard that there's luck in alliteration. When his invention fails he turns the leaves of the City Directory until a name catches his eye. So it came about that the child with the fair hair and dark eyes and constant smile was named Katherine Kennedy

So she lay alternately smiling and sleeping until the fairy godmother waved her wand excitedly and Katherine awoke to see a kind-faced woman leaning above her cot. It was Miss Elizabeth W. Guy, the assistant superintendent of the Children's Department of the State Charities Aid Association. Miss Guy arranged for a further stage of the little one's pilgrimage. Whereupon after but two days at Bellevue the child was again lifted into careful arms and this time carried through the big doors that swing wide for homeless babies at the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital, No. 161 West Sixty-first street.

A nursing mother was found for her Katherine Kennedy, despite her discouraging start in life, waxed fat and happier than ever in the Child's Hospital as in Bellevue, and at the police station, and in Mrs. Balapoulas's little home, the baby conquered all who saw

The fairy godmother might have been satisfied. She knew that Katherine might remain in the hospital and nursery until she was five years old. But the fairy godmother had more brilliant plans for her

Miss Clara B. Spence became interested in her. Miss Spence is the head of one of the most fashionable girls' schools in New York, but the welfare and instruction of the fortunately placed pupils do not engross all her interest. She is sensible of the existence of girls less happily placed in life. She told her wealthy patrons and prosperous friends of the work of the Placing Out Agency of the State Charities Aid Association. The childless among the friends listened. They told other childless couples that Miss Spence knew where infants could be obtained to fill the void in empty homes It became Miss Spence's habit to keep an unofficial clearing house of information for those who would adopt.

She knew that Mrs. Warner Mifflin Leeds's arms and heart ached for a baby. She told Mrs. Leeds of the happy-faced little conqueror of all hearts at the Nursery and Child's Hospital.

Katherine Kennedy resumed her pilgrimage. She was carried to Miss Spence, who had her conducted to Mrs. Leeds's hotel. Katherine enjoyed her first taxi drive. Thereafter there were to be no more street car journeys for her.

"What a lovely child! I must have her!" exclaimed Mrs. Leeds at sight of her. Mr. Leeds said nothing, but it was noted he returned all of little Miss Kennedy's more or less toothless [illegible]es

"The child has the gift of happiness. She shall be named Joy" said Mrs. Leeds.

The baby was taken back to the nursery at the corner of Sixty-first street and Amsterdam avenue, but remained there only long enough for the fairy godmother to arrange the necessary steps of adoption. Miss Spence having been appointed "general guardian of the person of said child," according to the tedious vernacular of the court, documents of adoption were made in which Miss Spence gave her "consent to the joint adoption of said minor by your petitioners." Those petitioners were Warner Mifflin Leeds and Louise Hartshorne Leeds and before the Surrogate of Nassau County they adopted the little waif of Bellevue, "directing that the said child shall henceforth have the name of Joy Louise Leeds, and be treated in all respects as the child of your petitioners."

The papers of adoption bear the date December 4, 1913. For a few happy weeks their new daughter lived with them on their estate at Plandome, L. I., where they had for neighbors Mrs Frances Hodgson Burnett, the author, and former Congressman Martin W Littleton, of New York. Another wave of the fairy godmother's wand and they started on the journey that should continue in the lazily rocking houseboat on the Nile. Next month the little heiress may make the acquaintance of the Leeds villa near Florence.

So the fairy godmother not only brought happiness and fortune to the wee waif of Bellevue, but to a multi-millionairess the only thing which her life lacked Gratitude for this moved Mrs. Leeds to give the child her significant name, Joy

Twelve years ago Warner Mifflin Leeds, vice-president of the American Plate Company and brother of its president, wedded at a fashionable wedding in All Souls' Church Mrs Louise Hartshorn Moore. For their honeymoon he ordered a million-dollar yacht built The bride christened it because of its noble beauty "The Duchess."

Their permanent home is at Plandome, on Long Island, but they spend a part of each Summer at Bar Harbor and their Winters in Rome and Florence.

The babe whose rosy lips closed upon the bitter beginning of abandonment dines now from a diamond-studded spoon. The fairy godmother never wrought, even in fiction, a greater [illegible].

NOW—
"In the arms of an imported nurse, with obsequious servants by the score bowing to her like a little princess, the petted darling of one of America's richest women—the waif is a real, modern Cinderella indeed."

Curing Bald Heads by Planting Hair

A DISTINGUISHED surgeon of Budapest, Dr A. Szekely, has covered many bald heads by planting hair in them

The process requires about 50,000 separate applications. The hairs do not grow—but that is an advantage, as they do not need cutting.

Dr Szekely proceeds as follows: With a gold wire about 1-500th of an inch in diameter he makes a tiny loop, hardly visible to the naked eye, and in this he inserts a fine hair from a woman's head, about eight to twelve inches long, so that half hangs down on each side. Then he introduces the other end of the wire into a Pravaz needle—one of the needles, hollow within, that are used for hypodermic injections—and draws out the end of the wire from the point of the needle until the loop has not quite emerged from the needle. Then he cuts off the wire about one-twelfth inch from the loop and bends the end to make a tiny hook.

This done, he introduces the needle, properly sterilised, into the skin of the head, and then withdraws it gently, leaving beneath the skin the hook holding by the loop the hair, bent double After the needle has been withdrawn there may be seen protruding from the skin two hairs, being the two halves of the hair held at its central point by the loop, and anchored, so to speak, under the skin by the hook.

The punctures are made at a distance of about one-twenty-fifth of an inch apart, or 625 to the square inch. As there are two hairs to each puncture, this makes 1,250 to the square inch. In three-quarters of an hour it is possible to plant 400 to 500 hairs.

After the planting, the loop and the hook, which remain under the skin, cause inflammation, which soon ceases and forms a scar, without other effect than to fix the hair better in its place. The puncture made by the needle quickly heals. The hairs remain permanently implanted. They are, of course, dead hairs and do not grow, but no one would notice this who did not look attentively and notice that two hairs instead of one issue from each point in the skin. The hairs may be washed and brushed without inconvenience. They should be oiled continually, to preserve their delicacy and softness.

The operation is not painful; after two weeks not a trace of it is felt. Dr. Szekely has met with only a few cases of suppuration. After a few weeks the head of the person treated may be slapped or rubbed smartly without feeling the least sense of pain. Professor Havas has found that within the hook there forms a kind of capsule of elastic tissue. Professor Havas asserts that he knows a person who was treated seven years ago by Dr. Szekely's method, and who still possesses a good head of hair in the best state of preservation.

What Do You Really Know About Your Babies' TEARS TEMPERAMENT TANTRUMS?

A Distinguished Woman Physician's Original and Helpful Analysis of Three Things That Lead to Dangerous "Nerves"

By Dr. Mary Sutton Macy, M.D.

Assistant Neurologist of Demilt Dispensary, Special Lecturer on Child Hygiene, New York University and Bellevue Medical College, New York City

(In a lecture prepared at the request and rendered under the auspices of the Public Health Education Committee of the Medical Society of the County of New York, at the New York Academy of Medicine.)

MY object is to present to you as concisely and as clearly as possible the meaning of tears, tantrums and temperament in childhood and to suggest how best to prevent them from becoming nerves, neuroses or neurotics in adult life.

Tears are the results of an emotional storm focalizing in the central nervous system. A very slight emotional disturbance will, in susceptible individuals, induce the nervous irritation leading to tears; or, to express it differently, tears are emotional waves commonly said to arise from the heart because it is not possible to shed tears from the head—the latter, as the seat of reason rather than of emotion, never giving rise to tears. Tears therefore are expressions of emotion. Each emotion has its corresponding passion and mood—a passion being an intense emotion of short duration, and a mood a prolonged emotion of moderate intensity. To illustrate Anger is an emotion, fury, the corresponding passion chagrin, the allied mood. For all practical purposes a temperament may be regarded as a mood which lasts the greater part of a lifetime.

In our presentation to-day, therefore, we are considering tears as an expression of emotion, tantrums as a type of passion, and the child's temperament as the promise of its future character and life-mood. For the sake of clearness let us put into practice the Biblical promise "The last shall be first."

In our social conversation and lay reading we hear of the artistic, the musical, the idealistic temperaments, and many more—all of them loosely used, hard to define, and still more difficult to classify. The diagnosis of temperaments which has historically stood the tests limits the clear types to four, but acknowledges the frequent coincidence of two or more in an individual. In Dr. Tuke's Dictionary of Psychological Medicine we find the following data concerning each of the four accepted types

(1) The sanguine temperament is most frequently found in short people, usually not stout till late in life though having a tendency in that direction. Their head and bones are small; features, well defined, nose, rather short; lips, medium thick, neck, short, complexion, fair and bright, hair, reddish and plentiful in early life; eyes, blue. Mentally they lack persistence, memory is bad, imaginations, powerful; thoughts, often clever It is not a suitable temperament for older age than childhood, as it lacks the steadiness necessary to life. Illnesses are said generally to run an acute course.

(2) The nervous temperament (frequently called the melancholic or sentimental type by other writers) is most frequent in slight people, often tall. Their heads are small and narrow, the forehead being proportionately large; features small and sharp cut; nose and chin, pointed, lips, thin; skin, dark and dull; complexion, sallow; hair, brown, eyes, dark or gray, restless and active; speech, rapid. Mentally they are active but changeable; thoughts, ready memory, bad. These individuals imagine well, but are very susceptible to the influence of environment.

(3) The choleric temperament is most common in thickly built individuals, short or tall. Their heads are large and square; features, large and not well defined, nose, outspread; mouth, wide; skin, rough and hairy, complexion, hair and eyes, dark, movements, clumsy but strong; voice, rough Mentally they are capable of much exertion, not impulsive, and their decisions, once made, are final, memory is good affections strong; they are passionate, jealous and unforgiving of an injury

(4) The phlegmatic temperament is usual in thick-set, short-necked, bulky individuals who are lacking in bodily proportions Their heads are not large, features not well defined; hair, light and sandy, often thin, complexion, colorless and pasty, skin, unhealthy looking eyes, washed out in appearance or gray, speech and movements, slow Mentally they are sluggish, judgment is good; memory, good; not emotional; heavy and plodding; lacking in energy. In such people diseases run a tedious and atypical course.

It is readily appreciable that with children we are liable to have a combination of at least two of these temperaments, since the sanguine and choleric are both supposed to be subject to rapid alterations of interest, and a shifting interest is highly characteristic of childhood. The other temperaments are not infrequently superimposed on these. For the type of interests evidenced by the two childlike temperaments, that of the choleric individual is intense while it lasts, whereas that of the sanguine is relatively feeble as well as volatile. Though the interest of the phlegmatic and of the nervous temperaments is persistent, it bears an analogy of the other two—that of the nervous being intense, whereas that of the phlegmatic lacks vividness.

In the first place there is the sanguine temperament whose characteristic is rapid and easy responsiveness to all impressions and interests. This is the characteristic mood of childhood which lives on in the temperament of the man or the woman who is something of everything and withal nothing much. The greatest strength of this temperament lies in its frank and ready receptivity and the promise therein contained of a pregnant contact with experience, but then it has its salient defects. It is wayward and infirm of purpose, with a terrible facility for skimming the surface of experience; it is incapable of devotion or even real affection, and, left to itself, will develop a butterfly emotionalism as its final type of existence. Such sanguine children, as they grow older, must be associated with those of more strenuous purpose, environed by those of a more intensive, purposeful temperament, their temperament must be deepened by struggle and self-denial, they must be convinced, not merely told, that something definite is expected of them and in adolescence they must be yoked to more energetic co-laborers, or enlisted in the active service of some great organization.

Of the choleric temperament—the one next most characteristic to the moods of childhood—the keynotes are precipitancy and persistence. There is no danger to such a one of flightiness of pursuit—the very intensity of interest precludes that, even though the volatil[illegible] nature favors a pitiful fragmentariness of ac[illegible]complishment. The danger is rather one of d[illegible]eveloping an obstinate narrowness, of ultimatel[illegible]y atta[illegible]ing to that limitation of character wh[illegible]h marks the man who is driven through life by some impulsive coercive proclivity. Of all types of temperament, this is the most refra[illegible]ctory to train, since it usually happens tha[illegible]. If the parent proposes, the child disposes o[illegible]therwise. The choleric individual can be led [illegible]ut never driven, but he can only be led if the leader is most careful that the leading string does not show.

A very different picture is presente[illegible]d by the nervous type of temperament. Unlike the sanguine, it has not the openness of out[illegible]look nor the ready responsiveness to environm[illegible]ent but it dips into moods instead of skim[illegible]ming the surface and has also a tendency to b[illegible]ood over the things which touch its sensitiven[illegible]ess, even to the point of morbidity. The dep[illegible] of its interests compensates for its want of [illegible]readiness and flexibility. Unlike the choleric tempera[illegible]ment, it has not the precipitancy or volatility of the intense interests. Whatever t[illegible] future that awaits it, it will probably tak[illegible] life seriously, and it will be the very preo[illegible]ccupation with specific and definite interests a[illegible]nd experiences which will hold the danger ele[illegible]ment for such a one. Because of this preoccupa[illegible]tion many phases of life will pass by unnoticed; [illegible]and because emotion, which should always be [illegible]the prelude to expression, comes to be valued so much for its own sake that it quenches the practical impulses it should have vitalized, there is great danger that sentimentality will become the dominant characteristic. Such temperaments must be environed by energetic, active interests, by wholesome affections, broad outlook, and definite purpose in action.

The woman who studies the moods of her young children, and controls and adjusts their environment with the object of getting the most for each child from its individual temperament, will find that she has a very interesting and absorbing occupation. In proportion, too, as she is correct in her diagnosis and efficient in her adaptations, she will have less cause to dread the children's future development, less anxiety over serious nervous difficulties present or to come, and less frequent experiences with tantrums and tears.

All children at some periods of their growth are moody or passionate or both. Everyone recognizes the need to control and correct early outbursts of passionate and causeless anger. Not every one, however, knows how to control these tantrums, and many unfortunate children grow into emotionalists or sentimentalists because their early years were unproductive of rational control.

Psychiatrists of to-day are deeply interested in studying "personalities," largely because so many of the mental diseases change completely the emotional as well as the intellectual responses of the individual. Such evidences as we already possess (which might assist in prophesying such mental conditions before adult life is attained) frequently point to uncontrolled passions—not only tantrums, but excessive hilarity, morbid fears, and similar exhibitions of lack of inhibition—as a premonitory sign of impending trouble. Thus, since prophylaxis is the modern cry, it becomes evident that there may be other deep and definite causes for controlling the passions of childhood beside the old-fashioned ones of seemly behavior and proper respect for the constituted authority and personal comfort of adults

How are tantrums, excesses of fear or of joy and similar passions to be controlled in a genuinely "temperamental" child? First, by an environment of calm, judicious, balanced and sane companions. Second, by due attention to the normal hygienic care of the body, clothing, food, exercise, sleep and recreation. Third, by simple definite discipline, the policy of deprivation of coveted pleasures should prevail over the policy of corporal punishment, moral suasion versus exhibitions of adult tantrums (though they be called by other names); and fourth, by constant truth telling on the part of every one in authority over the child no unfulfilled promises of reward or punishment; no unconsidered and inconsiderate threats—better no threats at all—no "bogey man" and "goblin" stories, and closer association with considerate but consistent parental authority

The time left for us to consider the tears of childhood is very limited, but I think I can put into few words the salient points in my mind

The young baby never cries without cause and each of its cries is distinctive. It may cry from hunger thirst, or pain—many a healthy baby vociferously objects to being stuck by a pin, or it may cry because of bodily discomfort, sometimes due to disordered digestion or other non-healthy conditions, and sometimes due to wet, wrinkled or wadded clothing, cramped position or sleepiness, or it may cry in fear or anger—the latter not infrequently justified by the neglect of the adults around the helpless to give it proper attention at proper times to insure comfort and happiness.

As the child grows older, there are other causes for tears, but all of them will bear investigation and adjustment or explanation, as the case may be. One most serious cause of tears is the emotion of fear, whether it be merely timidity or actual terror. Children's fears are very real to them, however insufficient to our wider experience may be the cause therefor, and should never be ridiculed. By explanation, elucidation and reasonable joking lead the child to laugh at his fears with you, but never make the unpardonable error of laughing at the child and his fears.

Another potent source of tears in middle and even late boyhood or girlhood are the phantasies of childhood. Not infrequently children are frightened by their own imaginings; but more frequently their phantasies—which people and activate a very dramatic and [illegible] realistic world for them—lead to the child's asserting as a fact of actual occurrence or association some of the fanciful happenings or associations of its dream life. These errors of association ignorant adults miscall lies, and tears are the natural sequel—not only of the punishment which results, but also of the indignation and outraged sense of justice of the child. On the contrary, so long as the phantasies of childhood avoid morbidity and contain nothing more dangerous than a dislocation of adult concepts of veracity they should be encouraged and even promoted by sympathetic adult participation wherever possible, because out of the healthful phantasies of childhood develop the constructive imaginings and inventions of mature life which form the foundation of social advance and of scientific research

It has already been said that we were considering tears as an evidence of emotion in [illegible]. Time does not allow of any detailed explanation of the other emotional evidences which, however, are deserving of just as much consideration in actual life. The timid, retiring, shy child is just as surely giving voice to its emotional nature. The boisterous, blustering, braggart requires just as judicious handling, as a very different type of emotional nature, as the fearful or tearful dreamer we have sketched.

A Varnished Frog Proves Bathing's Importance

SCIENTIFIC men have been experimenting with varnished frogs to throw light on the effects that closing the pores of the skin may have on human beings.

The results are said to prove that exposure of the skin to the air is necessary to life itself, while frequent bathing is essential to health

One frog that was varnished all over immediately showed signs of sickness and as soon as the temperature was raised to 86 degrees he died The explanation [illegible] its death was that the frog must use its pores to radiate the extra heat, which it cannot do when coated with varnish.

Varnished frogs that were kept at a lower temperature survived longer, but died within six days at the most. It was also shown that the varnished frogs were very susceptible to disease germs.

From these experiments it is concluded that a man should bathe frequently, and that it is unhealthy to keep the skin more covered with clothing than is necessary. The skin is an important and essential organ of respiration It also secretes and excretes When it does not perform its functions the other organs of the body become loaded with poisonous matter and death must occur sooner or later.

A bath every morning is an excellent thing because it removes waste material from the pores of the skin, gets the blood in circulation stimulates lung capacity and increases the area of lung used Secondary results are to increase appetite and nutrition and to distribute the food elements more thoroughly The feeling of well being that commonly follows a bath is a reliable indication of the good that is done.

These experiments should not lead any one to take baths that are too cold, because they defeat the objects aimed at by checking circulation Daily cold baths in Summer and tepid baths in Winter, with occasional hot baths, are recommended as the wisest course.

The skin is in a sense an adjunct of the heart, since its action is necessary to keep the blood in circulation on the surface of the body When the skin does not act, a dangerous burden is thrown on the heart.

In the varnished frogs that died the hearts were found to be choked with black and poisonous blood, that the mechanism of heart and lungs had been unable to purify

The larger and fatter a man is, the more he is in need of baths, since he has a larger skin surface, over which he must maintain a circulation. A young and active boy may perhaps remain well without frequent bathing, but such neglect on the part of a stout, middle-aged man must lead to premature old age and death.

"How Caruso Won Me"—By His Last Scorned Love.

The Interesting Love Methods of the World's Greatest Tenor at Last Revealed

ENRICO CARUSO, the world's greatest tenor, is in trouble again, and as usual, his trouble is of the heart. He of the golden tones and vagrant heart is of comparatively brief life, but many troubles, and all of them are made by women

Elise Ganelli, Ada Gianghetti, who crossed the sea to make mere sordid demands; Mlle Valesquez, Mlle. Savedra, Gilda Granchetti and Emma Trentini all hold the same opinion of the changeful character of the tenor's emotions and the lack of variety of his statements which bear upon the vagaries of cupid

But most of all everybody wants to know why the great Caruso will write those loving missives—only to have his words pursue him hereafter with a sorrowig lady perched on each and each demanding large financial damages for the heart they shattered."

All of these women have turned Nemesis to the tenor's Romeo. Mrs Mildred Meffert, a beautiful widow, in the latest and most relentless. Before he departed for Europe she sued him for $100,000 to aid her to forget his broken promises. On this page Mrs. Meffert tells the story of her troubles, and for the first time she reveals the love methods of the greatest living tenor

By Mrs. Mildred Meffert

IS there no humanity in the world? Is no man constant to the end of life? Can no woman trust and be happy and secure as to the future? Enrico Caruso has left me a broken-hearted woman, one of the tarnished toys with which the pathway of his life is strewn

He was a tender lover and for a time, I believe, true. He overran with the exquisite subtleties of love. When he slipped a ring upon my finger it was with a look that was a flame, words that were a caress

For a long time no day passed without the sound of his voice, a telegram, a letter, a gift, from him, without in some form his assurance, over and over again, "Cara mia you know I adore you."

And yet, over that thrillingly beautiful picture hangs a veil of recent events, coldness, silence on his part, and an effort at vindication on mine. It is like a bitter north wind after a day of glorious tropic sunlight

Enrico Caruso came into my life eight years ago. It was at a matinee at the Garden Theatre. Cavalieri was with him. Other friends [illegible] box With a woman companion I sat well down in the orchestra I happened to be in his line of vision. He looked and looked and looked at me until I was embarrassed Cavalieri saw that [illegible] was interested in someone outside the box and asked, "At whom do you look so steadily?"

"I am looking at one of the loveliest women I ever saw," he answered.

We met afterward in the lobby of the theatre. A friend presented him. With a few commonplaces we separated, but he asked me if I would be at the opera the next evening. After the opera we met again. I wrote and asked him to autograph a photograph of his. He replied, asking if he might call. I asked him to tea From that time we saw each other often and admiration made rapid progress toward love.

"Cara mia," he said when our acquaintance was but a few weeks old, "when something shall happen between La Senora and me, it shall be my great happiness to marry you. But now I cannot, for the children's sake She is their mother She deserves from me some semblance of respect

And so I trusted and hoped and loved. He met my friends and I his Frankly he showed his love for me to all. At an after-theatre supper at the Plaza, on my birthday, I noticed that he held his hand behind his back.

"Have you hurt your hand?" I asked anxiously.

"No, cara mia," he said. "I hold a box of bon bons for your born day." At first, for a very long time, indeed, he always remembered everything that concerned my life

"Bon bons," I said when he handed me the box. "What a little box of them!" He laughed as a schoolboy does. Opening it, I found it contained a beautiful gold purse. I flung my arms about him and kissed him. He shouted with joy

One morning as I was walking on the avenue, I met him and he said. "I am going to the doctor. I am not sick, but I go to the doctor." When I got home I wrote him a note telling him how happy that unexpected meeting made me, and I called him "Baby." That pleased him and always after that he called himself my "Baby." Me he called "My Little Princess," though I am not little. My name he cut to "Mil," pronouncing it "Mee," and "Milani." Once after a matinee of Boheme he said to me, "My adored one, I sang to you all the time. Did you not hear me. Instead of 'Mimi' I sang again and again 'Mili.' Did you not hear?"

For five years no day passed when he was in this country without my seeing him or hearing from him. If he were very busy rehearsing I would hear his ring, and the rich voice I loved saying, "I have called you up to tell you I love you and am thinking of you."

By long distance came the same sweet message. "I think of you. You are always with me in thought," he said a hundred times.

Mrs. Mildred Meffert, Who Tells How Tenor Caruso Wins Trusting Women's Hearts.

I was very happy and unhappy. For there was the woman who was known as his wife, Ada Gianghetti, who came to New York and made a scene at the hotel. "La Senora," he called her. Unless La Senora openly sundered their bonds he could not, for she was the mother of his children.

Then followed years of devotion and self-sacrifice on my part. My maid used to say: "How strange, madame, and you so young!"

When the news came that "La Senora" had eloped with a chauffeur I wept tears of joy. I sank upon my knees and thanked God for freeing my beloved from the bonds honor had forged upon him. Happy as a girl in her betrothal days, I made my plans for my bridal I fully expected that when he returned that Summer from Europe we would be married

But when he returned he evaded He made excuses.

Torn with terror at his strange attitude, I began to plead. I reminded him of his promises I questioned him. I wept. He shrugged his shoulders. He refused to talk He gave no sufficient reason. I nearly went mad.

One evening he came to dine with me. My maid spilled a salt cellar. Her brown face turned gray from fright. She said: "Oh, madame, there will be an awful fight." There was. I reproached him. I besought him to keep his promises. I went nearly mad with grief and fear. The next day he met someone who is a friend of both. He said: "I was afraid to leave Mil last evening. I did not know what she would do to herself."

I was afraid of all women. Even his harmlessly waggish spirit disturbed me. Sitting one day at a restaurant table, he drew caricatures of some of the persons present. He held them up to a group of laughing girls at the next table and said: "That is you."

"Don't do that!" I said fiercely. "At any rate, not while you are with me."

"Beloved, I meant no harm," he answered. "If you saw some of the letters that come to me from strange women, you would bring down a bomb and blow up the hotel. Do you not know that I care nothing for that? It touches me less than the wind. You are the only woman in the world who interests me"

For a moment these assurances made me happy. Then the fiends of doubt tore again at me. I renewed my pleadings. At the Knickerbocker Hotel one afternoon he turned white as a ghost Having besought him in vain to keep his promise to me, I snatched from a drawer his revolver and ran into the hall of his suite, saying, "I cannot bear it. Farewell!" He sprang after me, struggled with me and tore the weapon from me. Only by greater strength was a tragedy averted.

In one of our quarrels he asked me when and how he had promised to marry me. "Enrico, your letters!" I exclaimed in amazement. "All your letters."

He shrugged his shoulders. "Those letters," he sneered. "Ah, yes, I expected to hear from those letters."

We began to confide in our friends Usually they were friends we had in common Said one of them:

"Enrico is troubled about his letters to you. He feels uneasy lest you make a wrong use of them." And I answered: "To show my love and trust I will give them back to him."

I packed them in a box and carried them to his hotel. All save a few postcards and telegrams "What have you there?" he said, jesting "a present?"

"Yes, dear," I answered. "A present that proves my love for you"

He opened the box. He lifted the letters from it and spread them upon the table. He read them all, with changing expression. When he had finished he folded his arms upon the table, leaned his head upon them and wept.

"We were so happy," he sobbed "so happy."

From that time I saw him less and less often. His manner underwent a change. At the beginning of this season I went to the opera, and heard him sing. I went back to see him in his dressing room. I drove him to his hotel in my cab.

He kissed me good bye and I have never seen or heard from him since

Though I waited for months for some sign from him, none ever came. There remained for me nothing save his gifts and my memories. He had grown tired or there was another in his life. I do not know which. But when that time came he withheld from me even his friendship. He was very cruel.

What could I do? Sit here alone, in silence, a crushed, heart-broken woman? Because of the lonely life I had led for years for him, my friends had dropped away from me. I was as much alone in New York as a lightning stricken tree on a western plain. I determined not upon revenge, but upon vindication. I wish him only the best of everything that life offers. I hope he may be successful and happy. But I owe myself one thing, to restore my status in the world, to show myself, forsaken, but the proven betrothed of Enrico Caruso. For that reason I have punished him in the only way I could, by an appeal to the law.

For what men lack in chivalry sometimes the courts supply.

Two Love Postals Mrs. Meffert Says Were Written Her by Caruso When He Still Loved Her.

Enrico Caruso, Whose Love Letters Give Him So Much After Annoyance.

A New Way of Impressing "Votes for Women" on England's Home Secretary

London, May 4

THE most conspicuous object of the English Suffragettes' hatred is the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, Secretary of State for Home Affairs in the British Cabinet. He it was who drew up the "Cat and Mouse Act."

The other day Mr. McKenna was dining at a very fashionable house in Mayfair. His companion was a titled woman, who is equally distinguished for her beauty, her entertaining conversation and her charming personality. She noticed that Mr. McKenna was eating practically nothing and commented on the fact with sympathetic interest.

The Cabinet Minister admitted that the cares of his office, the acts and plans of the Suffragettes and the lure of social gayety had had a bad effect upon his system. All these things in fact had contributed to upset his digestion and make him more or less of a nervous wreck. He had lost all his appetite

"Oh, Mr. McKenna," exclaimed the Countess, looking into his eyes with deep feeling, "I know something that will make a new man of you."

Of course Mr. McKenna wanted to know what the wonderful cure was. He learned that it was a belt which he had to wear next to the skin. It would drive away indigestion, restore the appetite and make a man feel like a two-year-old.

"I will send you one as soon as I get home. You must be careful to wear it at night," said the Countess.

The belt came to the Home Secretary's residence and he put it on at night and went to bed full of hope. In the morning he awoke feeling that the belt had really done something for him. Whistling merrily he began to prepare for his bath, when, what was his astonishment to see clearly printed upon his skin in the vicinity of his waist, the terrible words.

"Votes for Women!"

Investigation showed that the words were written out in the fabric of the inner side of the belt in a kind of indelible purple ink. The heat of the body brought the ink out and caused the words to be strongly impressed on the skin of the wearer.

The Countess who had so cruelly and insidiously induced Mr. McKenna to wear the belt was a strong Suffragette.

How to Prevent YOUR HOME BURNING UP

Easily Taken Precautions That Will Protect Your Life and Property from the Fire Peril

THE property loss by fire in the United States last year reached a total estimated at $220,000,000. This enormous total was greater by far than that of any other country for the same period, and so was the number of human lives sacrificed here to the flames

Believing that a large part of this loss was due to pure carelessness and could easily have been prevented, the National Fire Protection Association is conducting a campaign of education in sensible methods of precaution against fires. The following valuable suggestions are from a recent bulletin of the association designed particularly to help lessen the number of fires in dwelling houses:

The attic, cellar and all outbuildings should be cleaned at least once every year, and all useless material and rubbish removed therefrom and burned. Metal waste baskets only should be used.

In storing clothing, first remove all matches or other material from the pockets. Do not hang clothes where they will be near hot chimneys, and do not go into closets with lighted matches or candles

Care should be exercised in burning leaves, dead grass or rubbish. Keep these fires a safe distance from buildings, and never light them on windy days. Do not bank houses in the Winter with straw, excelsior or other readily inflammable material.

Use only safety matches, and make it impossible for children to get them. Always place burned matches in metal receptacles. To smoke in garages, in bed, or around barns containing hay is deliberately to invite disaster.

Swinging gas brackets are dangerous and never should be allowed near curtains or dressers. If open gas flames are within two feet of the ceiling, see that the ceiling is protected with sheet metal or asbestos board. Tips for gas lights are inexpensive, and a light used with a broken tip or without a tip often causes fire. Don't use pendant gas mantles unless protected underneath with wire gauze. Hot carbon deposits form and drop from mantles of gas arc lamps. A globe closed at the bottom is safer

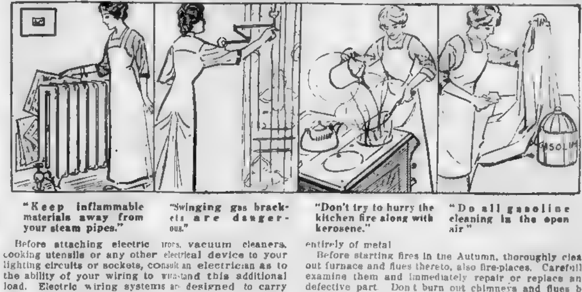
Examine the gas meter, see that it is securely set and well connected, and is not located near open lights or furnaces. An outside gas shut-off valve to service connection is desirable. Never look for gas leaks with match, candle or lamp.

Where a dwelling is lighted by a gasoline vapor or acetylene gas system the rules governing the safe use of these illuminants should be carefully studied and rigidly observed.

Illuminating oils should be kept in closed metal cans in a safe place, and lamps should never be filled except in daylight. Kerosene lamps should be kept clean and properly trimmed. If allowed to burn all night, select one that contains much more than enough oil. A dirty lamp containing only a little oil is unsafe. Lamps with broad bases are preferable. Care must be taken not to place them near inflammable material, under shelves, nor to set or leave lamps or lanterns in stables or other places where animals may upset them.

Never allow little children to carry lamps, and never set a lamp on a tablecover—children may pull it over. Do not use paper or decorative shades of inflammable material on lamps or electric light bulbs.

Electricity is a hidden hazard, and extends throughout the wire system in a building. Be sure it is safely installed, and have the system carefully inspected and passed upon by a recognized electrical inspector. Do not destroy the insulation on electric light, fan or heater wires by hanging them on hooks or nails. Immediately repair or replace any defective switches, fuses, sockets, etc. A fuse is the "safety valve" of an electric system, and should never be replaced by one of larger size or of any other material.



"Keep inflammable materials away from your steam pipes."

"Swinging gas brackets are dangerous."

"Don't try to hurry the kitchen fire along with kerosene."

"Do all gasoline cleaning in the open air."

Before attaching electric irons, vacuum cleaners, cooking utensils or any other electrical device to your lighting circuits or sockets, consult an electrician as to the ability of your wiring to withstand this additional load. Electric wiring systems are designed to carry only a certain current, and if overloaded may cause fires. Numerous fires have been caused by leaving electric irons with the current on. Disconnect them immediately when through using.

Coal and kindling should preferably be kept within a brick or stone enclosure and not stored against frame partitions nor directly against walls of boiler or furnace rooms.

Never put kindling into the oven

Deposit all ashes in metal receptacles or upon non combustible floors, removing same from building at least once a week. Barrels or boxes should not be used for storing or carrying ashes unless they are constructed entirely of metal

Before starting fires in the Autumn, thoroughly clean out furnace and flues thereto, also fire-places. Carefully examine them and immediately repair or replace any defective part. Don't burn out chimneys and flues by making an especially hot fire with paper, etc. Main chimneys should be cleaned from roof to cellar, and all stovepipes where entering them provided with metal collar and rigidly fixed in place. Replace any tile, crock or flimsy flues and chimneys with substantial brick chimneys. Long lengths of metal stovepipe are dangerous

At least an 18-inch clearance is necessary between top and sides of furnace, breeching and flues from ceiling, partitions and other combustible material. Repair at once any broken plaster in ceiling or partition walls.

Do not have steam pipes in contact with woodwork or near inflammable materials, and do not permit rubbish to accumulate behind steam coils or radiators

Gas stoves or other heaters should have a ventilating flue to carry off the burned gas fumes, which are poisonous. Do not use portable rubber or similar tubing, but connect all gas stoves rigidly and securely with gas pipe. Examine valves and see that they are tight and do not leak.

Never permit a stove of any kind to be set up without stone, brick, concrete or metal protection underneath, or near a partition without a metal shield and air space. Never run stovepipes through partitions, or paste paper over flue holes

All types of open fireplaces or stoves, especially where there are children, should be provided with substantial spark screens. Don't throw waste paper on an open fire

Every period of extreme cold results in numerous fires due to forcing the heating apparatus. Keep this in mind next Winter. Watch your heater

Keep hoods and pipes of kitchen range free from grease and lint by cleaning with hot water and lye. Do not hang clothes or bags near stoves, or on stovepipes or steam pipes

Do not allow your family to jeopardize their lives by pouring kerosene onto the kitchen fire to hurry it along. Extreme care should be used with alcohol or kerosene stoves. They should always be filled in the daylight and away from any open flame

Do not use patent cleaning fluids, polish or chemicals unless you know something about them. Many of these contain explosives and oils of a dangerous character

Do all gasoline cleaning in the open air, and caution the members of the family to refrain from using gasoline or like volatiles in the house. This material should not be kept in the house nor in glass bottles

Beware of rags or cloths used in oiling floors or cleaning or polishing furniture. They may ignite spontaneously. Be sure and burn them after using. Leaving them about for only a few hours may mean a fire

One or more approved chemical fire extinguishers should be placed in every home. They must be protected against freezing

At Last the Law Decides JUST WHAT A KISS IS

EVER since man began to have intercourse with his fellow men the kiss has been used as a salutation of friendship, respect or love.

Next to speech itself, there are few acts more instinctive to men and women of all nations than kissing. To kiss is one of the first things the new-born human being learns to do; and a kiss is often his last conscious act on this earth

All that poets and philosophers have written about the kiss since literature began would fill many ponderous volumes. Even science has not neglected the subject. Of late years physicians have devoted a great many words to a discussion of the danger of spreading disease by means of kisses.

But while poets have been singing the praises of the kiss, while doctors have been denouncing it and artists have been taking it for the themes of their masterpieces, the law has been strangely silent on the subject. Legal literature usually ignores it entirely or mentions it only in the most incidental way

Now, however, this deficiency has been supplied by the Imperial Court at Leipzig, which has taken great pains to describe the exact legal status of a kiss

According to the learned German judges, "a kiss is an operation performed upon another requiring, under all circumstances, the recipient's sanction. Such an operation may only be carried out without express permission when the one who kisses can reasonably be sure of the other's silent consent. For instance, in the case of relatives, parents, children, lovers and such like

"If, on the contrary, the recipient of a kiss resists, and that not merely for the sake of preserving appearances, but in all seriousness, then it must be held that the person so kissed regards the kiss as an illegal infringement of privilege and as an assault upon honor. Hence, whosoever under such circumstances inflicts a kiss upon another makes himself guilty of assault

'To fulfil this condition, it is sufficient that the kiss be impressed against the other's will, it is unnecessary that the recipient should feel the kiss as an insult.'

HOW A "BEARDED LADY" KILLED ALL HER SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

BY DISSOLVING OUT ROOTS AND ALL

FOR THE BENEFIT OF SUNDAY MAGAZINE READERS, LADY EXPLAINS HOW SHE ACCIDENTALLY DISCOVERED A NEW ABSORPTION PROCESS WHICH PERMANENTLY REMOVED HER HAIRY MASK AFTER ELECTRICITY, TWEEZERS, CAUSTIC PASTES, LOTIONS, POWDERS AND ALL OTHER DEPILATORIES AND ADVERTISED REMEDIES HAD ABSOLUTELY FAILED TO DO ANYTHING BUT HARM

By following simple directions given below, every woman now has the means of easily preparing and using, in her own home, this wonderful process, which has hitherto been a carefully guarded secret, known only to a few high-priced specialists. Full directions are now made public for the first time

All who are afflicted with superfluous hair will be interested to learn of the amazing discovery made by Miss Alma Randall, who until recently was deeply humiliated by these repulsive growths on her face, neck and arms. As the hair constantly became more thick and hideous she tried every process and remedy advertised or recommended, but found to her sorrow that if any of these removed hair at all, the effects were only temporary and new growths soon appeared stronger than ever. Even hours of torture under the electric needle simply meant great pain, a sore and blemished skin, and her [illegible] disappointment. After spending huge sums in efforts to get rid of her [illegible] and beauty [illegible] affliction Miss Randall was about to give up in despair [illegible] the beauty [illegible] said to have permanently banished superfluous hair. With [illegible] a very slight clue as to the nature of this remarkable process used in bygone ages, Miss Randall [illegible] experimenting [illegible] the secret [illegible] Miss Randall's [illegible] with [illegible] hair, there seems to be no doubt that [illegible] has been found, a way, which radically differs from anything [illegible] by which any woman can now rid herself permanently, harmlessly and painlessly of all superfluous hair growths by dissolving them out of existence [illegible]

After bearing for ten years the affliction of a humiliating and repulsive hairy mask with beard and mustache like a man's Miss Randall permanently removed it all in a single night by means of the [illegible] new absorption process explained in this article

[illegible] and it may be [illegible] Simply address Miss Alma Randall, suite 143, 1a, Regent street, London W., England (postage to England, 2 cents), and you will receive all particulars by return mail under plain, sealed cover

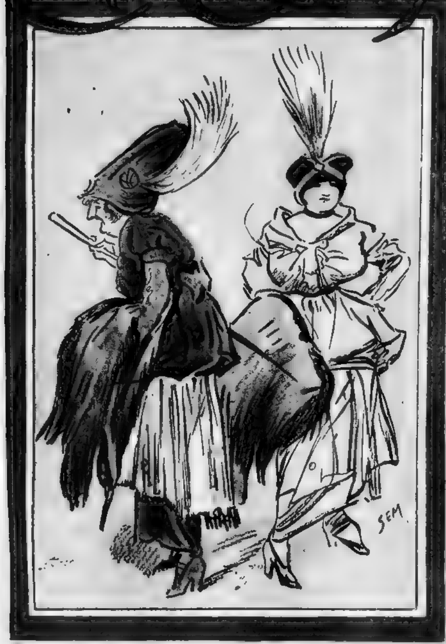
"The True and False Chic"

By SEM.



This Is the "False Chic," According to Sem.

SEM, the most amusing and the most malicious caricaturist of the day in Paris, put forth a new album of clever drawings, published and copyrighted by the "Succes" Company of Paris.

Sem has devoted his pencil in this new work entirely to caricaturing the prevalent fashions in women's dress. He entitles his book, "The True and False Chic," but the examples of the false chic overshadow the true.

In the letterpress accompanying the pictures, Sem says that the prevailing fashions are the ugliest and the most ridiculous the world has ever seen. Women, imagining themselves to be fashionable, make themselves look like strange insects, like clowns, and even like lunatics.

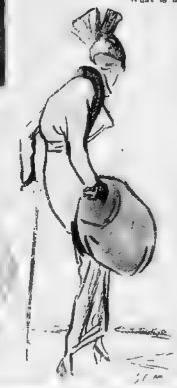
"Paris," he exclaims, "is going through a terrible crisis of bad taste. Fashion is abandoning herself without restraint to the wildest phantasies of a disordered imagination. Some of the great couturiers, it is true, have held themselves aloof from the contagion, but, except for these few select ones, most of the houses pour forth all sorts of eccentricities which are too quickly adopted and circulated. They organize exhibitions of their models in the form of regular music-hall performances, and thereby lead misguided women to wear things that are entirely unsuitable for them.

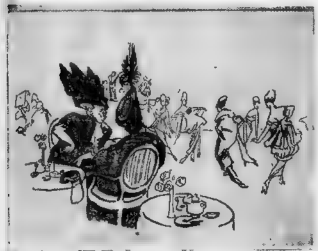
"Imagine that a blase Parisian resolved to exile himself ten years ago, and went to live among the savages of Central Africa. He comes back to Paris eager to see once more the fair Parisiennes, whose discreet charm and grace he remembers.

"What is his disillusion! In the theatres, the fashionable restaurants, he finds himself among a multitude of bizarre creatures whose inexplicable appearance transfixes him with stupor.

"They appear to him like strange insects immeasurably swollen, beetles, grasshoppers with heavy abdomens and skinny legs and long antennae upon their heads. These queer creatures dance and hop like a swarm of insects in a ray of sunlight.

"While many women have an entomological appearance, others suggest that they have been dressed for a masquerade. The fashion of excessive panniers and volants has given them ridiculous silhouettes that can only be regarded by an artist as a caricature of what woman should look like."





"The couturiers organize exhibitions of their models in the form of music hall performances, and thereby lead misguided women to wear things unsuitable to them."

The other pictures show an exaggerated Parisian type and Sem's idea of the insect that one fashion suggests to him.

The "Waterfall" Costume of [illegible] White Taffeta, Showing the [illegible] Outline [illegible]

Extremes

By Lady Duff Gordon

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon

HATS are very high, or very low, silhouettes are very bouffant, or of a flagpole slimness, gowns are very low cut in front, very high in the back—and so it goes. Extremes meet on every corner and at every tea table. The mademoiselle with the slimmest of the slim outline will be walking on the Bois or sipping tea at the Ritz-Carlton with a matron whose outline is as bouffant as that of a frigate under full sail.

There was never a time when so much latitude was allowed the woman of fashion. In other days all women had to look alike. They all had to wear panniers or else be voted hopelessly dowdy, or they had to wear straight up and down effects—in fact, each goose had to wear what all the other geese wore.

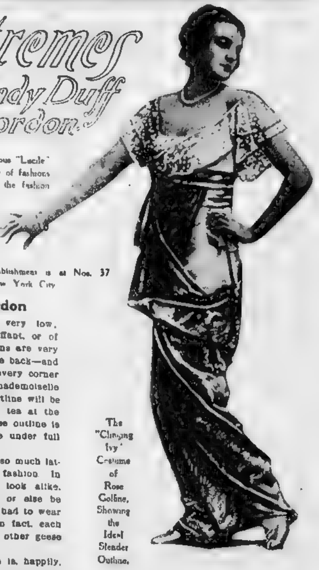
But this awful state of affairs is, happily, over for the nonce. As I have told you ever so many times, never could one be more individual, never could one so satisfactorily choose that style which pleases herself alone, as at present.

I am proving my contentions by sending you two photographs, which are not only proofs, but very forceful proofs, of the "New Freedom." In the charming waterfall costume the draperies are very pronounced, and the effect in the back is very much that of the bustle gowns which some Parisians have tentatively adopted. In this costume the breadth given the upper part of the figure is thoroughly in harmony with the draperies.

But let me tell you that there are some couturiers here in Paris who are combining the bouffant skirt with the tiniest of bodices.

The pretty girl who wears this very charming but extreme-of-its-kind gown will be just as much "in style" as the girl who wears the clinging ivy costume which is developed in rose golfine, that most delectable of the new fabrics.

To my mind there is a hint of Drian in this photograph; the clinging swirliness of the drapery and the bouyant pose of the slender figure produce this impression.



The "Clinging Ivy" Costume of Rose Golfine, Showing the Ideal Slender Outline.

Boston American Society and Club News

Social News In And About Town

One of the greatest events to which dance-mad society is looking forward with unusual interest and which promises to be even more of a succes socially than the contest at the Opera House recently, is the competition by well-known amateurs of Boston at the congress of the world's greatest dancers at the Boston Theatre during the week of May 18.

Among the well-known amateurs who will dance are Pauline Chamberlain and William Chamberlain, Miss Louise Dixon and A. A. Schulman, Louis Murray, Miss Dorothy Seecro, Paul Shedd, Miss Brenda Cleveland, Samuel Gibson, Miss Madeline Reed, Walter Demelman, Miss Mary Stewart, Miss Harriet Brown, Miss Evelyn Dornbach, Clayton Robinson, Miss Adelaid Ottis, Edwin Bruce, Miss Marion Gibbey, Michael Kenneally, Miss Carolyn Maywood, Faunce Whitcomb and Alice Mannix.

Mrs. Orville L. Story, president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Club of Boston, presided at the annual May luncheon held at the Somerset Wednesday

The tables were beautifully decorated with yellow jonquils, American Beauty roses and other blooms.

Directly after the luncheon Mrs. Story introduced Miss Alice H. Grady, who spoke on the aims and prospective work of the Women's City Club of Boston.

The members and guests also enjoyed a programme of readings by Mrs. Conrad M. Gerlach, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Frank Rodman, and a group of songs by Mrs. Robert Taylor Dass, accompanied by Mrs. R. C Williams, also readings by Miss Mary A. Cody, Emerson '14

Mrs. Wrenn Mclean had charge of the arrangements for the luncheon and entertainment.

The war of the roses is raging quite as furiously in the younger set as in the older, and those who wear the yellow rose are beginning, it is said, to have rather unkindly feelings toward some of the girls who have chosen the red.

Fanny Osgood is one of the most ardent members among the young girls of the suffrage party. Among the other Vincent Club girls who approve of her stand and are ready to stand with her are Miss Julia Shewell, Miss Dorothy Codja and several others, while among the strong antis are the Misses Elsie and Olivia Ames, Miss Grace Lockwood, Marie Agassiz, Hope Bancroft. Marion Fraser and Barbara Bennett. These girls are members of a league known as the Junior Antis

The girls, I notice, are taking particular pains these days each to wear the rose of her special league; and I understand that when the season opens in the Fall there will be several entertainments given by each league.

While talking with a friend of Ruth Paine's the other day I learned of many of the arrangements for the wedding. Miss Paine, whose engagement was recently announced to John H Blodgett, is another of the girls of smart society to give the laugh to the superstitions regarding the so-called "unlucky" Maytime, and has decided that her wedding shall take place on the 21st

It is to be celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Paine, at No. [illegible] Commonwealth avenue, which will be converted into a wonderful bower of Spring blooms. It is the wish of the bride that everything be as simple as possible, for she is a girl with the best of taste, as is attested by her style of dress as well as by her manner of entertaining on all occasions. I hear that the wedding gown is to be a perfect wonder of white satin and lace, and that her trousseau is decidedly elaborate. Miss Esther Humphrey Paine is to be her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Mary A. Clapp of Swampscott, Miss Ruth R. Blodgett of Brookline, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Christine Everts of Roxbury and Miss Edith L. Williams of New York.

Mr. Blodgett, who makes his home with his mother, Mrs. J. H. Blodgett, of Brookline, has selected James Adams of Brookline for his best man, and his ushers will be W. E. Stanwood of Wellesley, F. W. Paine, brother of the bride-elect; Leonard Schloss of Philadelphia, Ralph McClellan of Boston, A. P. Everts of Roxbury and Harry Hooker of Wellesley.

Mr. Blodgett and his bride are to make their home at Beach Bluff, Swampscott, where a beautiful home is in process of construction for them.

TWO CHARMING MAIDS AND A YOUNG MATRON OF GREATER BOSTON'S FASHIONABLE SET

Whims and Foibles of the Fashionables

It almost seems a shame that many of the richest women of the fashionable set are not obliged to work at some of the trades in which they are so proficient. Take Miss Dorothy Jordan for instance. She not only has a wonderful gift of imparting the knowledge of dancing to the children at the North Bennet Street Industrial School, which is her pet charity, but is a clever milliner. She made every "stitch" of the stunning head dress she wore at the recent Vincent Club theatricals.

Another equally gifted young woman is Miss Harriett Robeson of Brookline, the attractive daughter of Mrs. Andrew Robeson of Walnut street, and niece of Mrs. Charles S. Sargent of "Holm Lea" in Brookline. Her knowledge of art is greater than that of many a decorator who commands the highest price. Miss Robeson, who has been studying at the Beaux Arts in Paris for two years, went in for interior decorating while there, and her work was highly praised by the French critics.

Still another clever society girl is Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr. She was formerly Miss Faith Simpkins. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. "Nat" Simpkins, and a niece of Mrs. Bayard Thayer. Up to the time of her marriage a few months ago, Mrs. Tufts was a student at the Art School connected with the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Since making her home in Norwood, where she and Mr. Tufts have a most artistic place, she has been devoting her time to beautifying her home.

Miss Dorothy Bolles of Commonwealth avenue, who coached the dancers for the Vincent Club theatricals, is a skilful teacher of terpsichorean art.

Mrs. Antonio Reggi, who was formerly Miss Claire Means, is famous for her cooking. She has as many social demands, if not more than many of the older matrons, but finds time to do not only her cooking, but her "own work" to use her own words.

The series of the Dansants at the Country Club is proving a delightful success. They are held every Thursday afternoon from 4 till 7.

Last Thursday the tea tables were spread on the piazzas, and this gave much more room to the dancers. The last two in the series, on May 21 and 28, will, no doubt, be even more successful than the first two.

I happened to see Mrs. William Endicott just before she sailed the other day for Europe, and so young and fresh does she look at the age of eighty that I couldn't help marveling to a friend near by who evidently had been after Mrs. Endicott's secret of youth

"It's her varied interests," she claimed, "and her disposition to take everything philosophically. take everything philosophically." Mrs. Endicott was all in black and surrounded by relatives and friends, all anxious for her comfort. Mrs. Endicott is the mother-in-law of Joseph Chamberlain, the British statesman, and was one of the saloon passengers on the Franconia, which sailed Wednesday. Mrs. Endicott is so used to sailing that it bothers her not in the least, and she crosses several times a year in order to visit her daughter. Mrs. Endicott made her last trip in September, also on the Franconia. When in Boston she resides with her son, William C. Endicott, at No. 163 Marlboro street, whose wife before her marriage was Louise Thoron. Her friends also add that exercise is one of the prime factors of Mrs. Endicott's youth recipes, for she is most active and never misses a day in the fresh air.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Monroe are to give one of their famous clambakes on May 22, at their beautiful place on upper Washington street, Brighton. This is to be a subscription affair, limited to seventy-five guests, for the benefit of one of the booths at the big country fair which the Brighthelmstone Club is to hold June 4, 5 and 6 on the old Allston golf grounds. Mr. Monroe has won the appreciation and envy of his friends on several former occasion because of the excellence of these "bakes" which take place in this garden.

In the WORLD of SOCIETY

Mrs. Guy Currier of Beacon street and her pretty debutante daughter, Sallie, left town Friday morning for New York, taking the trip in their motor. They will spend a week or ten days there and will be but a short time in town prior to going to the Summer estate.

I saw Mrs Currier the other day on the street in a suit of dark blue cloth trimmed with braid of lighter shade of blue and black, and a small smart black hat. Mrs. Currier on Tuesday evening retired from the presidency of the Professional Woman's Club, which position she has filled most gracefully the past year

Mrs. Currier, Mrs. Frederick Brown of Commonwealth avenue and Mrs. Lonsberry of the Vendome were among the women at the meeting last Tuesday at the Florence Crittenton Home making arrangements for the fair to be held for its benefit next December, and it is hoped the affair will be the largest and most successful ever given. Work already has been started.

The exclusive little colony of Dedham society women who are late recruits to the Progressive party have organized a club, with Mrs. William A. Goodwin and Miss Ruth Nickerson among its officers. On the dramatic committee are Mrs. Francis W. Welch, Miss Elizabeth F. Gray, Mrs. Philip L. Hale and Mrs. Arthur E. Thayer. I am surprised to know that Miss Nickerson has taken up anything of the sort as she is so decidedly feminine.

Mrs. Louis A. Shaw is another of our active Progressives and is kept so busy with her home duties and her various outside interests that even her mother, Mrs Charles when she wants her. Mrs. Shaw has been wearing some very stunning black creations this Spring.

The last meeting of the popular Circolo Italiano of Boston was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Miss Marian Blackall, No. 16 Chauncey street, Cambridge, where the members and guests enjoyed the amusing play "Il Matrimonio di un Morto." Among those who took part were Mrs. Charles H. Haskins, Miss Mabel Curry, Miss Ruth McIntyre, Silvio W. Vitale, Pasquale Galassi, Ettore Ciampolini, S. L. Stagg and C. W. Jenks. Professor Charles H. Grandgent and F. W. Butler Twing had charge of the stage management and direction.

I happened to run onto a group of society girls the other day just as they were seating themselves comfortably for a little afternoon tea and chat. The prettiest and most enthusiastic was Hilda Rice, whose engagement was announced a fortnight ago to Frederick Ayer, Jr I glean from what I hear that the engagement is to be but a short one, the wedding very likely taking place in June. The other day Miss Rice was looking more charming than ever in a suit of dark blue with a Page cape of dark blue and a chic little hat of the same color, trimmed with a wreath of rosebuds and made in the watteau style. She is a prominent member of the Myopia Hunt Club set, her slenderness and pretty coloring giving evidence of her love of riding and all outdoor sport. In this respect she takes after her mother, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Proctor, who is still one of the foremost of the women. Mr. Ayer is also a well known huntsman, and it is said that the romance began on the hunting field, when he was forced to acknowledge Miss Rice a "ripping" huntswoman. Miss Rice, who is a prominent member of the Vincent Club and also of the Chilton, is a niece of Mrs. George Mandell, whose husband is M. F. H. of the Myopias, so she comes by her cleverness as a horsewoman naturally.

Weddings By the Chaperone

At the Summer home of Mrs. William L. McKee in Bristol R. I., will occur the wedding on June 1 of her daughter, Miss Marjorie Van Wickle, and George A. Lyon, Jr. The McKees closed their town house on Commonwealth avenue yesterday and will immediately open their country estate, where preparations for the all-important event will begin. It will not be a large affair. Mr Lyon graduated from Yale in 1909 and from the Harvard Law School four years later

An out-of-town wedding yesterday which was of much interest was that of Miss Anne P. Rogers and J. Griswold Webb, which was solemnized at St. James' Church, New York, at 12 30 o'clock. Several Bostonians went over for the occasion, which was a decidedly brilliant one. After the ceremony the guests were conveyed to the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Rogers, parents of the bride, where luncheon was served and a reception took place.

The bride had for her matron of honor Mrs. Kenneth B. Schley, her sister, and the bridesmaids were Miss Margaret E. Trevor, Miss Katherine D. Colt, Miss Sara Delano and Miss Ruth Wales. Miss Elizabeth S. Rogers, a niece of the bride, was flower girl.

The bridegroom's attendants were H. Walter Webb, his brother, who was best man, and the ushers were Herman L. Rogers, Gordon H. Balch, Carleton Burr, H Curtis Dewey, Darragh A. Park, Samuel M. Felton, Jr., Charles H. Davis, John S. Parker, Henry B. Gardner, Vanderbilt Webb, George von L. Meyer, Jr., Henry P McKean, Chester G. Burden, Walter Tufts, Jr., Frederick Parker, Jr., and Thomas H. Frothingham, all of them Harvard men and most of them Bostonians

Mr. Webb gave his bachelor dinner at the Copley-Plaza on May 2

Mrs. Russell Codman and Miss Gertrude Brooks of Boston were among those going over to New York for the wedding there on Tuesday of Miss Maria H. Dehon, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Dehon, to Dr. William M. Polk.

The ceremony took place in the chantry of Grace Church and was socially one of the most interesting of the season.

Dr. Polk is one of the best known of the medical men. The ceremony was witnessed by only a few relatives and friends and was performed by Rev. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity parish, assisted by the rector of Grace Church, Rev. Dr. Charles Lewis Slattery. The bride was given away by her cousin, William P. Blake of Boston. There were no bridal attendants and no ushers.

The ceremony was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride on Fifth avenue, where they will reside upon their return from the honeymoon

An important wedding scheduled for May 27 is that of Miss Helen Lincoln Appleton, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Ruel Ross Appleton of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Charles A. Read, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Read of Read's Island, Manchester. Mr. Read is a Harvard man, class of '11. He is a brother of Mrs. Francis Lowell Burnett (Helen Read) of No. 82 Beacon street, and another sister is Miss Charlotte Read, who gave up society a Winter or so ago and went to live in a settlement and do settlement work, in which, by the way, she is succeeding wonderfully well.

Another out-of-town wedding will be that on June 8 of Miss Florence Marshall of New York and G. Ellis Densmore of Brookline, which is to take place at the Hotel Gotham in New York at 4.30 p. m.

Miss Marshall is a graduate of Ogontz School, near Philadelphia. Her sister, Mrs. Royale H. Fowler, will be matron of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Jean Haddock of New York, Miss Dorothy Scott of Germantown, Pa.; Miss Martha Walton of St Davids, Pa., and Miss Elizabeth Densmore of Brookline.

Edward D Densmore, Harvard '04, will be his brother's best man and the ushers will be John H Densmore, another brother, Harvard '04; Chauncey Marshall, Jr., Harvard '01, Henry R. Beekman of New York and Newell Vanderhoef of Brooklyn.

Among the weddings of the coming week will be that on Wednesday of Miss Gladys Lawrence, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Henry C. Lawrence of No. 168 West Eighty-eighth street, New York city, and William O. Hubbard, formerly of Cambridge and the son of Sanford B. Hubbard of that city. The ceremony is to take place at the home of the bride's parents, but owing to illness in the family will be a small and very quiet affair. Mr Hubbard graduated from Harvard in 1905 and from Harvard Law School in 1911. He was assistant professor in English at Harvard before going to New York city three years ago. He is secretary to Justice John Proctor Clarke. Miss Lawrence's father is on the governing committee of the stock exchange.

Miss Lucy Robbins is entertaining Miss Deborah Nash Baldwin at a tea in her home on Chestnut street, in West Newton. Before leaving for her Southern home Miss Baldwin will be the guest of honor at many social functions.

SHE'LL WED IN JUNE

MISS ROSALIE JENKINS TO BE BRIDE OF BROKER

Miss Rosalie Martha Jenkins to be the bride of Owen Grant.

The wedding of Miss Rosalie Martha Jenkins of Winthrop to Owen Grant, a young Boston broker, is expected to take place early in June. The bride-to-be is a prominent young suffragist, worker for charity and a leader in amateur theatricals. She is popular in the younger Winthrop social set and is the daughter of Mrs. Rosalie E. Jenkins of No. 175 Pleasant street, Winthrop.

Miss Jenkins is a member of St. Cecilia's Guild and of the Civics Society. Her finace is the son of Daniel Grant of Somerville.

The many Boston men classmates of Cortlandt Dixon Moss, Harvard 1909, are interested in the announcement that his wedding to Miss Katherine Hazard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hazard of Cedarhurst, L. I., is to take place on Saturday, June 6, in St. John's Episcopal Church at Far Rockaway, L. I. It will be followed by a large reception and breakfast at Meadow Hall, the Hazard residence at Cedarhurst.

Miss Hazard, who is well known in Boston, has chosen her sister, Mrs. Charles Reginald Leonard, for her matron of honor. Her bridesmaids will be the Misses Florence Burton, Caroline Leslie Fuller, Genevieve Leland Sanford and Ruth Helen Moller. The flower girls will be Camilla Woodward Livingston and Silvie Livingston.

Mr. Moss will have his brother, Robert T. W. Moss, for his best man. The ushers will be Prescott Foster Huidekoper, Arthur Russell Jones, Francis A. Harding, John K. Hollins, Hugo G. deFritsch, Johnston Livingston, Jr., William Fellowes Morgan, Jr., J. Henry Harper, Jr., Rene La Montagne, Harold W. Brooks, [illegible], Jr., of Boston; Gordon Ware, William A. Hazard, Jr., and Tilden P. Hazard. Master James Bogert Tailer, Jr., a nephew of the bridegroom, will be the ribbon boy.

At Simmons College on May 21 the class in household economics, called by the students the "bride's course," gave a farewell luncheon in compliment to Mrs. Walter C. Cady of Brookline. Mrs. Cady was the only matron of the class.

The WORLD of SOCIETY

I happened to meet Miss Imogene Conland of the College Club the other day and she gave me a list of patronesses for the May dance to take place at the Copley-Plaza on Friday evening. Jefferson Richards is among the prime movers in the smart affair. The patronesses include such well known people as Mrs. William H. [illegible] Odell, Mrs. Carl Watson, Mrs. Frederick A. Leavitt. Miss Conland is a sister-in-law of Professor J. Scott of this city, who was formerly identified with the University of Syracuse

I was surprised to encounter Mrs. George B. Inches in the market district at an early hour the other day. She looked as well "groomed" as she would in the midst of a fashionable reception. Her gown was of royal purple cloth, the short coat trimmed in soutache braid of the same coloring. The collar was of the cloth and covered with a stylish white silk net, embroidered exquisitely in white linen The deep cuffs were of the same idea in the linen. Her hat was a high crowned one of purple straw trimmed with purple ribbon bows. She wore white suede gloves.

The combination of blue and purple, which at one time was considered ridiculous, is quite fashionable this Spring This sudden change was brought to my notice the other afternoon when I met Mrs. John Little, Jr., formerly Miss Schlesinger, a daughter of Mrs. Barthold Schlesinger, and a sister of Mrs. Arthur L. Perrin. Mrs. Little, who is a brunette, wore a stunning creation of dark blue cloth. The skirt of walking length had a deep ruffle of black satin which at the back reached nearly to her knees. The ruffle was edged with purple satin charmeuse. The coat had deep cuffs of black satin, while the collar was a dark shade of purple cloth edged with blue satin. Her hat was black dressed straw of the fashionable low crowned sailor shape. It was trimmed with purple flowers, velvet and ribbon. The most stylish feature of the gown was the deep boa of black and white tulle in box plaited effect which ended in a huge bow and ends of black satin ribbon fully five inches wide.

Miss Mary Curtis of Marlboro street, who is staying in town later than usual this Spring, looked very stunning the other noon when I happened to see her boarding a street car. Her Spring gown was remarkably becoming to her "Burne Jones" type of coloring. It was made of pale gray cloth with a short tailored coat. The deep square collar and cuffs were trimmed with Persian embroidery. Her hat was a dark blue sailor. The very low crown was trimmed with a full band of black and white ribbon. The skirt of the gown was without trimming other than the stitched band at the bottom.

I saw Mrs. Prescott Bigelow of Marlboro street the other afternoon at an informal tea at the Copley-Plaza. She looked almost as young as her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Bigelow, who was in the party. She wore a stunning creation of black and white India silk. The waist was of the loosefitting Russian style and reached nearly to her knees. It was confined with a wide patent leather belt. The sleeves were especially pretty, the deep cuffs being edged with a narrow ruche of white silk net. The neck of the gown was finished with a collar of the same material. She wore a black straw hat of the low-crowned sailor shape, trimmed with black and white satin. The skirt was of walking length and very full.

Mrs. William Endicott of Salem had a stateroom nearly filled with flowers when she sailed on the Franconia the other day for London to visit her daughter. She was attired in a creation of black silk trimmed with black lace. She wore a bunch of violets.

* * *

I happened to run on to Mrs. Frances S. Watson the other day while she was on a shopping expedition, and her chief trouble seemed to be in matching some silk. Mrs. Watson, who was the observed of all observers, had two of her pet dogs along, both of them tiny creatures, one tucked under each arm Mrs. Watson was, as usual, becomingly and attractively gowned, wearing a suit of dark blue, a black hat trimmed with roses and a Japanese throw over her shoulders. It was only a few days later that Mrs. Watson sailed for Europe. She is to spend some time with friends near Paris, and late in May will be joined by Dr. Watson, who will remain abroad but a short time. After his return Mrs. Watson will go to Berlin, and will not return to Boston until September.

Mrs. Watson did much before her departure to help entertain the visiting physicians in Boston. One evening when I saw her she was wearing a most becoming gown of flowered chiffon over white satin, trimmed with brilliants. A large pink rose adorned the corsage.

* * *

I met Mrs. James Lowell Putnam on the street the other day looking charmingly trig in a suit of black, with a smart little black hat perched at just the proper angle. Mrs. Putnam has just returned from a visit to New York, and that may account for the fact that she looked so much smarter than the average Bostonian

Mrs. Putnam is to be in town for a few weeks before going to Bar Harbor, and has planned several hospitalities for the interim. She is one of the very expert tangoers among the matron set, and will be in her element at Bar Harbor, where she does so much entertaining and is always conspicuous among the guests at the Casino.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Chick are spending their honeymoon at the White Sulphur Springs. Virginia. Mrs. Chick was Miss Ruth Agnes French of Brookline.

NEWS of SOCIETY

The anti-suffrage luncheon at the Milton Club Wednesday attracted many well-known society women, and since the tickets read "for anti-suffragists only," it is to be supposed that all of them were firmly opposed to "votes for women." They filled the bright club rooms and heaped the flower-trimmed tables with delicious things to eat. The edibles were supplied by the guests and would have won many masculine votes had they been applied in that direction

After the luncheon Mrs. John Balch, chairman of the committee on arrangements, introduced Mrs. William Lowell Putnam Mrs. Balch wore a gown of hunter's green silk with a small hat of gray and green. Mrs. Putnam was gowned in wistaria crepe, with a small black hat. Mrs. F W Cutter, another member of the committee, also sat on the platform. She wore a golden brown dress and a tiny black hat

Mrs. Putnam is a clever speaker and has a sense of humor After her address the guests strolled about the clubhouse and held informal discussions. Mrs. C Otto Zerrahn wore a suit of blue serge and a flowered straw hat Mrs. J. Lawrence, Jr's suit was of black serge with fine linen collar and cuffs, and a small tailored hat. Mrs. C S. Pierce wore a dark suit with a garden hat Mrs. Lawrence Bullard was gowned in dull green. Mrs. Chickering wore a gown of black charmeuse and a violet toque. Mrs. T J. Lane wore a suit of blue serge with a tan hat. Mrs. L. A. Rogers wore dark blue serge and a green hat Miss Katherine Homans wore a blue cloth suit and a small purple hat. Mrs. E. C Williams wore a suit of black charmeuse and a hat of new yellow. Mrs. De Normandie's suit was black, and her hat was a small black affair with yellow wings. Mrs. Robert Saltonstall wore a suit of dark blue serge and taffeta, with a hat of black straw and moire. Mrs. Ellerton D Whitney wore a dark blue suit and hat to match.

Others who attended were: Mrs. Geoffrey, Mrs. George Wigglesworth, Mrs. Felix Rackeman, Mrs. Charles Amory, Mrs. C. Minot Weld, Mrs. Samuel Johnson, Mrs. H. Gardiner, Mrs. Percy Hodge, Mrs. Stephen Ames, Mrs. W. B. Batchelder, Mrs. J. F Rolles, Mrs. E. C. Bradlee, Mrs. J. S. Bryant, Mrs. Chapelle, Mrs. C. Clark, Mrs. W. E. Church, Mrs. L. Crossman, Miss Cunningham, Mrs Caleb Cunningham, Miss L. F Currier, Mrs. F. W. Cutter Mrs. G Cushing, Mrs. Davis, Miss W. Dudley, Miss W. B. Driver, Miss Gertrude Bert, Mrs. W. S. Field, Mrs. F. M. Barrington, Mrs. B. Gardiner, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. C. A. Hauss, Mrs. W. B. Hurd, Mrs. R. F. Herrick, Mrs. B. F. Harding, Miss C Hartshorn, Mrs. H Howe, Miss B. Hutchinson, Miss Hinckley, Mds. W. P. Hallowell, Mrs. W. H. Hooper, Mrs. H. S. Huntington, Mrs. C. R. Hurd, Mrs. E. James, Mrs. L. Johnson, Miss Jacques, Mrs. W. A. Jackson, Mrs. C. S. Johnson, Mrs. T. P. King, Mrs. H. A. Ladd, Mrs. H. A. Lamb, Mrs. F. D. Leslie, Mrs. E. F. Luther, Mrs. Lord, Mrs. A. Meredith, Mrs. R. W. Morse, Miss Magwire, Mrs. C. W. Parry, Mrs. C. E. Pape, Mrs. S. L. Parsons, Mrs. F. W. Pond, Mrs. M. V. Puree, Mrs. Felix Rackeman, Mrs. P. Reynolds, Miss Robbins, Mrs. J. Russell, Mrs. E. Richardson, Mrs. H. G. Sawyer, Mrs. J. L. Stevens, Mrs. F. D. Southard, Mrs. H B. Sprague, Mrs. R. L. Scarfe, Mrs. F. Stowe, Mrs. W. H. Stone, Mrs. H. E. Sheldon, Mrs. F. Walker, Mrs. W. Warner, Mrs. R. C Watson, Mrs. S. E. D. Wadsworth, Mrs. S. Wentworth, Mrs. G. A. Williams, Miss Wilde, Mrs. C. Whittier, Mrs. C. M. Weld, Mrs. P. B. Weld Watson, Mrs. W. B. Thurbee, Mrs. L. Bullard.

The committee for the luncheon were Mrs. C. Otto Zerahn, Mrs. Philip DeNormandie, Mrs. Percy Hodges, Mrs. Samuel Johnson and Mrs. Benjamen Gardner.

The Professional Women's Club held its annual meeting in Huntington Chambers Tuesday evening. The retiring president, Mrs. Guy Currier, presided. She was gowned in mustard yellow, with a flowered hat. The meeting was well attended by the leading professional women of the city, among them being Miss Caro Colburn in a suit of blue serge and small black hat with pink roses; Miss Genevieve Brady, in smoke brown and a hat trimmed with bird of paradise; Mrs W. H. Clarke, gowned in light blue broadcloth with a small black hat; Mrs. Furfey, in gray cloth and a tulle hat; Miss Evelyn Blair, whose suit was nigger brown and black hat trimmed in buff; Miss Katherine Ricker, in a suit of dark blue serge and hat of the same color; Mrs. R. Faelton, in a black suit and hat

Action was taken upon Mme. Nordica's death. Nordica was an honorary member of the club, and it was decided that a letter of sympathy be sent to her husband. A rising motion of sympathy was also taken. The club choose as delegates to the State Federation at Worcester Miss Clara Marsh, Miss M. H. Brazier and Dr. Ida D. Clapp

As expected, Dr Eliza Cahill was elected president. Later in the evening there was an excellent entertainment of music and readings, as well as recitations by members who marched in the suffrage parade

Tuesday was an interesting day at Le Petit Trainon, when the waltz and one-step contests for novices were held afternoon and evening. Miss Mannix won every dance Her partner in the afternoon was Faunce Whitcomb and in the evening Cornelius Wood, son of President William Wood of the American Woolen Company.

The judges for the 5 o'clock contest were Miss Pauline Chamberlain, William E. Chamberlain, Jr., Miss Grancher and A. A. Schulman, all winners of previous contests at Le Petit Trainon. Miss Grancher, William H Chamberlain, Jr., A. A. Schulman, H. G Barbee and F. E. Danker judged the 10 o'clock event.

Among the well-known people at the Trainon on Wednesday afternoon were Mrs. John T. Linzee, who is one of the most indefatiguable tangoers of her set. Mrs. Harris Livermore, who is a close second, was also present. Mrs. Livermore still retains her slender, girlish figure, and is among the most popular young matrons of her set.

Mrs. Linzee is so slender that I heard some friends telling her that if she continues to tango so strenuously she'll "fade away," but she evidently has no intention of giving up this gay diversion.

The tea which Mrs. L. A. Crossett and Mrs. H. Proctor gave at the Burnap Home Thursday for friends of that institution, was favored by a pleasant afternoon. The big house, set in its wide lawns, is a most attractive place, and appeared at its best with guests strolling through the open rooms and porches. There were several interesting features to the affair, among them a sale of fancy goods. Mrs. N. Converse Grey had charge of the tables. She wore a suit of striped serge with a lace blouse and tan hat. The tables were loaded with pretty silken things, and presided over by Mrs. W. H. McKinney, in blue taffeta and chiffon, with a feathered hat, Mrs. Frank Marshall in a gown of black and white silk, Mrs. E. W. Pierce in black taffeta, Mrs. G H Flint, whose suit was dark serge, worn with a chiffon blouse.

The flower booths were lovely, with flowers given by friends of the home. Mrs. J. O. Foss, in blue serge with a hat of black and red straw, Miss Ethel Rea in a white lingerie, and Miss Miriam Fitch in black charmeuse, had charge of the flowers. There were delicious home-made cakes at another table, where Mrs. G. A. Farlow, gowned in black lace and silk, and Mrs. L. Crossett in taffeta, were in charge. Also many boxes of candy were offered at one of the tables by Mrs. Henry A. Morse, in a dark-blue suit and hat with a pale blue blouse, Mrs. N F. Greeley in black silk and chiffon with white lace, Mrs. H. Chapman, gowned in green silk and chiffon, with a small brown hat, and Mrs. Granville Foss in dark serge and a blouse of cream lace.

In one of the large drawing rooms tea was served at a number of small tables. Mrs. Russell Appleton in a lingerie frock embroidered with green and rose and a hat combining the same colors, poured tea at one end of the large table. Mrs. G. L. Bamfar, gowned in black silk and lavender chiffon with a smart black hat, served ices at the other end Many ladies, interested in the home, received and entertained the guests. Among these, Mrs W. F. Humphrey, who wore a gown of lavender broadcloth with lilac toque, Mrs. E. R. Grabaw in a gown of black taffeta, Mrs. Edward Pierce in a dark suit with a garden hat, and Mrs. H. Proctor in black satin and lace with a small black hat Others present during the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. George Quincy, [illegible] Proctor, Mrs. J. L. Grandin, Mrs J. C. Gray, Mrs. G. A. Farlow, Ms. E. Mason, Mrs. W R. Goodnow, Mrs. C W Perkins, Mrs. Frank Wood, Miss F L. Lavender, Mrs. H. A. Morse. As the Burnap Home is intended only for aged women who have seen better days, it is an object of particular interest to many prominent in society

Art in the form of fancy pottery is the latest fad which has taken hold of society. The exhibition the other day at the North Bennett Street Industrial School attracted much attention Some are wondering whether it is really the work itself which appeals so strongly or the good-looking instructor, E. C. Greener Miss Frances Hunnewell is one of the most promising members of the class, and one of her pieces on exhibition, a large vase in buff tones wreathed in rosebuds, called forth much admiration. Another piece this talented young woman has on exhibition which called forth much admiration was the three-piece urn in dark green done by Mrs. Sturgis.

Among the other well-known members of the class, which is held every Tuesday evening at the North Bennett Industrial School, are Miss Katherine Homans and Miss Helen Chase.

Mlle. Regina Badet, of the Capucines Theatre, Paris, says: "To use Savon Cadum is both a pleasure and a satisfaction. No other soap is so soothing to the skin."

A pure soap revitalizes the skin tissues that have become dormant through neglect or abuse from the use of powders, cosmetics or cheap soap. The safest course in preserving beauty is to keep as close as possible to nature's laws by cleansing the face night and morning with Savon Cadum, the famous French Complexion soap. "Easy-Front" gives the slender woman everything she wants in a corset—light weight, strength, flexibility and up-to-the-minute style.

In material, making and finish, it's a big $5.00 value; but you can't duplicate its splendid service at any price or in any other make.

No. 304 has a low bust, but high enough to get the Nemo "bridge" effect, which prevents all pressure and "digging in."

The wide gores of thin but strong Lastikops Cloth (semi-elastic) cover gastric and abdominal regions, giving the idealized "nature figure" and full, free breathing.

The skirt is long and flexible—modish in the last degree. For slender to medium figures. Fine Steeltex batiste, lightly boned; sizes 19 to 26 $3.00

No. 303 is the same, but nearly "topless"—$3.00.

Imitations, made with the same old heavy, stiff, wear-out-quickly elastics, are practically worthless.

BE SURE IT'S AN "EASY-FRONT"

Other splendid models for slender and medium figures include the new

JOYOUS DAYS FOR ELKS

REVERE'S LODGE TO STAGE 'GIRL FROM BROADWAY'

Miss Lena H. Woolard, who leads the sextette.

Miss Dorothy A. Malone. Miss Lois Loeffler.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights will be banner nights for the Revere Elks, who will present a musical skit, entitled, "The Girl from Broadway," at the Crescent Gardens Theatre, under the direction of Brother Matt Sullivan of the Somerville Lodge of Elks. The proceeds of the show will go to the building and charity funds of the lodge.

The show is one of the brightest and breeziest ever presented at the Beach, and is full of charming and beautiful girls; sisters and daughters of the members—the best of Elks, by the way. Contrary to the usual custom, this show will have three interlocuters, G. Fred Nolan, John F. Doherty, and C. Sumner Benvie, Exalted Ruler. These gentlemen will be in charge one nigh each in the order named.

During the show, twenty-six different dancing numbers will be presented by sextets of beautiful young ladies, assisted by members of the lodge, and the Elks' Babies, two little tots, four and five years respectively.

The cast of characters includes Miss Katherine Crawford, late of the "Follies Company," leading lady; Miss Mildred Chisholm, maid; Mr. Fred Millwood, duke; Mr. Tom Cook, baron; Dr. William Canavan, the rube sheriff; J. Recital at Copley-Plaza

The small ballroom of the Copley-Plaza was the scene of a very appreciative audience Wednesday evening at the pianoforte recital given by the pupils of Miss Mary H. Sheedy.

Miss Sheedy received the guests in the foyer. She looked very charming in a gown of shell pink crepe meteor, en traine, with bodice of soft white lace edged with rhinestone trimming. She was assisted in receiving by her cousin, Mrs. Daniel V. McIsaac, who looked stunning in an evening gown of baby Irish, en traine, with strappings of robin egg blue crepe meteor.

Miss Sheedy was assisted in the program by Mrs. Daniel V. McIsaac, contralto, William Howard, violinist, and Milo Goldstein, cellist, contributed.

The pupils [illegible] exceptionally well, from the smallest little ones up. Master William McIsaac was especially fine.

A coterie [illegible] ushers, including Miss May Doherty, Miss Gertrude [illegible] Margaret Canty, Miss Mollie Sullivan, Miss Catherine [illegible] Guthie, Miss Winifred [illegible] Miss Mary McShane, Miss Sadie Wheeler and Miss Etta Rahe.

MRS. GEORGE B. DOLE ARRANGES DANCE.

Mrs. George B Doyle of Brookline is arranging a dancing party, which will take place in Gardner Hall, No. 693 Washington street, Brookline, Wednesday evening. The proceeds will be devoted to the fund that was raised at the recent Fete aux Fideles, at which she presided over the flower booth.

Her assisting committee will include Mrs. John A. Keane (May Fitzgerald), Mrs. James H Fitzpatrick, Miss Helen Reed, Miss Helen Carney, Miss Stella Sullivan, Miss Ethel Thompson, Mrs. William M. Hogarty, Mrs. William S. McNary, Mrs. William H. Ellis, Jr., and Mrs. Thomas E. Cunningham, Jr.

BRIDES TO FORE IN JUNE

Several Notable Young Women in Boston Circles Arranging Nuptials

PHOTO BY CHAMPLAIN STUDIOS

Miss Daisy Conry, who is to be married on June 17.

With the coming of June there appears in the foreground of the social sphere a number of marriages of fair debutantes of the season. With the young bride-elect this month of roses is a favorite wedding time.

One of the pretty June weddings will be that of Miss Daisy Conry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Conry of Monmouth square, East Boston, whose marriage to William Keane of Jamaica Plain will take place at a nuptial mass in the Church of the Sacred Heart on Wednesday morning, June 17.

Since the announcement of the engagement of Miss Conry many entertainments have been given in her honor. She is the niece of Hon. Joseph A. Conry, Russian consul and director of the port of Boston. She has taken active part in Catholic social and charitable affairs of Greater Boston.

A number of debutantes will be included in Miss Conry's wedding party.

Miss Catherine Horne, daughter of Mrs. John W. Horne of Roxbury has selected the month of June for her marriage. Miss Horne is a popular Smith College girl and the announcement of her marriage in early Spring was greeted with many felicitations. Her marriage to Joseph Burns, who is a graduate of Phillips Andover, Harvard University and Harvard Law School and a member of many clubs of Boston, will take place on June 20. The ceremony will be solemnized by a nuptial mass, followed by a reception at the home of the bride-elect's mother.

Miss Catherine Horne has been an active member of the Cecelian Guild and many other organizations. She has taken a leading part in all the leading Catholic society affairs.

* * *

Another June bride will be Miss Anna Welsh, whose marriage to Edmund Welch will take place on June 10. Miss Welsh has taken an active part in the social and charitable functions of Catholic social circles. Her engagement was announced this Winter at a tea. Miss Welsh is an alumna of Roxbury High School.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURES FOR AFRICAN MISSIONS.

Very Rev. D. J. O'Sullivan, M. A. L. (African Missions of Lyons), has been the guest for two weeks of Rev. P. B. Murphy at the rectory of Our Lady of the Rosary, West Sixth street, South Boston. Today Father O'Sullivan will speak at all the masses in the Church of SS. Peter and Paul, West Broadway. Father O'Sullivan is here in the interest of the African missions. He will give illustrated lectures to raise funds for the cause. He has more than 300 beautifully colored views.

POST GRADUATES OF ACADEMY AT TEA.

The post graduates of the Academy of the Assumption are interesting their friends in a tea which they are arranging to be held Saturday afternoon on the lawn of the academy.

The members of the alumnae find it a pleasant opportunity to renew old acquaintances. Many of them who live out of town will be present.

Expect the Governor

A large whist and bridge party is being given by Mrs. William H. Barter of Winthrop, at Hotel Lenox tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The proceeds will be given to the building fund of the Academy of the Assumption at Wellesley Hills.

Following the bridge tea will be served. Governor Walsh is expected to be present for a little while during the afternoon.

Mrs. Barter will be assisted by a number of young ladies, including her daughter, Miss Cecil Barter, who is a student at the Academy of the Assumption; Miss Anna Murphy, who is a student at the Mary Cliff Convent; Miss Katherine Dowd of Brookline, Miss [illegible] Mahoney and Miss Skaggs of Winthrop.

STATE AUDITOR POPE TO TALK TO WOMAN'S CLUB.

[illegible] Catholic Club of Randolph will meet tomorrow evening in A. O. H. Hall at 8 o'clock. After a short business session the program will consist of an address by the State Auditor, Frank H. Pope, who will take for his subject "Is Life a Tragedy or a Comedy?" a three part chorus by members of the society, and a paper on "A Short History of St. Mary's Parochial School, Stoughton," by one of the alumnae of that school, Miss Katharine M. Jordan. The recent pop concert and ball of the club was a brilliant social affair, and even with the very great expense the society realized the amount of $35.

The club has been very active in charitable work during the present month, the contributions taking the form of "May Baskets" filled with something in the eatable line of a more practical value than candy.

It is planned to have the June 15 meeting take the form of a social. A very enjoyable time was had at the 1913 June social, and there is every indication that the one this year will be fully as enjoyable.

"MY NEW CURATE" IN AID OF BAZAAR.

A very pleasing production of "My New Curate" was produced Thursday evening under the direction of John J. Douglas, in Boston College Hall.

The proceeds are to be given to the table at the coming bazaar of St. John's Church, Roxbury, of which Mrs. Nola T. O'Brien has charge. This affair is one of many functions which are being held for this table.

On Thursday evening a whist will be held in the Guild Hall. Beautiful whist trophies have been donated. Miss Mary Otis will have charge, assisted by a number of the ladies of the parish.

FORESTERS TO HAVE A MEMORIAL MASS.

SS. Peter and Paul Court, M. C. O. F., will hold its annual memorial service in the Church of SS. Peter and Paul, Saturday, May 30. There will be a solemn requiem mass at 9 30. William Jeffers is chairman of the committee.

REGIS CLUB GIRLS TO APPEAR IN "THE MIKADO"

Miss Elizabeth A. McMahon, president of the Regis Club.

The presentation of "The Mikado" by the members of the Regis Club will be witnessed in Leo XIII. Hall, Jamaica Plain, on Wednesday and Friday evenings, May 20 and 22.

The opera is under the personal direction of Miss Alice R. Jordan of Brighton, assisted by Miss Marie Duval of Jamaica Plain, accompanist. The chorus is composed of members of the club, assisted by the young men of the parish, several of whom will appear in leading parts.

This club of young ladies was organized and is being supported by Right Rev. Mgr. Edward J. Moriarty, P. R., who has been in a large measure responsible for the club's success.

The proceeds of the performances will be added to the fund for the Regis Club window in the new St. Thomas' Church.

The entire cast will consist of:

Gaelic League Envoy Here

Diarmuid Lynch, Gaelic League envoy, who is in Boston in the interest of the Irish language movement, received a most enthusiastic reception at the meeting of the Gaelic Alliance in Grand Army Hall last Sunday. At this meeting the Gaelic Alliance contributed $80, its first instalment for the present year.

Letters were read from Dr. Douglas Hyde, and the treasurer for America, Justice Martin J. Keogh.

Mr. Lynch is much pleased and encouraged with his reception in Boston. He will speak at the meeting of the Donegal and the Cork clubs and other Irish organizations this afternoon and evening.

The American finance committee of the Gaelic League are David F. Cohalan, chairman, Martin J. Keogh, treasurer; George J. Gillespie, secretary; James Byrne, W. Bourke Cockran, John Delahunt, Finley Peter Dunne, Robert T. Emmett, Francis P. Garvan, John W. Goff, William J. Kelly, James F. Minturn, Patrick O'Meara, Rev. James W. Power, John Quinn, William F. Sheehan, James Smith, Jr., Denis A. Spellisy.

MEET AT CAMBRIDGE DAY NURSERY.

The members of the conference of Catholic Day Nurseries will meet today at the Cambridge Nursery for the final session of the season.

T. Loring Briggs will speak on the Floating Hospital and its work. Mayor Timothy W. Good of Cambridge will also address the conference.

The conference meets every month in order to talk over the work in connection with the day nurseries of Greater Boston.

The board of directors include Miss Maud M. Rockwell, president; Nicholas Browne, Jr., vice-president; George R. Regan, secretary; Miss Mary A. Morris, treasurer; Mrs. Warren M. Hill, David W. Creed and Edward A. Counhan.

PLANNING FOR BIG JUNE PARTY.

Many entertainments, whists and dancing parties are being arranged by the parishioners of St. Eulalia's Church, South Boston. The events are being held to aid the coming June garden party of the Church.

On Friday evening whist was held under the direction of the women, who are interested in Rev. Jeremiah Driscoll's table at the coming party.

Mrs. Lannigan is arranging a whist party which will take place in Nazareth hall on Friday evening. The proceeds will be given to Rev. John J. Murphy's table. A number of energetic parishioners are assisting in this coming whist.

ROURKE TO ADDRESS SOUTH BOSTON CLUB.

Commissioner of Public Works Louis K. Rourke will address the Men's Club of St. Eulalia's parish, South Boston, tomorrow evening in the headquarters of the organization in Nazareth Hall, O and Third streets, City Point. President John Troy heads the committee of arrangements.

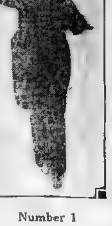
How to Dance the Maxixe

Complete instructions written and illustrated for the SUNDAY AMERICAN by G. Hepburn Wilson, M. B. of the Salon de Danse, New York City — the foremost authority on modern dancing and one of the most brilliant and successful teachers of dancing in the United States

The "Maxixe"



Number 1

The technical description of the Maxixe is quite easy to understand, on account of its use of the old familiar two-step. It would be a waste of time and space to attempt to teach the old two-step in this article. Therefore, understand in this description, I am describing the Maxixe to those readers who know and do the two-step.

The music of the Maxixe is in regular two-step time and it is better to use music having 2—4 meter, rather than that having 6—8. In fact, I advise this dance be danced to a selection known as "Dengozo"* (Columbia Record A-5549) as this music is particularly adapted to the figure and interpretation of the Maxixe.

The character of the music is of South American, hence Spanish origin. The tempo is a trifle slower than the old two-step, in order to give the dancer an opportunity to put more grace into the beautiful and novel positions of the body, arms and hands during the execution of the different figures, the action, rhythm and swinging of the feet being identical with the old two-step. The reader should study the accompanying illustrations carefully in order to note the details in reference to positions of the body, arms and hands. (a) You will note that in many of the figures the lady instead of facing her partner is in a directly opposite position, with her back to her partner. (b) It is also important to note the position of the gentleman's left and the lady's right arm and hand, when in the position of facing each other. The arms are held high and the palms of the hand lying flat against each other as may plainly be seen in referring to illustration No. 2.

FIRST FIGURE

Starting in position (see illustration No. 1) partners one-step EIGHT STEPS, gentleman beginning with his left foot, the lady walking backward starting with her right foot. These eight steps are done slowly and in an upright, firm and decisive manner, with a slight sway of the body from side to side with each step, and with the gentleman's left hand and the lady's right held well up, at least as high as the top of the head or an inch or two above.

Beginning to two-step, the gentleman leads to his left with left foot, the lady to her right with her right foot. Then repeat the two-step to the right, continuing to do the two-step around the room, LEFT SIDE, RIGHT SIDE, etc., always turning TO THE RIGHT. This is continued until you have made the two-step action on each side four times, or eight times altogether.

In doing the two-step action, as the dancer steps out for the first count to each side, an effort should be made TO STEP OUT ON THE HEEL, as this is characteristic of the true Maxixe. It is also important that the bodies of the dancers swing from side to side as far as possible during this two-step action. As the gentleman two-steps to his right side each time, he correspondingly swings his body and the body of his partner in that same direction, his left hand and the right hand of his partner swinging in a curve far up over the heads of the dancers, as illustrated in figure No. 2.

In finishing the eight two-step movements, the gentleman should swing the lady half around into position shown in figure No. 3.

It is exceedingly important that there be no pauses in changing from one figure to the other.

The Dance is akin to a Folk-Dance or program dance, and there is continual motion without any pauses until the end of the dance.

THIRD FIGURE

As the lady and the gentleman two-step to the left, the gentleman is looking over the lady's left shoulder, and then in continuing the two-step movement to the right the gentleman looks over the lady's right shoulder. This step is termed the FLIRTATION STEP.

After this has been performed 4 times in each direction or eight times, the lady draws the gentleman's right hand down around her waist as shown in figure No. 4.

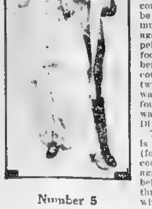
FOURTH FIGURE

In this position the two-step must now be taken all on one side, either in a straight line down the floor or following the line of the largest possible circle of the room. The gentleman now has his right arm around the lady's waist under her right arm, the lady holding the gentleman's right hand with her right hand. The gentleman remains slightly to the left side of the lady so as to enable him to dance forward freely with each foot. The two-step action is taken first with the left foot, the lady also starting with her left foot in this step, then immediately they both step forward with their right feet, using the two-step action. This compels the gentleman to step with his right foot between his left foot and the lady's left foot, and on the second count with this foot a DEEP DIP should be made with the right knee. This step must be repeated at once, beginning again with the left foot forward, compelling each dancer to swing their left foot forward while they are still partly bent down in the dip. This step can be counted one, two, three, four. The one, two being the two-step movement forward with the left foot, and the three, four being the two-step movement forward with the right foot with the DEEP DIP ON THE FOURTH COUNT.



Number 5

The most difficult part about this step is in closely connecting the last count (four), which is the dip, with the first count necessary to begin the action again, as there is no rest at any time, being even counts as follows: One, two, three, four; one, two, three, four, etc., with no rests between the fours and ones.

Illustration No. 4 shows the position the two dancers are in as they come up out of the dip and are both stepping forward on the heel for the first count again. This is termed the RUSSIAN STEP.

After the figure or step has been repeated eight times, the lady then brings with her left hand the gentleman's left hand down around her waist, as shown in figure No. 5.

FIFTH FIGURE

The lady remains in the gentleman's right arm (see illustration No. 5) during the execution of this figure, which is merely a continuance of the two-step movement from side to side in this position for eight more counts. At the end of the eight counts, the lady steps forward with her right foot and meets the gentleman's left foot, taking position as shown in figure No. 6.

SIXTH FIGURE

Now a new action of the feet becomes necessary. Not so new that it is difficult to understand, yet it is quite necessary that you give strict attention to its description. The two-step action described in the other figures has been easy because it covered the REGULAR two-step action; but NOW the two-step action is continued consecutively all on one side. The dancers are now facing each other (see illustration No. 6) the gentleman moves sideways to the left with his left foot, the lady to the right with her right foot, dragging the other foot along on each second count, i. e., one, drag, one, drag, one, drag, one, drag, eight times, the gentleman going to the left continually, the lady going to her right continually. This should be done as smoothly as possible and will take the dancers quite a distance around the room while the motions executed by the body and arms are completed. The bodies should sway from side to side or from the direction they are going toward the direction they are coming from, and vice versa, slowly and smoothly. The arms may be held out at arms length to the sides, with palms of the hands flat together, or describing a circle with each hand passing up over the head and down past the face of the dancers following the circle until the arms are again extended. Repeat this slowly and smoothly four times. Then slowly and gracefully place the arms and hands in the position shown in figure No. 6, which places the lady's two hands under her chin and the gentleman's two hands underneath the lady's hands, and in this position continue going along the floor in ONE DIRECTION, swinging the bodies as before described slowly and smoothly. The hands may now be slowly raised into the position as shown in figure No. 7.

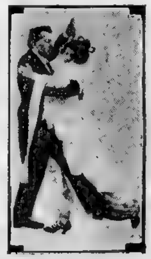
SEVENTH FIGURE

The two dancers are still facing each other, but as the gentleman and lady keep traveling to the gentleman's left the lady makes four SLOW TURNS OR PIVOTS, turning outward to her right (see figure No. 7), finishing face to face in position as shown in illustration No. 1.

Then the first eight steps as described at the opening of the dance are again repeated preparatory to performing the closing figure of the dance, which is done as follows:

EIGHTH FIGURE

The lady steps back with her left foot, one count, then steps back again with the right foot, at the same time giving a slight turn of the body to the right, on the second count, immediately lifting up the same or right foot and placing it again forward, facing her partner on third count, throwing the left foot back and up as shown in figure No. 8, at the same time raising on the right toe (fourth count). Repeat this four times, then the gentleman pivots the lady one turn, courtesies, and the dance is over.



Number 8

Pilgrimage of Granadas

The annual Spring pilgrimage of Granada Caravan No. 3, Order of The Alhambra, is set for Tuesday night, at Lawrence Encampment Hall, No. 724 Washington street. The ceremonies will begin at 7:30 and will not be concluded until after midnight. There will be a large class of candidates, for it is probable there will not be another Alhambra degree until after the warm weather.

Grand Commander Walter A. White will have general charge of the ceremonies and he will be assisted by a degree corps of about forty, choir, orchestra and Moorish patrol. This large corps is necessary because of the spectacular and elaborate character of the ceremonies, illustrating the triumph of the Christians in Spain over the Moors, intrenched in the armed palace of The Alhambra, and the early struggles and victories of Christopher Columbus.

The hall will be decorated with the symbols and colors of the order of The Alhambra, and at the close of the work the caravan and new members and guests will sit down to a banquet to be followed by a vaudeville show. The banquet will be in charge of Steward J. B. Kavanagh and the "Oasis" under the direction of Master of the Oasis Michael W. Costello.

The principal characters in the degree corps will be as follows:

Grand commander, Walter A. White; knight commander, Dr. [illegible] Henry B. Ma[illegible] [illegible] William J. [illegible] J. Harty, [illegible] of Granada [illegible] saint of the [illegible] John J. Kee[illegible] Sexton, chief [illegible] Isabella, Thomas [illegible] L. Flynn [illegible] William H. [illegible] Schaeffer, herald, John T. Somers; recorders, John H. Duffy and James E. Monahan; chief medical officer, Dr. D. T. O'Keefe; Christian knights, Edward L. White, Henry A. Tougas, Thomas J. McInerney, Joseph McGreevey, James J. Clancy, James L. Foley, Theodore Fennessey, Bernard J. Killion, Thomas F. Glynn, J. J. Sullivan; Moorish patrol, W. R. Connolly, Joseph W. Hener, J. J. Casey, William Wallace, William J. Howe, Arthur P. McCaffrey, James J. McCarthy, Frank Wellbrack, Thomas Kavaney, Rudolph Heon and Albert Gunning; Sheik William H. Gleeson, Alcalde, Thomas McKenna; master of ceremonies, George F. Tegan; musicians, E. A., John M. and Albert Schell, Raymond and Waldemar Vaffer, Harold McKenna and Francis A. Duffy; sentinel of tower, George Hillery; sentinel of desert, James F. McKenzie.

A number of committees will have charge of the various details of this annual ceremonial session as follows:

Hall—Alexander C. Chisholm, Joseph C. Kickham, Francis Delay, Herbert A. Kenney, Robert A. Allen and John C. McCoole.

Decorations and electrical effects—Henry C. Schaeffer, Walter J. Burke, George L. Callahan, John F. [illegible], Richard McGee, Peter B. McNally and Mortimer A. Toomey.

Hold all answers until you have the entire set. No answers will be considered if sent in before the publication of the last picture.

If anyone has hesitated to enter the American's $4,000 Picture Puzzle Contest, thinking one's chances are less because of a late start, right now—today—is the time to get rid of that idea. One of the best things about this contest is the rule, "Anyone can enter at any time." There is no reason why "the early bird" in this contest should garner the big cash prizes any more easily than the later bird, for no answers can be sent in until after the last picture is printed. And even then several weeks will be allowed contestants to arrange and review sets before submitting. When you consider that almost half of the pictures are still to be published you will see there is more than ample time for you to obtain the back numbers and have all the puzzles solved before the time for sending them in comes round. You can get all back pictures from

The American Promotion Dept., 5 Winthrop Square, Boston.

For 1c for each daily picture and 5c for each Sunday picture. Mail orders will be filled promptly when accompanied by return postage. Answer lists are free. Now is the time to start.

HAD 'PANSY' WHIST
FENWAY BRIDGE CLUB CLOSING PLEASANT SEASON

Mrs. Joseph E. Cahill, secretary of the Fenway Bridge Whist Club, who planned novel program with most charming features for the "Pansy" whist at her home, beautiful favors being given in a most entertaining manner.

Mrs. Joseph E. Cahill of Roxbury, secretary of the Fenway Bridge Club, was hostess to the members of the club at her home Thursday evening. The affair was in the nature of a pansy whist and this flower was the keynote of the decorations in the drawing and dining rooms.

After a pleasant evening of bridge the women adjourned to the dining room where they partook of a very pleasing luncheon. Unique little place cards marked the place of the members at the tables. Extending over the table was a beautiful basket of pansies. In the middle of the table was a large favor basket, from which extended violet and white satin ribbons. At a signal the women pulled the ribbons and at the end of them they found suitable favors to mark the occasion. Each woman was presented with a corsage bouquet of pansies.

The members of the club include: Mrs. John F. Sullivan of Jamaica Plain, president, Mrs. Joseph E. Cahill secretary; Mrs. John Brown, Mrs. Austin A. Cannon, Mrs. Joseph Ochs, Mrs. Michael F. Hunt, Mrs. John J. O'Brien and Miss Anna Reynolds.

Mrs. Austin Cannon will be the next hostess. For Thursday, May 28 the members of the club have planned to give a banquet in the Quincy House as a farewell party, closing the festivities of a very enjoyable season.

LYNN CHURCH PLANS PARISH LAWN PARTY.

The annual parish lawn party of St. Patrick's Church, Lynn, will be held on the church grounds on Light street, June 27, and Mrs. Thomas Condon and Mrs. Samuel Whooley will have charge of the committees.

The young ladies of the parish will give a dancing party in Father Mathew Hall, Friday evening, May 29 to raise funds to defray the expense of illuminating the church grounds. The committee is the Misses Margaret McLean, Margaret Herrity, Ethel La Vengle, Catherine McGovern, Isabelle Gentlemen, Margaret Donovan, Catherine Keenan, Mary Coppinger, Annie McFadden, Letitia McGee, Mary Ruth, Agnes Ryan, Gertrude Ryan, Mary Smith, Gladys Chase, Abbie Reardon, Annie McGorry, Josephine Snell and Catherine Cogan.

* * *

The Fortnightly Bridge Club was most pleasantly entertained by Mrs. Charles A. Newell of Dorchester at her home on Monday last. Bridge trophies were awarded to Mrs. Charles A. Newell and Mrs. Frank W. Lavery as highest scorers, following which a collation was served. Mrs. John Shinners of Savin Hill will entertain at her home on Monday afternoon, May 25. Mrs. Shinners will be the last hostess of the season. A business meeting will follow the regular bridge, at which plans will be started for an outing of the club some time in June.

From Easter Sunday until the month of roses draws to a close, marriage and giving in marriage leads all other ceremonies in popularity True, weddings go merrily on through all the months of the year, but this is the season especially devoted to them.

Once the day has been set, then the question of clothes is the all-absorbing topic. If it is to be a large wedding with a bevy of attendants, there will be many gay little meetings, where over the teacups the bridesmaids' frocks are planned.

Never before has Dame Fashion been more prodigal of her dainty styles appropriate for just such occasions. Panniers, puffs and ruffles seemed designed especially for the pompadour silks and cobwebby laces that will go into the construction of these frocks.

* * *

At many of the recent fashionable weddings the bride's attendants chose gowns of silk and lace or tulle combined The shepherdess style is very popular, and many charming frocks were developed in this style. One in particular looked extremely striking on a willowy blonde as she swayed down the aisle in the bridal procession. A soft pompadour taffeta was used in the bouffant tunic drapery over the hips. The corsage was a clever combination of the silk and embroidered tulle. A wide fitted girdle of the silk gave a pointed bodice effect in the front, crossed toward the back and came down over the right shoulder in bretelle fashion. The skirt proper was formed by three deep flounces of the embroidered tulle. Dainty bunches of roses caught here and there on the lace and silk gave a festive air. With this costume was worn a charming plaque hat. The crown was entirely of forget-me-nots, while a frill of the lace drooped a little over the face A bridle of blue ribbon encircled the chin, and the young woman carried an adorable shepherd's crook.

To the bride, naturally the gown that takes precedence over all others is the bridal robe. There was a time when costume bade that ivory satin be the only material used in its construction. This year, however, she may have the choice of many materials. Taffeta will probably be chosen by many, though for a Summer wedding soft mulls, embroidered or plain are very effective.

* * *

Where formerly the neck must be high and the sleeves long, and a train never dispensed with, this year she may revel in a beautifully cut decollette; her skirt, if she so wishes, may be trainless and the sleeves short. Simplicity and elegance are the characteristics most desired in the wedding gown and for this reason the style chosen is usually simple, depending upon the touches of rare lace for decoration

* * *

Next in importance to the bridal gown comes the veil. What the gown itself lacks in fullness is more than made up for in the veil. This season it may be very voluminous. Tulle rondled with a filet of orange blossoms, tulle edged with lace; or, if the bride is among the fortunate few, rare laces are mainly used in its construction. In the laces needle point is the most coveted and the lace mylady most often chooses.

* * *

There are many accepted ways for the arrangement of the veil. The cap effects are very popular, probably because they are so universally becoming. If the fair bride possesses a wealth of hair and does not wish to conceal her crowning glory, the tulle or lace may be caught into a stiff ruche toward the back of the head and from there fall gracefully over the shoulders. The omnipresent orange blossom has lost none of its charm, and few veils but have a touch of it somewhere. Many of the cap effects have wings of lace wired to a lace-covered bandeaux, edged with a trailing garland of orange blossoms If the veil is lace of a beautiful pattern, it is often arranged in a way to show most effectively the design of the lace. Especially is this true of the lovely bridal veils handed down from generation to generation.

* * *

Planning the trousseau for the early Summer bride is a much simpler matter than for the little lady who chooses October or November for her nuptials. Then her costumes must be planned with the thought of elaborate Winter affairs.

* * *

At this season of the year the fashions are settled, the shops are overflowing with beautiful summery materials, and only the needs of the next three months must be considered. Since most of the Summer evenings will be spent in the whirls of the tango, frocks, appropriate for the dance, will be absolute necessities. Nothing will make prettier dance frocks than the sheer materials the shops are showing now. Organdy, which is assured of a wide popularity for early Summer wear, will be good, while voile, handkerchief linen and chiffon cloth make charming gowns. These can all be cleaned, most of them can be put into the tub, so they are by no means an extravagance. For more formal occasions taffeta and lace or taffeta and tulle in combination will be very smart The lovely pompadour taffetas that are shown this Spring are delightfully girlish, and the blending of color in all of them is extremely good.

* * *

For morning wear the bride will need several skirts of white materials. Golfine is an admirable material, rich looking for a cotton cloth and splendid for wear with a sport coat in colors. Pique, linen or any of the new rough surfaced materials so fashionable this Spring will make splendid separate skirts.

* * *

For wear with the skirts, a quantity of blouses will not go amiss. If she is the type that can carry off the mannish styles, then several of the smart waists with the stiff winged collars, stiff cuffs and fetching black [illegible] must be hers. These are the smartest things of the season, and on a girl who wears tailored things well, they will be stunning.

* * *

The going away suit is, of course, of supreme importance, since many of her waking hours the first few weeks may be spent in it. This year she may vary the style and instead of a coat to the suit have one of the fetching long capes. These are worn almost entirely in Paris, and New York is rapidly accepting them. They may be long, short or medium. Some have the little vest that can be detached, others fasten and are held in place by means of the waistcoat bands, that cross in front and fasten in the back They may be thrown over one shoulder in true brigand fashion, which of course adds to the smart effect.

* * *

One very stunning suit appropriate for the bride on her trip was of deep blue gabardine—and this blue, by the way, is most fashionable—with a Roman stripe girdle and Japanese collar which flared away from the shoulders. A long box-plaited tunic hung almost to the edge of the extremely tight underskirt of the Roman stripe. A chic little hat of lacquered straw with a perfect mob of lacquered birdies fluttering from the crown completed a most effective costume.

* * *

And this brings us to the most interesting of all subjects—hats. The bride cannot possibly have too many styles of head covering, for this is the season of varieties. She must have a Georgette sailor in the lacquered straw for wear with her faille suit, a flowered sailor or turban for the afternoon stroll in her more severe Summer clothes, and for the lingerie creation a leghorn or lace crin, piled high with blossoms and dainty ribbon arrangements on the bandeaux.

* * *

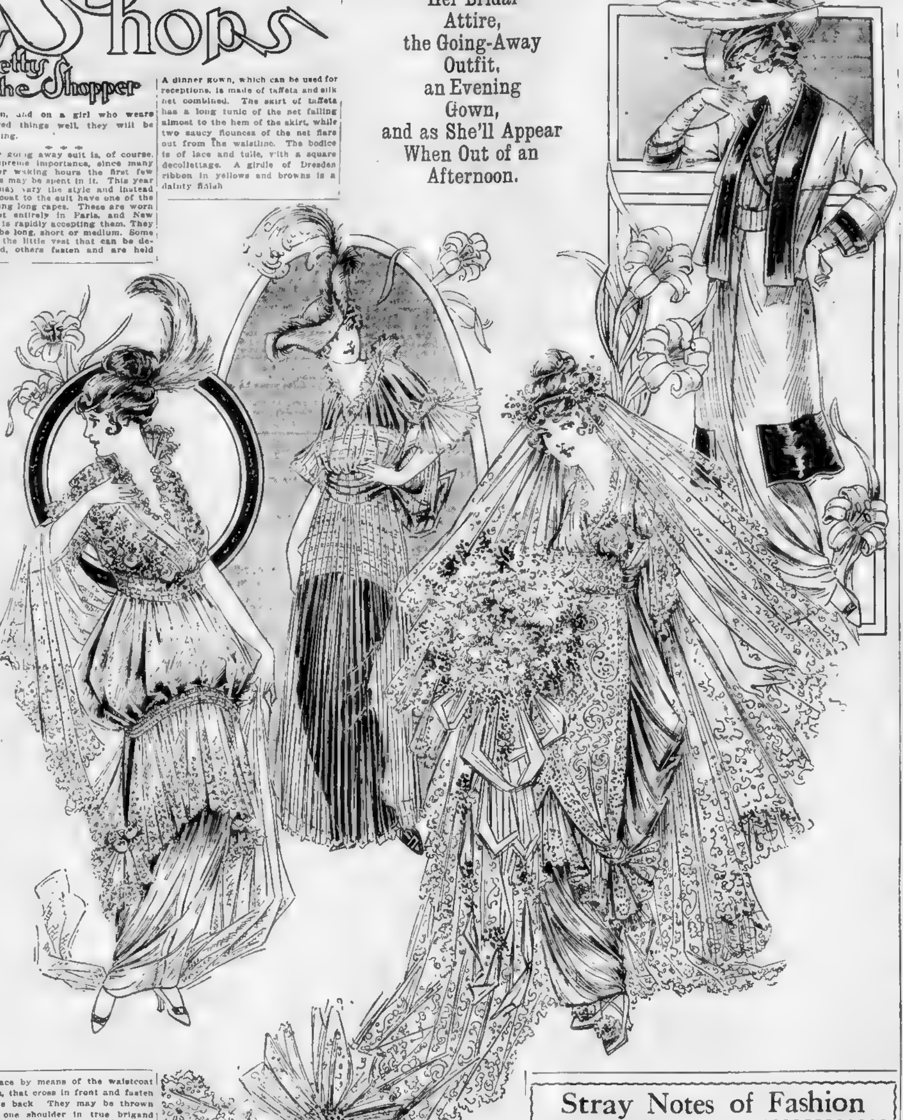
The bridal lingerie and negligees will be made largely of crepe de chine. This is by far the most satisfactory material to choose, and, since it launders beautifully, has a value all its own. Brassieres, camisoles and combinations are filmy, airy trifles of net and tulle and lace for the trousseau. She will need a lot of this dainty stuff for the more frivolous dressing. For her morning clothes real tailored undergarments, made of fine materials but without trimming, are the newest Parisian dictation. These come in the softest of flesh tints and pinks. Strange that the colors are so subdued, for Paul Poiret is said to be responsible for the fashion, and we do not think of him as a lover of quiet colors.

* * *

Bridge gowns and reception gowns will be necessary for the newly married woman. The number of these she will need depends upon the amount of entertaining she will do. A dinner gown, which can be used for receptions, is made of taffeta and silk net combined. The skirt of taffeta has a long tunic of the net falling almost to the hem of the skirt, while two saucy flounces of the net flare out from the waistline. The bodice is of lace and tulle, with a square decollettage. A girdle of Dresden ribbon in yellows and browns is a dainty finish

How June Bride Dresses

Her Bridal Attire,
the Going-Away Outfit,
an Evening Gown,
and as She'll Appear When Out of an Afternoon.



Will It Be a Tricionne?

Millinery is really taking itself seriously. From a few stray models of mid-Summer fluffiness exhibited to wear in some far-away Southern resort we are come to an avalanche of models brought forward for our viewing suitable for wear right now, and including all sorts and types of straws and lace hats which will be worn when the bluebirds come and from there on.

* * *

Surely this season the woman with a hard face to fit will rejoice with the one who can "wear anything," for hats, like shoes and dresses, must be carefully fitted to the face and be selected with great discretion in order to insure a fashion harmony in one with the costumes in vogue

* * *

Styles and types are all relatively confined to rather small shapes.

Turbans are greatly to the fore, and are being displayed made of a myriad of materials and in great diversity of shape.

* * *

Not the least important are the triconnes. Lewis, the prince of millinery designers, has shaped a triconne, which we illustrate and which is so diverting in shape and so fascinating in style we wonder if we are not permitted to say of it, "When is a triconne not a triconne?" for while its corners are three, and its swirl the unmistakable triconne, yet Lewis has given it a most unusual twist and to such an effect we are frankly perplexed, but not disagreeably so

Its trimming consists of a single cockade, and very properly so, in fact, such a hat as this could be becomingly worn sans any trimming at all.

* * *

Black and white ribbon arranged in a spiral-like wheel is used for the cockade, which is not placed on the brim, but nestles retiringly against the crown.

* * *

In this hat, as in many another of this season's newest models, an especial style distinction is provided in the swirl of the crown or of the brim.

Many of this season's newest models are not even dependent upon trimming accessories, the swirl and shape of the brim being so distinctive as to make the question of further adornment almost superfluous.

Stray Notes of Fashion

The new crepons are in the market, woven especially to meet the style requirements of the new coat suits.

So similar are these crepons to the old-fashioned homespuns that, were it not for their fairylike lightness of weight compared to the heaviness of the homespun, one would be easily deceived, as the weaves are identical

To take a homespun weave, of [illegible] set-squared designs produce it in an exceedingly light weight and then crinkle it in crepon effects, is exactly what the French designers have required of manufacturers.

In consequence, we shall be able to [illegible] this season, in cotton goods alone, lovelier weaves, more durable than before, in greater variety, and [illegible] wide sequence of colors.

* * *

Once more the white veil has returned in favor—indeed, it never goes quite out of fashion, for it has a subtle and attractive quality. The new varieties are nearly all made of tambour lace in delicate patterns, some with needle run flowers and sprays worked all over them, others [illegible] only a narrow border along the lower edge. White net, with a plain silk run hem, and other makes of fine white lace are also seen, and these white veils with black hats with excellent results.

* * *

One of the features of the present season is the preference for beige and other Quaker tints in costumes for the street, contrasting agreeably with the futurist eccentricities. For several years black was the favorite wear, then came dark blue, dark green with the relief of bright crimson or tomato. Now we are to have neutral tints, but in the softest and many smart women are wearing most supple of materials, such as voiles crepes and later on zephyrs and grenadines.

There is no doubt that pale gray is very becoming to many women, and, besides, it can always be relieved with color. A very charming gray woolen material is made up over white batiste with the merest possible panier effect on both sides. The blouse accompanying it is in ninon of the same shade of gray, and the coat matches the skirt with long revers in white pique. This is one of the coats which is not intended to meet across the chest; consequently the dainty front of the blouse is visible. Pique collars and revers will be much seen on serge and cloth coat and skirt suits.

* * *

Skirts are tighter and trains are small and narrow.

There is a new skirt, however, which is quite likely to find favor. This is the jupe-culotte, which, made in rich and soft charmeuse, forms a very graceful underskirt to an over dress of gold fishnet, having each mesh studded with small pearls at its four corners Bodices are only touched with the heavier material, which serves to relate the transparency of the upper part, and with this skirt the corsage is of the gold fishnet studdied and embroidered with pearls. Brilliants form almost a fringe on a skirt of net, for the whole of the top of it, which confines the form of the wearer just a trifle, is one immense butterfly, while the corsage is also similarly decorated.

For Milady's Wardrobe

Cotton duvetyn promises to be very popular as a Summer fabric. Though the Summer weave is said to be more durable than that worn this Winter, it is almost identical in appearance and would seem a little hot for July or August weather. The smartest combination is a white duvetyn skirt and colored coat of the same material

* * *

Sulphur and blue is a popular combination. Girdles of sulphur moire go beautifully with a navy blue suit

* * *

The hip sash, growing lower and lower every day, is a new Persian influence that promises to dominate the girdle effects for Summer and Fall wear.

* * *

A gradual lengthening of the waist line has been evident for some time. This should delight the girl of slender figure, whose long waist has always been her pride and which has been sadly concealed by the fashions of the past few years.

* * *

Those seers who forsee the styles a season or two before their arrival in our midst predict that the straight plaited skirt will be the accepted style for Fall wear.

* * *

One of the most fashionable shades for the afternoon frock is a stone gray, called pierre gray. It is very light, almost suggesting an oyster white. This shade is very smart in the suede glove. These gloves when short are drawn up over the edge of the coat sleeve.

Laced boots with uppers of pierre gray suede are much worn this Spring on the boulevards of Paris.

4TH ROSPIGLIOSI PRINCE WINS AN AMERICAN BRIDE

Engagement of Miss Laura Stallo, Heiress, to Carlo Recalls Three Other Romances.

Special Cable to the Boston American.

ROME, May 16.—The flutter caused in society circles here by the announcement that Miss Laura MacDonald Stallo, daughter of the late Cincinnati oil magnate, is engaged to marry Prince Carlo Rospigliosi, has not yet subsided.

This is owing [illegible] to the fact that nobody but a few intimates of the Rospigliosi family knew of the attachment between the American heiress and the fifth son of Prince Rospigliosi.

The announcement has also caused [illegible] to [illegible] Grand Hotel where [illegible] staying, and [illegible] leave for the Riviera owing to alleged [illegible] attacks of "illness." [illegible] Stallo arrived at the [illegible] Duchess Torlonia as [illegible] suspected her [illegible] pledged to the [illegible] the commander of the [illegible]

GIRL HAD MANY SUITORS.

Carlo called, as did many [illegible] fash[illegible] all [illegible] American girl with equal [illegible] that [illegible] that [illegible] could accuse her of showing partiality in favor of Prince [illegible]gliosi. The betrothal was announced so unexpectedly that local folks are keenly curious to know how it was brought about.

[illegible] is no doubt, however, that Duchess of Torlonia is responsible [illegible] Rome with another [illegible] American hostess, destined [illegible] wealth and accomplishments [illegible] place in local society.

[illegible] the marriage of Miss Stallo [illegible] de Rospigliosi, the [illegible] of which is one of the oldest [illegible] houses, will hold the record for the largest number of alliances with American women.

FOURTH AMERICAN MATCH.

Miss Stallo will be the fourth American to marry a Rospigliosi. First was Miss Mary Reid, the noted wife of Colonel Parkhurst of Boston, who married the late Prince Joseph Rospigliosi. Miss [illegible] Bronson of New York next married Prince Giobatta, and Miss Mildred Hazeltine, also of New York, married Prince Ludovico.

Of the three marriages only one [illegible] proved successful—that of Miss Bronson to Prince Giobatta.

Prince Joseph's marriage to Miss Reid was purely a love affair, but the [illegible] American widow was [illegible] recognized as a Rospigliosi [illegible] was she admitted to local society on account of her divorce, which precluded a religious marriage with the Prince.

Since the Prince's death last Summer the Princess has not been to Rome, very much preferring Paris [illegible]

COUPLE DRIFTED APART.

[illegible] Mildred Hazeltine met with even a worse fate. For several years Prince Ludivico seemed devoted to her. One day, however, something happened, the real nature of which was never divulged. Some say it was a case of too much [illegible] others that the Princess got tired of paying her husband's debts.

The couple drifted slowly apart until one day they separated, the Princess returning to New York and the Prince resuming his law practice here.

Society, however, winks when speaking of Mildred Rospigliosi and her husband. It is said that they still love each other and that many a Swiss trysting place could tell of secret meetings between the couple.

Some even go so far as to say that a reconciliation is not improbable, owing to the fact that the Prince leads a model life and seems to have taken a real interest in his [illegible]

PRINCE CARLO IS THRIFTY.

[illegible] one of the most [illegible] enterprising of Prince [illegible] He has never been known as a professional society man, but has rather shunned the life of leisure which so many young nobles lead.

[illegible] turn of mind and [illegible] family fortune was not [illegible] to keep them all Carlo [illegible] for in Italian [illegible] remained there [illegible]

His [illegible] Stallo was not [illegible] dental. It is known that the Duchess Torlonia worked a good deal to convince the beautiful American girl that she and the Prince were made for one another.

Now it is being asked how many more American girls will marry into the Rospigliosi family.

As there are seven more [illegible] opportunity further [illegible] colossal fortune of the Rospigliosis with American [illegible] is apparent.

Duchess of Marlborough Dispels Gloom

Plans Gorgeous Ball at Sunderland House

Countess Warwick Writes of London Society

Special Cable to the Boston American.
By THE COUNTESS OF WARWICK

LONDON, May 16.—Despite the visit of the King and Queen of Denmark, who have been here all week and who naturally are the recipients and [illegible] of much entertaining, the London season is beginning in a somewhat dull fashion.

No doubt there are reasons for this. American hospitality is named as one cause. It takes American hostesses to galvanize the London social season, and this year they seem to be unusually quiet.

So, too, are the famous English hostesses, but this can be accounted for by an ominous budget and the unsettled situation.

Although court mourning for the late Duke of Argyll is suspended while the Danish royal visitors are here, it goes into effect again immediately, and, on the strength of this, many hostesses have gladly seized the opportunity of withdrawing dance and other invitations.

There are, of course, exceptions, notably that of the Duchess of Marlborough, who steps into the breach and announces the Sunderland House ball for today a week.

Lady Cheylesmore, too, gave a rather smart cotillon last night in honor of the coming to age of her eldest son. Lady Cheylesmore, who, of course, is the sister of Mrs. French Vanderbilt, gathered around her some well known people; albeit the party was a small one as London balls go.

Lady Portarlington and Lady Oranmore were among the notable women who attended and Andre de Fouquierese, the well known French Beau Brummell, was prominent among the men present.

Mrs. Francis Leggett's small dance for her debutante daughter was very smart, being attended by three Ambassadors, but small dances don't make a successful season any more than a single swallow makes a Summer.

This is a trifling list for mid-May, but it is to be hoped the Duchess of Roxburghe and Lady Granard will come forward later on and help the season along with some of their fine dinners.

As I have said, however, the social spirit seems to be lacking this year and many of the rich and hitherto foremost hostesses are getting out of their scheduled entertainments on the plea the Duke of Argyll's death puts them in mourning.

Then there's Covent Garden, which, so far this season, has not been the success hoped for. Many attribute this to the fact that, for the greater part of the evening, the theatre is in comparative darkness, due to the exciting requirements of Wagner, and especially of "Parsifal."

"What is the use of going to the opera when the place is in darkness?" is the question put forward by many women who merely attend for the purpose of showing their gowns and their jewels.

I'm afraid there is a lot of truth in this, and it brings me to an interesting point. I am often asked if our American hostesses are really musical and whether they share to the full their guests' enjoyment of the rich musical treats they provide in the shape of receptions at which the world's greatest singers often appear.

It is a question I shouldn't care to answer offhand, for the social and musical aspects of these functions are hard to disentangle. But there are some American women living in London who, undoubtedly, are very musical.

The Countess of Warwick, who writes of London society for the Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

First and foremost I should place Lady Randolph Churchill. She is not only a subscriber to the Covent Garden opera and the Russian season at Drury Lane, but she understands the full significance of everything she hears and is one of those who go to the opera really to enjoy it.

Lady Randolph plays the piano beautifully and could make a fortune as a professional musician if she decided to turn her gift to commercial account. Her playing in public is quite a rare event, however, and limited to the service of charity. Her sisters, Mrs. Morelon Frewen and Mrs. Jack Leslie, are also extremely musical.

Lady Arthur Paget, who was Minnie Stevens of New York, is another American who is a real lover of music and makes a feature of musicales at her beautiful home in Belgrave square.

So, too, is the Duchess of Marlborough, and also Lady Craven. The last named has become increasingly rich through the death of her father, Bradley Martin, but her entertainments can hardly be more lavish in the future than they have been in the past.

I was talking the other day to an eminent politician about the democratic tendencies of our time and he was eloquent in advancing a plea for the London season.

"If it did no more than to bring the Americans," he said, "it would be worth keeping up as a commercial asset, and on that account alone."

Tradesmen, restaurateurs, hotel proprietors, theatre and opera managements and a host of others would find themselves deprived of their best asset if the Americans did not come over.

"They have so much money and spend it so freely that all London is in some form or other, their debtor."

To return to Covent Garden for the moment. The advent of Enrico Caruso, who made his reappearance last night brought together the first real smart audience of the season. The accompanying display of beauty and jewels, in the brilliantly lighted theatre, provided an eloquent, though sordid, reply to the social failure of Wagner.

I have just heard that, in consequence of court mourning, neither the Queen nor Princesses will go to Epsom or Derby Day, which is Wednesday a week, but it is expected King George will be present at both the Derby and the Oaks, which will be run the following Friday.

I forgot when writing of Lady Paget to mention the persistent rumor which one hears that her distinguished husband, Sir Arthur Paget, who has been so much to the front in the Ulster business, will before long receive a peerage.

Such a report sounds improbably on its face, but it is repeated in quarters usually so well-informed that many think there may be something in its after all.

A wealthy American, in the person of Mr. Eben Jordan of Boston, has just taken Drummond Castle in Perthshire for the shooting season. Drummond Castle, which belongs to Lord Ancaster, husband of the popular American, Eloise Breese, has magnificent preserves, and Mr. Jordan, whose devotion to real music has made him many friends here, may look forward to some excellent sport.

Among the interesting young people who arrived in town this week for the season are the Hon. Oliver and Mrs. Brett. Mr. Brett is the elder son and heir of Lord Essher who, during the regime of the late King Edward, was perhaps closer to the throne than anyone else.

He is a manly young fellow and most devoted to his wife, who was, of course, Miss Antoinette Hecksher of New York prior to her marriage in 1912. They have a little son, Lionel, born last year.

Society also welcomed back to its fold this week Mrs. John Astor, who returned from New York with her daughter, Miss Alice, where she went to attend the wedding of her son Vincent.

Mrs. Astor is always persona grata wherever she chooses to go here by reason of her real charm and personality, to say nothing of an intellectuality all her own, a really rare combination in this capricious age.

Another arrival is the Hon. Cecil Bingham, who has been abroad yachting since early Spring. The former Mrs. Chauncey of New York, who is noted for her entertainments, lost no time after returning to Hertford street in planning several parties, one of which was a boy and girl dinner, held last night. Like Lady Paget, Mrs. Bingham married a distinguished soldier, General Bingham, having charge of the troops at Canterbury.

Lady Suffolk, tired already of the London season, has gone to the continent accompanied by her husband, after having seen her niece, Lady Irene Curzon, safely launched on the troublous seas of society.

Paris Charity Has a Devotee in Mrs. A. Duer

Former Mrs. Mackay Is Working for Benefit of French Women and Children.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, May 16.—The cause of charity has a new devotee in Mrs. A. Duer, formerly Mrs. Clarence Mackay. Having settled down in her Paris home since getting her divorce, she has found occupation and is interesting herself in French charitable movements for the benefit of women and babies, being assisted in these activities by Dr. Joseph A. Blake.

Mrs. Duer is also faithfully attending [illegible] lectures at the American Girls' Club and identifying herself with all good works in which Americans are concerned.

Elsie Janis Gets 4 Capital Calls

Will Sing in Berlin, Paris, Rome and Vienna.

LONDON, May 16.—Elsie Janis, whose wonderful success in the revue at the Palace is still the talk of the town, has received offers to appear in music halls in Berlin, Vienna, Paris and Rome—and given enthusiastic affirmative answers to all four.

Already she speaks French and German fluently and is now studying Italian. Prior to her return to New York next Fall, immediately following the end of her engagement at the Palace, she will make a quick tour of the Continent, playing fortnight engagements in the four cities named.

Miss Janis's decision was the result of the advice of Charles Frohman, who was primarily responsible for her receiving the offers.

Noted Toronto Choir Will Tour Continent

President Parkes of Mendelssohn Society Welcomed in Germany.

BERLIN, May 16.—H. G. Parkes, president of the Mendelssohn choir of Toronto, which will make an extensive tour of Europe next season, after a series of performances in New York and Boston, has arrived here to arrange preliminaries for the choir's appearances in Germany.

Leading conductors here have warmly welcomed the idea of a visit from the transatlantic choral body and are putting all possible facilities in Mr. Parkes' way.

In Berlin the choir will have the assistance of the famous Philharmonic Orchestra.

Paris Men to Wear Beards of Many Hues

Poet's Blue Mustache is Startling. Green Whiskers for Poiret.

PARIS, May 16.—Colored beards for men are coming into fashion in Paris. The young poet, Armand Delys, who was invited to attend a soiree given by a well-known painter, created a sensation by turning up in a dark blue mustache.

Paul Poiret, the dressmaker, is reported to be among the Parisians adopting the new fad. He intends to dye his close-cropped beard bottle-green, after the fashions of the Assyrian kings.

British Rulers Are Devoted to Children

Spend Much Time With Younger Members of Their Family.

LONDON, May 16.—It is questionable if there is any royal household in the world where parental duty is so much observed as it is by King George and Queen Mary. When not engaged in affairs of state King George spends a lot of time with the younger members of his family. Queen Mary is regarded by certain society leaders as a much-too-devoted-mother.

While in Paris recently the King and Queen found time to do considerable shopping and the chief recipient of their gifts was their daughter, Princess Mary. The most costly present was a necklace of pearls.

Lady Diana Manners Disappoints Friends

LONDON, May 16.—Lady Diana Manners has for several years held the title of the handsomest woman in England. For this reason it is not surprising that the announcement of a swimming competition in aid of a charity with Lady Diana, Lady Constance Richardson, Miss Tree and Mrs. Raymond Asquith as the stars, caused more than the ordinary interest.

The prospect of seeing Lady Diana in a skin tight bathing costume drew a large crowd, but Mrs. Asquith was the only one of the four to appear. The other three being Tories, refused to bathe in the same tub as the Prime Minister's daughter-in-law.

Steamer as Landing Place for Airmen

LONDON, May 16.—The British Admiralty is to purchase a steamship for use as a landing place for aeroplanes or hydro-aeroplanes. This is the first vessel acquired by any government for the purpose of assisting ocean scouts and indicates the emphasis which the Admiralty is placing on the air branch.

The vessel will be approximately 350 feet. There will be "flying decks" fore and aft on which the seaplanes will be carried, and from which they can begin their flights.

PARIS, May 16.—Henry C. Frick, the American coke and steel magnate, is taking a strenuous holiday here. He rises early every morning and goes to the golf links, where he remains all day.

TWO QUEENS SHOW INTEREST IN A 7-YEAR-OLD CONDUCTOR

Willie Ferrero, Musical Prodigy, Displays Talent as Leader of Orchestra

Special cable to Boston American.

LONDON, May 16.—Willie Ferrero, the seven-year-old musical prodigy, of whom all London is talking and who has two queens, Alexandra of England and Marie of Russia, at his feet, has displayed such extraordinary gifts in the arts of the conductor that public curiosity has been aroused to an unusual extent as to his personality and origin.

Perhaps one of the most striking characteristics of the child-prodigy is the fact that he conducts and interprets all the music in his repertoire on absolutely original lines after his own studies and not, as has been erroneously stated, merely copying great conductors whom he has watched with the baton in their hands.

Little Willie Ferrero was brought up in simple, though cultured, surroundings, both his parents having sprung from good old Italian families. Music has always been in the family, a not uncommon thing in Italy. Though both his parents are amateurs of music only, both are artists, the mother playing the violin and the father various instruments.

The small prodigy quickly developed his taste for musical art, for when he was only fifteen months old his mother noticed that when she played triste airs he would cry and when gay music he laughed and crowed.

At three years he started to "conduct" whenever his parents played, and even at that age he developed an excellent sense of rhythm and could change the tempo to suit his own fancy. When four, just for fun, he conducted a little orchestra in Paris at the Folies Bergere, the famous music hall.

It should be noted he has never been trained in music, but often attended the Opera with his parents. Today he cannot read music, nor does he play any instrument, although he interprets the greatest compositions by means of his baton.

His method is unique. First he hears the composition on the piano and is asked how he likes it. If he says "No" it is at once thrown aside, as he will never conduct anything he does not like. If, on the other hand he wants to add it to his repertoire, it is played once or twice by an orchestra under the leadership of one of the musicians. The latter does not interpret the composition, but plays in through in strict time without shading.

Thus he becomes familiar with the instruments and is ready to interpret it himself. He is at once in his element. No false modesty stands in his way. With perfect assurance he frequently stops the players to explain just what he wants, and is always quick to detect a false note or deviation from pitch. He holds the orchestra under perfect control.

After he has completed the concerts for which he is already engaged he is to be given a musical education. It is quite possible he may turn out to be a great genius, or he may pan out as an ordinary good musician. As he stands he is unique. Just what his particular "tic" is is unknown. His repertoire is enormous. Wagner and Rossini are his favorite composers.

WHITE LINEN OR CREPE LAST FASHION WORD FROM PARIS

Skirts Assume Redingote Form—One-Piece Gowns Are Being Much Worn

By MME. RENE DUVANT.
Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, May 16.—Gowns in white linen and white crepe are unfolding in dazzling brilliance, like royal lilies, now that the glorious days of sunshine and calm are here. It is evident that they are to be worn much more than in recent years. With them is usually a black belt, sometimes a black bolero. Not infrequently the garniture of the robe is black passementerie. Small ornamentations, even to buttons, display it in profusion.

The latest novelty in the form of a complete costume is one composed of striped crepon, with the stripes running horizontally in the upper skirt and vertically in the main skirt and corsage. There is a white linen vest with long sleeves, the ends of which are buttoned and flounced. A black velvet ribbon is tied in front, giving the impression of a belt. The tricorne hat is partly covered with black silk and adorned with white aigrettes.

Many skirts are now assuming what is termed the "redingote" form, open in front to a point about midway between the ground and the waistline. One dress in this style is composed of faille and black silk mousseline, with black silk embroidery, Japanese in motive, which is repeated on the upper portion of the corsage and even on the belt, which is of satin, supple in texture and loose fitting to a degree. The Pierrot collarette, in fine lace which falls in a "cascade" to the waist and on the sleeves half way to the elbow, is most charming. A straw toque, with a velvet band in four different shades and a large ostrich plume in front, is worn with this robe.

The one-piece gown being now much worn, it goes without saying that the blouse, or shirtwaist, has become an object of coquetry, rather than an essential, as it was a few years ago. The varied styles of the blouse at present are a long departure from those that we have hitherto known. Embroidery and floral designs and a blending of white tissues, plain or polka-dotted, are conspicuous characteristics.

The tea gown has also undergone an evolution. It has become a garment to be donned hastily, decorative, but with much less garniture than formerly. Sometimes one sees a simple "redingote," loosely fitted, embroidered with swansdown and with satin-covered buttons. Again it may be a sacklike confection of liberty silk or mousseline de soie, half open above the waist and gathered slightly midway of the leg with gold braid or a black ribbon knotted in front.

Smart Women Using Jet Black Notepaper

London Fashionables Resort to White Ink—Pets in Corner.

LONDON, May 16.—All the smart women are having their notepaper made in their favorite color, and some of them have lately taken up the cubist notion of black paper, on which they write in vivid cerise or white ink. The envelopes are, of course, to match.

Animal lovers are having a picture of their favorite pet inscribed in the corner, or of their special mascot, such as an owl or black cat.

An American woman of some social distinction has an eagle on hers in mother-of-pearl, the address being in something that glistens like diamonds. This kind of thing, however, is pronounced in rather poor taste.

2 U. S. Polo Envoys Entertain in London

Notable Players Guests of Commissioners Miller and Cowdin.

LONDON, May 16.—The Ritz Hotel has been the centre of a polo controversy this week. Being next door to Wimborne House, the United States polo commissioners, J. B. Miller and Cheever Cowdin, who stayed there, received visits from practically every notable in the polo world, giving luncheon and dinner parties every day. The commissioners left for Paris on Thursday to begin their European tour.

American M. D.'s Stopping in Berlin

BERLIN, May 16.—A party of well known American physicians registered at the Hotel Adlon includes Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., Dr. Christopher Graham and family, and Dr. J. H. Kohler. Dr. Kohler is here making preparations for an extensive tour through Russia, Sweden and Norway.

OPTICAL EXPERT ABROAD.

LONDON, May 16.—Channing M. Wells, president of the American Optical Association, has arrived for a few weeks' visit, interspersed with automobile trips into the country hereabouts.

London Hotel Plans a Sunday Cabaret

Savoy's Innovation Is Expected to Arouse Storm of Protest.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, May 16.—The Hotel Savoy will give a cabaret show, in true New York style, every Sunday night to regale the fashionable Americans who patronize the hotel and to relieve the awful ennui of Londoners who have to pass the week-end in town.

This violation of old traditions, doubtless, will arouse a storm of protest from clergymen and others. Already failure for the Savoy's cabaret is predicted. Confidently, in the interests of American visitors here, it is hoped it will come through with flying colors.

Be that as it may, a stage has been erected in the great dining salon of the famous London hostelry, and the Savoy management is optimistic and prophesies a complete success. Only the best artists now appearing in London hits will be engaged for these Sunday night performances.

Monaco's Ruler Will Give Votes to Women

Advises French Suffragists to Follow Example of American Sisters.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, May 16.—"Follow the example of American women," was the advice given by the Prince of Monaco to the French suffragettes through the woman lawyer, Agathe Dyvrande, this week.

"When I was in America recently," he added, "I was astounded at the progress of the suffrage movement and the way it had transformed the life of cities.

"What women have done in forbidding the sale of alcohol in certain States is real progress. I intend to give the women of Monaco the vote the moment the first opportunity arises."

Brant Whitlock a Popular Envoy

BRUSSELS, May 16.—Brand Whitlock, "Home Rule" Mayor of Toledo, and now American Minister to Belgium, is taking a leading part in the life of Brussels. He follows a line of popular American representatives here. His home and the legation is at the end of Rue Belliard, one of the best residential streets.

AMERICA NOW MUSICAL, SAYS VICTOR HERBERT

Composer Predicts Every Big U. S. Town Will Have Its Own Opera in 25 Years.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, May 16.—That America is rapidly becoming one of the greatest music-loving nations in the world is the opinion of Victor Herbert, who is now in London, expressed in an interview with the Boston AEMERICAN'S correspondent today. He said.

"I consider it quite within the range of probabilities that the next quarter of a century will see every important American town with an opera company of its own. Everything seems to point that way.

"The progress the American people have made in a musical way during the last twenty years is an unheard-of achievement.

"I can remember when the Boston Symphony and Theodore Thomas orchestras were the only musical aggregations worthy of the name existing in our country.

"Today there are any number of excellent orchestras, all well patronized. Grand opera is too comparatively new a thing, and yet the country is already so thoroughly imbued with the love of musical drama that it would refuse to get along without it any longer.

LAUDS OPERA IN ENGLISH.

"It is my opinion that one of the greatest things that ever happened to us in the musical line is the introduction of grand opera in English. About the material success of this innovation there is no longer the slightest doubt. The public wants its operas in English.

"The success of the two operas which I have written in our native tongue, and the Century Opera Company, which produces everything in English, bears adequate witness to the truth of that statement.

"Singing of opera in foreign tongues was the greatest hindrance to the development of a national type of song drama, but now, with the advent of our mother tongue on the operatic stage, I believe we shall see a rapid nationalization of opera so that, very soon, side by side with Italian, French and German will stand a glorious American operatic type.

CHANCE FOR MEN OF WEALTH.

"It is a matter of regret to men and women, who have the interest and advancement of music at heart—such as our Rockefellers and Morgans—so few are devoting their wealth in furtherance of institutes of music, which, in my opinion, are at least of equal value to the public as libraries, hospitals and charitable institutions.

"In Europe we find numbers of the titled wealthy class endowing music schools, orchestras and opera houses. This should be the case in the United States as well. It is my belief we are coming to the time when every wealthy man will feel it incumbent upon himself to help the art along one way or another if he would live up to the letter of the old French maxim of 'noblesse oblige.'"

'Futurism' in Men's Attire, London Style

Neckties of Bright Violet Have Emerald Yellow "Snakes."

LONDON, May 16.—Futurism is spreading to men's attire. The latest ties, socks and shirts all go to prove it. In the West End can now be seen the weird new colorings and materials which are being used for the Spring accessories of the faddists.

One tie of the brightest violet has a pattern of pale emerald and mustard yellow, which looked extremely like serpents in different states of contortion wriggling all over it.

Shirts are of the brightest imaginable colorings, many of them strewn all over with dice on strongly contrasting shades. The "very latest thing" are the "cubist" pajamas, which have squares, oblongs and triangles of white on a black ground.

Parisians Eager to Hear Carolina White

Chicago Prima Donna, Once Stenographer, Engaged for Opera.

PARIS, May 16.—Carolina White, the Chicago opera star, has been engaged to sing in Paris opera next month.

The announcement that she will fill leading roles in "Aida" and "Jewels of the Madonna" created an extraordinary [illegible] by Parisians who are eager to hear the Boston stenographer who became one of America's foremost songbirds. She is now resting in Italy with her husband.

Hackett on the Films in Paris

Before Returning to New York Actor Will Tour Continent with Wife.

PARIS, May 16.—James K. Hackett, the New York matinee idol, is now in Paris arranging for making films of Booth Turkington's "Monsieur de Beaucaire," wherein Mr. Hackett will play the leading role.

Before returning to New York Mr. and Mrs. Hackett will tour the Continent.

King of Bulgaria An Elephant Trainer

SOFIA, May 16.—King Ferdinand of Bulgaria has taken up a strange hobby. He spends many hours training four elephants. The kings of Europe have had odd pastimes. "Citizen" Capet made watches and locks better than he ruled; the Kaiser has a penchant for carpentry, while King Christian is an adept at printing.

Monk, Czar's 'Ruler,' in Gambling Scandal

Exalted Russians Sought Rasputine's Aid, but He Shared Profits.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 16.—A fresh scandal has arisen here, which is associated with the name of Rasputine, the monk, who twists the Russian monarch around his fingers and influences the affairs of a great court.

The latest furore is connected with a gambling den, where people high in society played for big stakes and fortunes have many times been lost and won. The police recently interfered and all sorts of possibilities were in the [illegible]

Exalted Russians who really hate and despise the ignorant monk, had to appeal to him to save them from royal extinction. Nevertheless, the establishment was officially closed.

When the police made a search of the papers connected with the place they discovered to their astonishment, that Rasputine himself was a silent partner in the concern.

American Vaudeville vs. English Brand

LONDON, May 16.—Walter C. Jordan, George Edwardes' American representative, has just arrived in London and will remain until the end of June. He is negotiating for the production in New York of two London successes.

Referring to the remarkable success of "Potash and Perlmutter" here, Mr. Jordan said he has just closed contracts in behalf of Cohan & Harris for productions of the Montague Glass comedy in Australia and South Africa and is considering offers from Berlin and Vienna for translations of the piece.

Jordan was busy tonight conferring with Charles Frohman, the result of which probably will be the establishment here of a typically American 'vaudeville' house in opposition to the English music hall.

Crown Princess a Devoted Mother

STOCKHOLM, May 16.—The Crown Princess of Sweden, elder daughter of the Duke of Connaught, is a devoted mother. She may be seen leisurely walking about the public gardens with four-year-old Princess Ingrid almost any fine day. These promenades, sometimes without even a nurse in attendance, are typical of the free life which Swedish royalty lives.

Body of Pius' Sister Now in Family Tomb

Rosa Sarto, Who Died a Year Ago, Honored at Reburial.

ROME, May 16.—The remains of Rosa Sarto, eldest sister of Pope Pius X, who died about a year ago, have just been returned to her native Riese, in northern Italy, where her father was a humble postman.

The body has been temporarily interred in the great cemetery of San Lorenzo, in Rome, and now lies in the family tomb which His Holiness had erected as a last resting place for the members of his family.

The present Bishop of Trevisco, where the Pope was educated, performed the ceremony, funeral honors being repeated on the reburial.

Wax Bath Treatment Now Interests Paris

Medical Circles Discuss Value of Dr. de Sandfort's Method.

PARIS, May 16.—Much interest has been aroused in medical circles by the new wax bath treatment, which has been evolved by Dr. Barthe de Sandfort and described in full detail in the London Telegraph.

The doctor especially claims it is superior to all other forms of thermal treatment in that it has a tonic effect, while other thermal methods tend to debilitate the patient. Further, the wax bath is perfectly innocuous to the weakest heart, while cardiac patients cannot always bear the heat of ordinary hot baths.

Dr. de Sandfort declares he has made extraordinary cures with twenty-nine wax baths in nerve troubles, rheumatism, gout and sciatica.

Americans to Attend King's State Ball

Affair Will Take Place June 9, Just Before Ascot Races.

LONDON, May 16.—At the State ball this week so many official and diplomatic representatives had to be invited that only the very highly [illegible] Americans had a chance of attending.

The general public will be better represented at the second State ball, which will take place on June 9 during the week preceding Ascot. There are many Americans anxious to attend the ball.

Dowager Empress of Russia Visits Duma

Astonished Deputies Regard It as Forerunner of a Call by the Czar.

Special Cable to Boston American.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 16.—The Dowager Empress immensely surprised every one—the deputies most of all—by visiting the Duma, the Russian legislative assembly. It was universally supposed that Her Majesty, like the other members of the imperial family, had the most violent prejudices against the Russian Parliament and everything to do with it.

A daring deputy asked the Dowager Empress why she had honored the chamber with her august presence; she replied simply that she wished to see in its new garb the place where she had so often danced in her youth—it was then known as the Tauride Palace—and the lake on which she had so often skated as a young bride.

Much speculation, however, is rife as to the inner reason of the royal visit and it is considered in well-informed circles that the visit of the Empress is but a forerunner of a visit by the Czar himself.

Bonheur Seeks Paris Artists for America

Head of New York French Dramatic Society Also Wants Plays.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, May 16.—Gaston Bonheur, president of the French Dramatic Society of New York, is here negotiating for the production of the latest Paris plays in New York next Winter during a ten weeks' season, beginning November 15.

He also is engaging new artists for a stock company. When the New York season ends, February 1, the company will visit Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans and Baltimore.

Japs Plan Formosa Government Change

LONDON, May 16.—An authority, who has just arrived in London from Tokio, states that the recently constituted Japanese Government may have to consider the establishment of some sort of autonomous administration in Formosa.

The progress of the island since Japan took it over as one of the prizes of war with China twenty years ago has been so considerable that local government in one form or another has become a necessity.

Worker and Drones

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

THE bees have their drones and the human race has its drones.

And among the bees and among human beings, wise Nature arranges to get rid of the drones and leave the world and its wealth to the workers.

The bees do the work of destruction systematically, crudlly and thoroughly at one time.

Among human beings, the work is done just as thoroughly, but more slowly. The working bees kill their drones when there is no longer any need of the power they represent.

The working human beings look on, while the human drones slowly kill themselves with idleness, dissipation and dullness.

* * *

We human beings would understand ourselves better if we knew more about the insects that live in organized Civilization at our feet or in the air above us.

In proportion to their power, the bees and the ants are infinitely more highly civilized than we are. They are as far above us as the careful, painstaking worker and saver is above the worthless tramp and idler.

For thousands upon thousands of years, before men had dreamed of civilization or settled in great communities, the bees and ants were working out their problems of co-operation, organization, defense and attack.

Aristotle wrote about the bees and their civilization, their laws and their habits, more than two thousand years ago.

With scientific exactness, and from his day to our day, in which such men as Darwin and Buchner have studied the planning, law-giving insect kingdom, there has been in all probability no change whatever in their lives.

Long before men had cities or villages the bees and the ants had their great "nations." Thousands of years ago they knew all that they know now, and they probably know now ALL that they ever can know. So at least it seems to us bigger creatures who study them.

They are our superiors in proportion to their strength, but we are still developing, and therein lies our hope.

* * *

In a hive of bees there is but one mother. She is queen, and the mother of all the bees that come after her. And there is but one father—he is a drone, and he does not live long.

The queen flies up into the air on her honeymoon trip. She is bigger, more powerful than her sisters, the workers who wait upon her and give up their lives for her.

As she flies upward, one or more of the drones, the male bees, fly with her. The strongest, probably, and the best fitted to be the father of the coming generation, outflies the others.

He is scarcely to be envied in his victory. For when he comes back to the earth he is dead.

From that time on the queen lays her eggs and they hatch. That flight with the drone is the beginning and the end of her romance. After that she devotes herself to eating, laying eggs and receiving the adoring care of her sisters, the working bees. She sees no more of any male while she lives.

Her working sisters lay no eggs—are never mothers. Their only pleasure is work.

The brothers, the other drones, have an easy life for a little while. They do no work. They are big and powerful and proud of themselves. But presently—you shall read the details here as Maeterlinck gives them—they are destroyed.

Then the hive is made up of the queen and the workers, her sisters, and the young bees fed and cared for by the workers.

* * *

The bees are like human beings in this.

They get the habit of work, and sometimes they continue working for a little while even after work becomes unnecessary—as you see a rich old man still working, though he need not work.

But bees, like others, are spoiled by prosperity. And before long all of them lose the habit of working.

Buchner, the German scientist, observed that near sugar factories in the Barbadoes the bees give up the troublesome work of visiting flowers. They soon learn that they can get all the sugar they want all the year around—which is what the sons of rich men learn very easily.

In warm countries, where flowers bloom all the year, the bees give up the storing up of honey for the Winter—they forget about the cold and rainy day, and only gather enough honey and pollen for each day. To make such bees work, it is necessary systematically to take from them what they have gathered. Like the workers in many tropical countries who disappear when they have enough money to last them for a day, the tropical bee loses the habit of labor.

There are almost five thousand varieties of wild bees. And among them patient study would undoubtedly discover peculiarities as numerous as those among the different kinds of human beings.

You may even find among the bees primitive, ignorant, uncivilized individuals, corresponding with the bushmen of the desert, or even with the cave man of a hundred thousand years ago. One little wild bee, called the Prosopis, you may see flying about in the bushes. If you knew bees and could study her, she would seem to you as different from the prosperous bee of the hive as a half naked bushwoman seems different from the comfortable lady in her furs.

But that little wild bee, half starved, ignorant, is the ancestor of all the civilized bees. And, what is more important, as the scientists point out, it is probably to her that we owe nearly all of our flowers and fruit. A hundred thousand varieties of plants would disappear from the earth if the bees did not visit them, carrying the pollen.

This, however, is an editorial about the destruction of drones. You know how that destruction works out among human beings.

Dissipation, self-indulgence, small families, and then comes the gradual dying out of those that do not work. In Voltaire's day the oldest noble family was a Venetian family. The city of Venice was started in the marshes and the bogs by thieves escaping from the law—that shows how quickly the nobility, or the titled drones, die out when the habit of work leaves.

We give you here an intensely interesting extract from Maeterlinck's Life of the Bee, in which he describes how the workers in the hives kill off the male drones when the next generation is assured and they are no longer necessary.

> "Before the queen is started on her honeymoon trip toward the sky, the working bees take care of their brothers, the drones, most affectionately. It is highly important that one of them should be the father of the future workers and of the next queen. But the moment one of them has been selected by the queen or has proved his fitness by his superior ability to fly, the drones are a nuisance, eating and doing no work, and their doom is sealed."

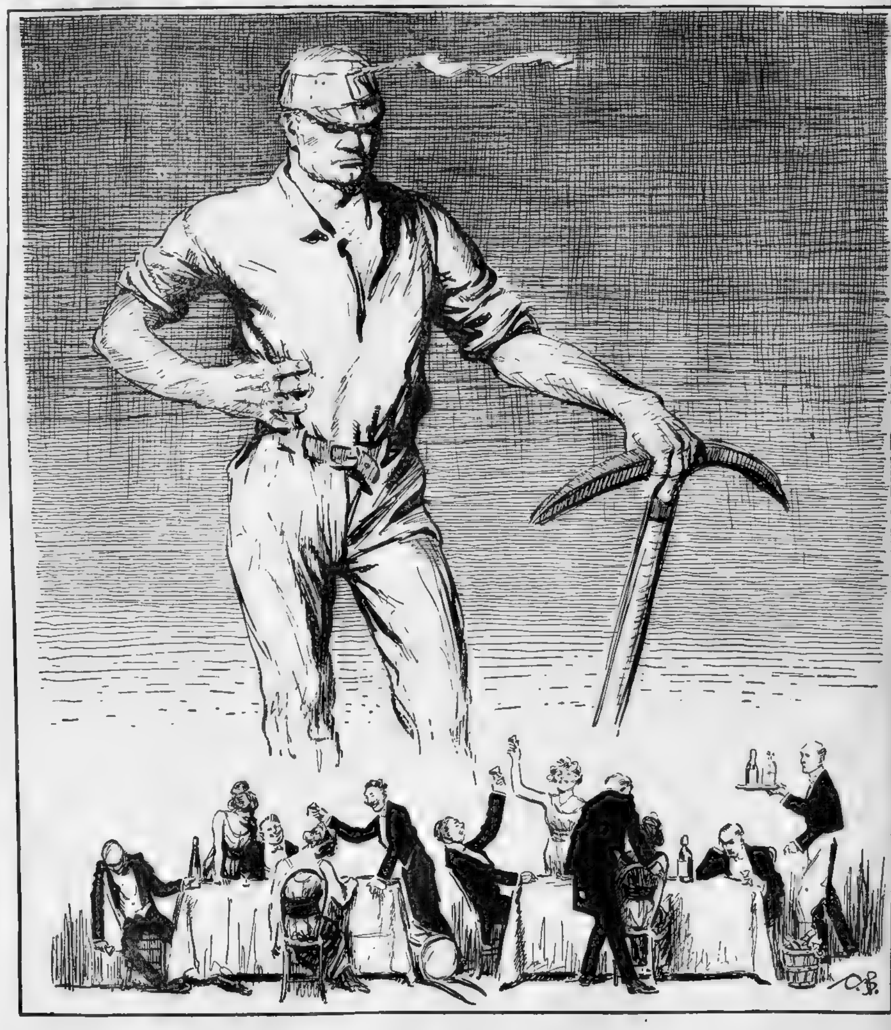
Read Maeterlinck's description here and observe the close resemblance between drones in the hive and drones in our human civilization.

* * *

"If skies remain clear, the air warm, and pollen and nectar abound in the flowers, the workers, through a kind of forgetful indulgence, or overscrupulous prudence, perhaps, will for a short time longer endure the importunate, disastrous presence of the males. These comport themselves in the hive as did Penelope's suitors in the house of Ulysses. Indelicate and wasteful, sleek and corpulent, fully content with their idle existence as honorary lovers, they feast and carouse, throng the alleys, obstruct the passages and hinder the work; jostling and jostled, fatuously pompous, swelled with foolish, good-natured contempt; harboring never a suspicion of the deep and calculating scorn wherewith the workers regard them, of the constantly growing hatred to which they give rise, or of the destiny that awaits them. For their pleasant slumbers they select the snuggest corners of the hive; then, rising carelessly, they flock to the open cells where the honey smells sweetest, and soil with their excrements the combs they frequent. The patient workers, their eyes steadily fixed on the future, will silently set things right. From noon till three, when the purple country trembles in blissful lassitude beneath the invincible gaze of a July or August sun, the drones will appear on the threshold. They have a helmet made of enormous black pearls, two lofty, quivering pluumes, a doublet of iridescent, yellowish velvet, an heroic tuft, and a fourfold mantle, translucent and rigid. They create a prodigious stir, brush the sentry aside, overturn the cleaners and collide with the foragers as these return laden with their humble spoil. They have the busy air, the extravagant, contemptuous gait of indispensable gods who should be simultaneously venturing toward some destiny unknown to the vulgar. One by one, they sail off into space, irresistible, glorious, and tranquilly make for the nearest flowers, where they sleep till the afternoon freshness awakes them. Then, with the same majestic pomp, and still overflowing with magnificent schemes, they return to the hive, go straight to the cells, plunge their head to the neck in the vats of honey, and fill themselves tight as a drum to repair their exhausted strength; whereupon, with heavy steps, they go forth to meet the good, dreamless and careless slumber that shall fold them in its embrace till the time for the next repast.

"But the patience of the bees is not equal to that of men. One morning the long-expected word of command goes through the hive, and the peaceful workers turn into judges and executioners. Whence this word issues, we know not; it would seem to emanate suddenly from the cold, deliberate indignation of the workers; and no sooner has it been uttered than every heart throbs with it, inspired with the genius of the unanimous republic. One part of the people renounce their foraging duties to devote themselves to the work of justice. The great idle drones, asleep in unconscious groups on the melliferous walls, are rudely torn from their slumbers by an army of wrathful virgins. They wake, in pious wonder! They cannot believe their eyes; and their astonishment struggles through their sloth as a moonbeam through marshy water. They stare amazedly around them, convinced that they must be victims of some mistake; and, the mother-idea of life being first to assert itself in their dull brain, they take a step toward the vats of honey to seek comfort there. But ended for them are the days of May honey, the wine-floater of lime trees and fragrant ambrosia of thyme and sage, of marjoram and white clover. Where the path once lay open to the kindly, abundant reservoirs, that so invitingly offered their waxen and sugary mouths, there stands now a burning-bush all alive with poisonous, bristling stings. The atmosphere of the city is changed; in lieu of the friendly perfume of honey, the acrid odor of poison prevails; thousands of tiny drops glisten at the end of the stings, and diffuse rancour and hatred. Before the bewildered parasites are able to realize that the happy laws of the city have crumbled, dragging down in most inconceivable fashion their own plentiful destiny, each one is assailed by three or four envoys of justice, and these vigorously proceed to cut off his wings, saw through the petiole that connects the abdomen with the thorax, amputate the feverish antennae, and seek an opening between the rings of his cuirass through which to pass their sword. No defence is attempted by the enormous, but unarmed, creatures; they try to escape or oppose their mere bulk to the blows that rain down upon them. Forced on to their back, with their relentless enemies clinging doggedly to them, they will use their powerful claws to shift them from side to side, or, turning on themselves, they will drag the whole group round and round in wild circles, which exhaustion soon brings to an end. And, in a very brief space, their appearance becomes so deplorable that pity, never far from justice in the depths of our heart, quickly returns, and would seek forgiveness, though vainly, of the stern workers who recognize only Nature's harsh and profound laws. The wings of the wretched creatures are torn, their antennae bitten, the segments of their legs wrenched off, and their magnificent eyes, mirrors once of the exuberant flowers, flashing back the blue light and the innocent pride of Summer, now, softened by suffering, reflect only the anguish and distress of their end. Some succumb to their wounds, and are at once borne away to distant cemeteries by two or three of their executioners. Others, whose injuries are less, succeed in sheltering themselves in some corner, where they lie, all huddled together, surrounded by an inexorable guard, until they perish of want. Many will reach the door and escape into space, dragging their adversaries with them; but, toward evening, impelled by hunger and cold, they return in crowds to the entrance of the hive to beg for shelter. But there they encounter another pitiless guard. The next morning, before setting forth on their journey, the workers will clear the threshold, strewn with the corpses of the useless giants; and all recollection of the idle race disappears till the following Spring.

"In many colonies of the apiary this massacre will often take place on the same day. The richest, best-governed hive will give the signal; to be followed some days after by the little and less prosperous republics. Only the poorest, weakest colonies—those whose mother is very old and almost sterile—will preserve their males till the approach of Winter, so as not to abandon the hope of procuring the impregnation of the virgin queen they await, and who may yet be born. Inevitable misery follows and all the tribe—mother, parasites, workers—collect in a hungry and closely intertwined group, who perish in silence before the first snows arrive, in the obscurity of the hive."



The bees kill their drones. Our human drones kill themselves.

Among the bees that gather honey and the men that gather money Nature works wisely in the same way.

Those that work thrive and the drones die out. Some of them die too slowly---but they all go.

The Nobel Prize Awards Not in the Spirit of His Will

The Witnesses to the Philanthropist's Testament Say He Meant to Give Them to Struggling Talent, Whereas They Have Been Awarded to Opulent Success.

By Dr. LEONARD HWASS,

The Chemical Engineer, a Witness to Alfred Nobel's Will.

AS one of the two witnesses to the will of Dr. Alfred Nobel, I feel it my duty to declare that the spirit of his intentions is not being carried out in the awarding of the Nobel prizes.

It was his intention to help struggling talent with these large money prizes, and not to award them to well established success and persons of wealth, as has been done.

It was in 1894 that I became acquainted with Dr. Alfred Nobel in Paris. He was then sixty years old, but so hale and hearty that his death did not seem an event to reckon with in the near future. Nevertheless, he had a rough draft ready even then of his will, involving almost forty million marks.

A friend of mine, Robert Strehlenert, also a Swede, and myself had just succeeded in producing a thread from cellulose for incandescent mantles, and our success in this direction suggested the thought that an artificial silk might be produced from wood fibre. We spoke of this to Alfred Nobel, who saw the importance of such an invention for the development of the Swedish lumber trade, and as a result he offered to place at our disposal a large sum of money for our experiments. We declined his offer, as Strehlenert found that he had sufficient means of his own for our requirements.

From that hour Nobel seemed to feel for us a remarkable friendship and confidence. He told us that he was looking for two men, preferably Swedes, to witness an extremely important document—men who would be in their prime when he had gone to his last rest, and who would be able to testify, if necessary with inconvenience to themselves, that he had not been suffering from an aberration of the intellect while drawing up that document. We, of course, were willing to act as witnesses of his will.

Two years later he died unexpectedly, leaving only one million crowns of the thirty-six million Swedish crowns—the equivalent of ten million dollars—to his relatives. The rest, as all the world knows now, was devoted to cultural purposes.

In a few decades, no contemporary of Nobel will be alive. But centuries hence, as long as the earth endures and nations develop and die away, the benefits accruing to all mankind, thanks to that nobly conceived will of his, will shine brightly and clearly, like our own Northern Light.

The thought that my humble name is associated with this great work which, thanks to the wisdom of Alfred Nobel, will continue from year to year to benefit generations still unborn, seems to stimulate my conscience into protesting against a continuance of the ill-advised selection of men as recipients of the Nobel prizes.

ELLIOT & FRY.

The Nobel Medal Bearing the Likeness of the Philanthropist; Below It, Rudyard Kipling, the Famous English Writer; at the Right, Rabindrath Tagore, the Bengalese Poet, Both Instances of Misapplied Awards, According to Dr. Leonard Hwass.

Personally, I have the utmost respect for the conscientious and unselfish manner in which the executors have sought to acquit themselves of their difficult and delicate task. They have had only the dead letter of Nobel's will, not the living spirit of his lofty mind to guide them, and I feel, therefore, that it is my sacred duty to speak out as plainly and as vigorously as I know how, for when the last living witness to that extraordinary document has gone to join the great majority, no rectification of this deep-seated error in judgment will be possible.

A few words concerning Nobel's personality may help clarify the situation. He, who possessed a trunkful of orders, never wore one, and because he gave away his enormous fortune he has been called a Socialist. Nobel foresaw this. But he was not even a Social-Democrat. His temperament was a strictly social-economic one. This one hyphenated word is the key to his character. He was a simplicity-loving, high-thinking gentleman, whose hopes centred not in uplifting the masses, but in elevating and strengthening dynamic personalities.

Surely that remarkable will of his must make this clear: for in making testamentary provisions for benefiting exceptional characters, he signalized his belief that they are the real benefactors of the human race.

He knew from bitter experience how hard the struggle for existence is only too frequently for finely organized natures, and his desire was, in his own, often-cited words, "to make life easier for them that dream great dreams."

Such ideal natures he desired to supply with a financial motor for furthering their life-work. It was not his intention to found a capitalistic institute for decorating men who had already attained their zenith in fame and efficiency.

The Nobel prize—this is my first thesis—was devised not as an honorary order but as a prize carrying with it substantial financial aid for workers whose big work remains to be done in the future, work, it must be understood, which advantages humanity at large.

If this first principle had been adhered to, more men would have received it who really have need of it and it would not have gone to those, whose work in the past has been highly commendable and worthy, but who, by dint of that very work, no longer have need of financial assistance.

The mania which at present prevails for honoring men of world-wide renown must be abandoned, and for it must be substituted Nobel's eminently practical conception of making economically independent "the right man."

This cry and quest for "the greatest" is idiotic.

Thus Edison, without peradventure of a doubt, is the greatest inventor of the age. Nobel would have considered it a huge joke if it had been proposed "to honor" Edison with a Nobel prize—Edison, whose fortune is probably much greater even than Nobel's. For Edison, you perceive, requires neither spur nor assistance. He has reached so high a pinnacle of fame and worldly goods that to receive the Nobel prize would mean practically nothing to him. It would be a case of carrying coals to Newcastle. But conceivably, there is more than one young inventor to whom the Nobel prize would be a godsend, affording him the means to devote himself entirely to his chosen work.

Thus, also, adhering to this idea that "the greatest" must receive the prize, Goethe, wealthy and honored, and not Schiller, poor, struggling for recognition and actually in dire need half of the time, would have received the Nobel prize a hundred years ago, if the Stockholm Academy had had the awarding of it. And yet Nobel's great, generous, magnanimous heart would have gone out to unrequited Schiller with a passionate desire to help him. Not the renown enjoyed by a celebrity, but the beauty manifested in the works of an idealist, and giving an earnest of greater work still to be produced should be the fundamental thing to be considered. This is my second thesis.

Nobel left a comparatively small sum to his own relatives, because they were already richly endowed with worldly goods; it follows, as a corollary, that it certainly was not his intention to further endow and enrich strangers who already "had enough money."

I am fortunate in being able to illustrate this point with something Nobel himself said. "The man who has over a hundred and fifty thousand crowns (almost $40,000)," he said, "to dispose of in the furthering of some great work, can make his own way. If this sum does not suffice him, larger means would not merely be wasted, but, because tending to emasculate, would be a positive evil."

This dictum of Nobel's should be printed and reprinted, and scattered broadcast throughout the civilized world. For in view of this statement, who will have the hardihood to deny that he thought it an absurdity to shower another hundred and fifty thousand crowns upon a man already well-to-do, or rich?

I cannot protest too vigorously against the perverted use to which his money is being put. "Those who receive the prizes," said Nobel, "are my spiritual heirs"—this, because he had no children of his own. But I am convinced that even if he had had children, although making them part beneficiaries, he would have directed the bulk of his huge fortune to be used as it was his intention to now have it used.

And yet repeatedly this perversion of funds has taken place. If Emile Zola and Count Tolstoi had received the Nobel prize, as it was once proposed they should, they would have presented flagrant cases in evidence. Sienkiewicz, living in state in his ancestral castle, is a case in evidence; so, also, is the latest recipient—the Indian patrician, Tagore.

It has foolishly been suggested that the wealthy man who receives a Nobel prize may retain the "honor," and use the funds for some worthy end. This again is a perversion of Nobel's spirit. It was his distinct purpose to give a personal pleasure with his money. It was his avowed, definitely expressed purpose to contribute to the happiness of men of genius, by removing from their lives the sordid cares which lack of money entails. The inventor was to have his little home and his laboratory; the poet his bungalow in the woods. The amount involved and carried by the prize—one hundred and fifty thousand crowns—if put out at interest, will yield an annual income of six thousand marks ($1,500)—ample means for a man of simple habits who asks nothing but leisure and peace to do his work.

This brings me to my third thesis: Nobel's joy in his will was the consciousness that his inanimate riches would be converted into a living fountain, from which great works through an interminable future would draw their sustenance and support.

And again I quote his very words, "I desire to dedicate my fortune to the service of humanity."

But the service of humanity means nothing else and can mean nothing else than advantageous work still to be performed; no one realized this more keenly than did Alfred Nobel, who himself died in harness.

This is the reason why Nobel, in his will, exhorted his executors to consider that man who, in the past year, has placed the most brilliant achievement on record. He wanted to foster every new twig and branch on humanity's great tree of culture, not to wrap old, full-grown branches in gold-foil.

His money was to continue working for the benefit of humanity, and not to pass, within a few short years, into the hands of the relatives of great men, themselves of no particular consequence, as was the case with Mommsen and with Carducci.

Have we heard of any great poem that would not have been produced if it had not been for the Nobel prize? It is, of course, easier to determine the promising workers in the fields of physics, chemistry and medicine than to discover upward-striving literary talent, and yet this, too, might be compassed, if the press of every country would take a vote among its readers as to the new bright stars on the literary horizon.

My co-witness, Dr. R. W. Strehlenert, of Gotheburg, makes the following statement to accompany mine.

"When the rich relatives of Alfred Nobel contested his will, it fell to me, as witness for the defense, to quote a saying of Alfred Nobel's which created a profound impression in court:

"'I account those men my relatives with whom I live in spiritual communion. That is my reason for desiring to help not men of action, but those idealists who find difficulty in substantiating their dreams.'

"Certainly, as Dr. Leonard Hwass has stated above, the Nobel prize was not to be an old age medal, or an order of honor. Nobel designed the prize as a social-economic engine for removing sordid care from the path of deserving and still intellectually active and creative men. I can emphatically vouch for it that precisely this was his intention.

"It seems that my word is necessary to corroborate Dr. Hwass's statement, for, to my exceeding amazement, the Swedish press printed only brief extracts from his remarkable and excellent presentation of the case.

"Assuredly also it was not Nobel's intention that the money with which he wished to dower aristocrats of the spirit should be deflected for the building of a sumptuous palace. He, whose left hand never knew what the right was doing, hated all idle show and pageantry. Such a palace would be a lasting monument to the execrable habit of crowning celebrities, while the struggling dreamers, the patient sufferers for some misunderstood great cause or new idea are overlooked, forgotten and crushed.

"Nobel's object, I attest, was to help further the continuous progress of ideal work, serving humanity in a simple, unostentatious and practical way. A wonder palace, such as has been proposed, would have been abhorrent to him in the last degree.

"To use Nobel's money for this purpose would be to put it to an even more extravagantly unsuitable use than heretofore, and the unbelievable absurdity of such a project impels me to range my evidence with that of Dr. Hwass."

The Bad Manners of American Society Girls—By the Late Frederick Townsend Martin

[This was one of a series of articles written for this newspaper by Mr. Martin, the leader of New York society, immediately before his recent death, which has caused such widespread sorrow in society and among persons of all classes who knew him. —Editor.]

UNLESS there is a sudden change for the better I feel sure that the time will soon be here when our young girls will be found pulling their father's beards and slapping their mother's faces in public.

When I am asked what is the most disturbing feature in society I must reply unqualifiedly, "The almost total decay of good manners among our fashionable young girls and also among our very young women." The charge that we older people are merely "old fogies" is lacking in strength to reach us in this connection. For what I am here discussing is almost universally admitted and lamented.

One hears among these giddy young creatures slang which is totally incomprehensible. One wonders from what source it is derived. Perhaps one is having tea at the home of a friend. There are no sounds but the soft conversational voices of the assembled guests and the far off rumble of the city's life. Suddenly the bell rings furiously. Two girls of sixteen or eighteen years upon being admitted, slam the door behind them and the conversation which follows resounds through the whole house.

"Gimme the chocolates."

"Cut it out."

"Hully gee, kid, you're sticking close to things lately."

"I'll soak you one if you try to take 'em."

One of the most sacred things to a cultivated person of our race is our Milton's English. It seems to me that it should be the peculiar duty of the people who inherit cultural opportunities to preserve and keep pure this most precious treasure. When one hears it degraded by the poor lost people of the slums, one reflects that it is, after all, not their fault. To find it so misused by people of cultural opportunities is most disappointing.

Let me be understood, of course, as not claiming that all young society girls so far forget themselves as to go on in the way I have described. That would be far from the truth. But these conditions are in fact so widespread that they warrant most serious consideration on the part of all the parents and friends of these girls. Let us admit at once that the parents are most of all to blame. And yet not entirely so, because the girls can hardly be kept from the companionship of those of their own age. Even the best trained and most refined young girl, when she finds that it is thought smart to be a hoyden and old-fashioned, and silly to have good manners, soon finds herself going along with the crowd.

I have sometimes thought that the shrieking voices of these girls resulted from the fact that they were not given a proper amount of physical exercise. Life in a modern city tends to constantly repress them. The vitality and natural gayety of their young lives must break forth in some way. So it comes forth in the form of shouting and loud laughter.

Of all the niceties of social intercourse that of restrained and dignified conversation is one of the most essential. Even very small children may be taught to speak quietly and yet naturally. But our young girls too often develop the habit of mere chattering. That is, they will race on and on in their talk regardless of what the other person is saying or thinking. Three girls of sixteen will all talk at the same time at a rate which would make an understanding of any one of them impossible. Their schools do not seem to teach them that each word has a specific value which must be weighed and considered before the word is uttered. The habit of chattering prevents the development of an orderly mind.

And yet parents should be held accountable. It is perhaps the most essential duty of their life to watch over the education of their children. It has long since been a recognized fact that American fathers, their time being completely taken up by their daily vocations, do not develop the habit of assisting in the education of their children. Very often they are hardly acquainted with their boys and girls.

Of course no one doubts for a moment the entire competency of our American mothers. If they would set themselves to the task of correcting this error it would be quickly accomplished. But mothers seem to have forgotten that their young daughters need constant supervision in both their education and their amusements. I cannot see that it is possible to safely disregard the old system of careful chaperonage. Mature women will ultimately use their new found freedom in the best possible way. But the idea that children can be left to themselves, that they do not need much help in character building, is a dangerous and ruinous fallacy. I regret to say that very often at the parties and dances of our young people the chaperons take their duties as a joke. They may be found, for instance, at a game of cards on one floor of a house, while the children are dancing or playing games on another floor.

Another most dangerous feature in connection with this matter is the deplorable practise of taking young girls to restaurants at early hours in the morning. These tender creatures should be home and in bed before midnight.

When their parents see them later paying the price in the shape of a worn-out nervous system and a complete loss of beauty, they will often find it too late to make amends. I wonder what the family physician says concerning this practise.

Much has been said and written for and against the many new dances which are now so much in vogue. I have already expressed myself as favoring some and being very much opposed to others. The worst of these dances are an unqualified evil even when indulged in by people of mature years. But when taken part in by our girls and young unmarried women these dances are simply wicked. Whatever parents can be thinking of when they permit such performances is totally beyond my understanding. They would be the first to maintain that their girls must be kept pure and sweet.

Strange, indeed, is the fact that the very time when parents and teachers are beginning to educate the young in matters of sex, these abnormal and degrading practises should be developed among the young. But they simply cannot continue. The people who lead public sentiment in these matters are simply too sound of both mind and heart to let it go on.

These girls in a very few years will find themselves in the possession of great wealth. They will be supervising homes and taking no small part in important public affairs. Very often a husband's career will be dependent upon their soundness of judgment and intelligent helpfulness. When that time comes some of them will themselves reflect bitterly upon the neglectful attitude of their parents in their younger years.

In this connection I cannot help but recur to the fact that the English perform their duty much better than we do. In an English household where there are children their care and education seem to be a matter of the very first importance. The English governess is a person of authority. English girls, even in the years immediately preceding their coming out, study hard, go to bed early, and eat simple food. Consequently these girls, when they come to young womanhood, are not only well educated, but physically sound, with steady nerves and good complexions.

I am only recording a matter of fact when I say that our boys are much more careful in this matter than our girls. Perhaps it is because the education of boys is treated by both teachers and parents as a more serious matter. And here we have the key to the situation.

If the manners of our girls are to be altered for the better their minds must be occupied, for at least part of their time, by matters of serious importance. It is most satisfying to realize that profound influences making for this end are now at work. I have lately had occasion to discover to myself, to a very insufficient degree, however, the work of a most useful organization—The Junior League. This institution, under the presidency of Miss Harriet Alexander, appeals to me as being distinguished by results which should appeal to every one.

The league includes, I am told, a membership of nearly 1,000 of the young debutantes of this city. Its purpose, if I have correctly grasped it, is not only to instil into the minds of these influential young women a realizing sense of their duty toward the world, but also to furnish them with a training in social work and an opportunity to make use of that training. The members of the league are enabled to choose among a great variety of activities. After a proper period of training they may, for instance, conduct classes among poor girls, teaching language, plain sewing, cooking, or one of the fine arts. Much of their work seems to be done in connection with social settlements already established. To these well established institutions they bring not only money, but devoted services of a high character. The actual work of managing the various and far-reaching activities conducted by the league cannot help but be in itself a profound influence upon the lives of these young women of society. Think of their building and managing a working girls' hotel which furnishes a fine home at reasonable rates to three hundred girls who work in stores, offices and factories! And this is not at all a charitable institution. It is a self-sustaining home, for which the working girl pays and in which she is at absolute liberty to live her life as she pleases.

The Junior League furnishes entertainments and conducts a number of dancing classes, which have the result of counteracting the influence of the vulgar public dance halls.

Positive work—social service—interest in the larger things of life—these influences elevate and sanctify. Why need this movement be restricted to one society? Cannot the officers and the patronesses of the Junior League see their way clear to launch other societies of a similar nature? In this connection I am thinking not only of what good these rich young girls may do to the less fortunate. I am deeply interested in the good they will do themselves—in the greater life values they will develop and present to the world as they take up the larger duties involved in marriage and motherhood.

Have Eugenists No Sense of the Ridiculous? Asks G. K. Chesterton

By G. K. CHESTERTON.

IT may seem scarcely worth while to renew a criticism on the professors of eugenics, whose attempt is already petering out in gasping polysyllables: And the first point to emphasize is that the weakness of the eugenic sect is an intellectual weakness. They do, indeed, go against a man's moral conscience and almost against his physical instincts. But that is not the main thing about them; one might say that the trade of spy went against the moral conscience, or the life of the ascetic against the physical instincts. The main point about them is that, unlike the spy or the ascetics they are incapable of connected thought. The spy may be doing a mean thing, but he knows why he is doing it. The ascetic may be insane in what he gives up, but he knows what he is trying to get. But the excuse of the eugenist is never clear, even as an excuse. The sacrifice of the eugenist has no meaning even as a sacrifice. The strong standing paradox of their position is their peculiar power in government and their peculiar weakness in discussion.

Here is an example. An evening paper has reported the opinions of Mrs. Gotto, an eminent eugenist and secretary to one of the eugenic societies.

Mrs Gotto claims to have shown that divorce should be granted for "insanity, inebriety or general degeneracy." What is general degeneracy? If it means going from bad to worse, that sentence is an excellent instance of it. For it begins with "insanity," which, however mysterious and horrible, has been dealt with more or less by legal definitions and isolated more or less by medical tests. It goes on to "inebriety," which might mean anything from once being drunk to never being sober. And it ends up with a total mental smash and silence, in the phrase, "general degeneracy."

In the old popular sense, degeneracy means that a man is not as good as his father; in that sense I am a degenerate. In a more modern and subtle sense it generally means that a person is not intellectually adequate to do the job he is doing; in that sense the eugenists are degenerate. But if even a degenerate be so shadowy and baffling a being, what sort of being is a general degenerate? And who is going to be publicly disgraced and deprived of his children for being anything so idiotically vague? Mrs. Gotto, in answer to a question, asserted that the opposition which eugenics had to encounter was "mostly abuse." I do not object to this; for it is indeed a pretty fair description of the form taken by the irritation of those who like thinking at the eloquence of those who won't think. I do sometimes feel, after reading a page or two of this psuedo-scientific rubbish, that nothing but good hearty abuse would meet the case. But I wonder whether it has ever occurred to Mrs. Gotto that describing any man she doesn't like as "generally degenerate" is mere abuse. Heaven knows; perhaps she thinks it's something scientific.

There is another peculiar point about eugenics. The test of any constructive suggestion or policy is when it passes from the abstract to the concrete. And this is the dangerous point, because it is there that laughter wakes up, like a concealed watch-dog.

But it is a peculiarity of eugenists that they have no guess or glimpse of this initial absurdity, which would stagger the world the first day on which their notions were put in practice. For instance, at a conference, it was solemnly debated whether the "sense of race-responsibility" could not be taught in schools; whether schoolmasters could not implant in their pupils the "eugenic ideal" to "guide their affections in later years, when they came to select their partners."

Now let any two-legged motor in this vale of tears try and turn those words into a concrete picture. I remember my own school. Picture a number of idle, busy or brooding boys sitting at inky desks; at a taller desk in front is sitting an athletic but nervous young man from Cambridge, blinking at them, and wondering by what verbal avenue he shall approach the topic; the topic being how very fastidious they ought to be about the blooming health and bodily perfections of the girls they make love to.

What surgeon has removed the risible muscles from all these people's heads? Have they ever seen a schoolboy? I went to a large school and saw a good many different sorts, and I cannot think of one kind of a boy on whom the effect of such a scene would not be either crazy, or downright depraving. The only possible results would be either a hot and torturing embarrassment, or an enormous increase in entertaining but improper conversation. And what sort of noodles are they that think they can talk to schoolgirls about the ideal man?

To Save Our Valuable Migratory Birds from Lobbying "Game Hogs"

Dr. W. T. Hornaday Urges the Necessity of a Nation-Wide Protest Against the Selfish and Wicked Attemps to Kill the Law That Protects the Nation's Chief Weapon Against Insect Pests That Do $420,000,000 Damage Every Year.

By Dr. WILLIAM T. HORNADAY,

Director New York Zoological Park.

If the people of the United States will tamely submit to have the law that was made last year, at their overwhelming demand, now dragged through the mud and trampled upon because it protects birds altogether too well to suit the game hogs then I entirely mistake their moods and tenses.

Of course the enemies of the law will declare it "unconstitutional." We always knew that they would. And what of it? Since when has it become the policy of this great Government to sit still and permit every law of Congress to be spurned and ignored "until it has been tested in the U. S. Supreme Court, and declared constitutional?"

What new form of anarchy are we to have next? And what are we to think of Senators who discredit their own laws?

The law now at stake is the best bird law ever passed. The President of the United States issued a proclamation urging its thorough enforcement. It is the great bugbear of the pot hunters, for that class, while regarding State legislation lightly, are wholesomely afraid of Uncle Sam. So this measure, which is the farmers' and fruit growers' best possible protection against an average annual loss of more than $420,000,000 by the depredations of insect pests, has to be put out of commission. The birds, which belong to no one State, but to all the States, and which are the chief enemy of crop-devouring insects, must be left at the mercy of the game hogs—even the robins and the woodpeckers.

And note the pretext upon which the enemies of the law would nullify it pending a Supreme Court decision concerning the law's "constitutionality": It is claimed that if Congress were to grant the annual appropriation of $100,000 needed to enforce the law, or even the $50,000 oppropriation for which the House of Representatives stood as a unit, the Government would have on its "perpetual payroll" an army of special game wardens. Should the law be found unconstitutional these employes, with nothing more to do, would still have to be paid. This is equivalent to saying that the Government can make no time contracts for services.

This is no time to mince words. Just as fast as we can get hold of them we purpose giving to the public the names of the men who propose to assassinate the people's best bird law with the dagger of non-support.

The game-killing enemies are thickest in Missouri, southern Illinois, eastern Kansas and Arkansas; and they are determined and dangerous. Those of the Kansas City region are represented in the United States Senate by Senator James A. Reed, who fully indorses their views. He holds, as they do, that the law is "unconstitutional," and that therefore they are under no obligation to obey it if they choose to run the risk of defying it. This statement is based on direct personal knowledge obtained on February 26, 1914, and not on hearsay.

Senator Joe T. Robinson, of Arkansas, who appears most anxious to discredit the law, endeavored to have the whole $50,000 appropriated by the House of Representatives for the enforcement of the law stricken out, and once he actually accomplished that end' Afterward, at the earnest solicitation of Senator McLean, the paltry sum of $10,000 was restored; which is the same as nothing at all!

We know, positively, how 95 per cent of the people of the United States feel about the Federal migratory bird law, and about the need of an international treaty to back it up in Canada. They want them both! They know the immense value of insectivorous birds to the market basket and the dinner pail.

Knowing well where they stand, we now pull aside the curtain and point to the enemies of their best bird law, who are now going about with their knives out, proclaiming offhand that "the law is unconstitutional," and refusing to give it a square deal!

And so, then, a few Senators refuse to appropriate even $50,000 to enforce the law that they helped to enact, and deliberately do they elect to bring that law into public contempt by non-enforcement. I refer to the Senate Committee on Agriculture. And this is the prospect when many States are now cooperating in the enforcement of the Federal law ,and several have actually revised their laws to make them conform to the national statute.

Already we know that the national Government is being severely criticized because in some localities the law is not being adequately enforced. This discontent, if it continues, will grow into a storm of disapproval.

Before me at this writing are editorial protests printed in newspapers representing all sections of the country. Every mail adds to such expressions of public sentiment, while the number of letters received from farmers and fruit growers shows how vitally interested those industries are in having our Federal bird law enforced

I am taking the liberty of quoting one such letter—from Mr. G. A. Hollinger, a representative fruit grower in the State of New Jersey. Mr. Hollinger writes:

"I am a farmer, raising fruit and flowers for sale in their seasons. I also have several fish ponds and raise gold fish and carp, and have tried to raise trout, but have been prevented by fish thieves.

"I have written to-day to Hon. Mr. James E. Martine, United States Senator from our State, asking him to do his best to get an appropriation passed to enforce the law to protect the insect-eating birds. I have been for years almost daily annoyed by trespassers, pot hunters, mostly foreigners, who come to shoot the birds on my farm and to rob my fish ponds. In one instance they fired a shotgun at me. I saved my life only by getting behind a large tree.

"We farmers very much need the help of the insect-eating birds, in order to raise any crop of fruit at all, especially peaches and apples [illegible] suffer greatly from the peach and [illegible] borer insects. If the birds [illegible] could increase our fruit [illegible] and thus bring down the [illegible] I am perfectly willing to let the robins eat a few of my cherries, as they are great insect-eaters.

"I thank you for the great services that you have rendered to the noble cause of bird protection and to the farmers. I trust that we will all be successful in getting rid of the bandits who murder the farmers' best friends—the birds."

Not only the "best friends" of farmers, but of the entire population, which is wrestling with the problem of the constantly increased cost of living. The public should awake to the fact that there is a direct connection between the high cost of living and the depredations of the bird pot-hunters.

The 5,000,000men and boys who are slaughtering our birds are levying tribute on every American pocketbook. An immense number of birds of great economic value are being slaughtered annually. Many of our best bird species are on the toboggan slide toward extermination.

The destruction of these birds means:

A great increase in the armies of destructive insects.

A great decrease in our agricultural products, and a great loss to consumers and to farmers.

These insect pests are preying upon everything in the vegetable kingdom that man is producing and upon many domestic animals as well. As their bird enemies decrease the insect hordes increase When 2,570,000 acres of wheat are destroyed in Indiana and Ohio in one year by the Hessian fly, as happened in 1900, does anyone believe that such an occurrence does not raise the price of wheat? Of the loss to the wheat growers we are absolutely sure.

In 1904 the United States Department of Agriculture made a study of the annual loss to the people of this country by the ravages of destructive insects. The following table summarizes the result of that inquiry, the figures showing the loss in a single year:

Product.	Per cent of loss.	Amount of loss.
Cereals	10	$200,000,000
Hay	10	53,000,000
Cotton	10	60,000,000
Tobacco	10	5,300,000
Truck crops	20	53,000,000
Sugars	10	5,000,000
Fruits	20	27,000,000
Farm forests	10	11,000,000
Miscellaneous crops	10	5,800,000
Total loss		$420,100,000

The codling moth and curculio ~~apple~~ pests cost us about $8,250,000 a year for spraying operations and $12,000,000 a year in shrinkage of value in the apple crop.

The cinch bug wheat pest some years costs us $20,000,000.

The cotton boll weevil costs the cotton planters yearly $20,000,000.

The tree insect pests cost the nation $100,000 000 annually

The grasshoppers, cut worms, army worms, wire worms, leaf hoppers and other insects cost the nation annually more millions than can be estimated separately.

Now, have we not paid this price about long enough?

The value of the birds destroyed for "game" and for "food" is not equal to one one-thousandth of the value they wou'd save to the national wealth if permitted to live.

Regarding the slaughter of our birds, the increase of insect pests and the losses they inflict upon us, the great mass of the American people is sound asleep. The situation is illogical, absurd and intolerable. As reasoning beings it is our duty to take hold of this subject like MEN, stop the abuse, stop the disgrace and avoid some of the loss.

The American people do not realize that scores of species of the birds that sportsmen and pot hunters are regularly allowed to shoot for sport are of immense value to agriculture. How many men are there out of every thousand who know that at least thirty species of shore birds feed upon noxious insects, and are immensely valuable to our agricultural industries? But mark this well: If the Federal migratory bird law is enforced—as we say it MUST BE—it will give absolute and permanent protection to fifty-four out of our sixty species of shore birds!

Now just look at the following record of what has been going on, to our loss, but which WILL BE STOPPED if the migratory bird law is enforced by a proper annual appropriation·

How many Americans out of every thousand know the immense value of our songbirds, swallows, woodpeckers, blackbirds, quail, doves and nighthawks in destroying countless millions of noxious insects?

How many people in the North know that the negroes and poor whites of the South annually slaughter millions of valuable insect-eating birds for food? Around Avery Island, La., during the robin season (in January, when the berries are ripe), Mr. E. A. McIlhenny says that during ten days or two weeks at least 10,000 robins are each day slaughtered for the pot. "Every negro man and boy who can raise a gun is after them!" And now that cotton is up to twenty cents a pound the gun problem is solved!

There are six States in which the robin is regularly and legally being killed as game. They are Louisiana, Mississippi, Maryland, North Carolina, Tennessee and Florida.

There are five States that expressly permit the killing of blackbirds as "game": Louisiana, South Carolina, Tennessee, District of Columbia, Pennsylvania.

Cranes are killed and eaten in Colorado, Nevada, Nebraska, North Dakota and Oklahoma.

In twenty-six States doves are regularly killed as game, much to the loss of the farmers

The shore birds are being fast exterminated by sportsmen and pot hunters, who kill them for food. The Eskimo curlew is totally extinct, and other species are fast going over the same road. Nothing in this world will save this group of birds except enforcement of Federal protection of migratory birds. The way the whole group of shore birds is being exterminated is nothing less than a crime, and yet at least thirty members of this group are of a great value to all of us, because of the great numbers of crop-destroying insects that they annually consume.

The champion pest destroyer is the loggerhead shrike. Fifty-nine per cent of its food is insects and twenty-eight per cent is crop destroying rodents.

The nighthawk feeds exclusively upon insects, and nearly everybody knows that this is the case with the woodpecker. Yet these and more than a score of other insect-destroying birds are sacrificed by pot hunters in the North and South. No bird is small and insignificant enough to escape their ruthless guns.

At the headquarters of the New York Zoological Society are jars containing the dead bodies of forty-three valuable insectiverous birds that were taken from two Italian pot hunters in the suburbs of New York in October, 1905.

The law now on the statute books, which will be worthless in the absence of an appropriation sufficient to enable its enforcement, is admirably calculated to stop this wasteful slaughter. It protects for a period of five years the rapidly diminishing species of insect-devouring shore birds by establishing during that period a "closed season" the year round. Within that period, with this law properly enforced, these valuable birds would increase enormously, and every year their services to the farmers would repay a hundred fold the cost of their preservation.

The main body of the enemies of this law consists of spring shooters, who are determined to shoot and slaughter game birds in the spring, when they migrate northward for the mating and nesting season.

This is the season, obviously, when the birds should not be molested in any way. The natural increase of the different species needs comparatively small interference to result in eventual extermination.

Some of the State laws are disgracefully lax, and the slaughter of game birds in spring goes on to the uttermost limit which they will permit.

We now have a satisfactory Federal law. Our fight is to secure the appropriation necessary to enforce it. The following are some of the more important principles set forth by the United States Biological Survey ,on which the law's regulations have been based:

To limit the list of migratory game birds to the species properly so-called and to eliminate all species that can be considered legitimate game or that are too rare to be longer hunted for sport or profit. This list has been made to conform as closely as possible with the statutory definitions of game.

To prevent spring shooting.

To protect migratory birds between sunset and sunrise.

To provide protected flight lines along at least three of the great navigable rivers.

To make the seasons approximately equal in length in different parts of the country.

To limit the hunting seasons to a maximum of three or three and one-half months.

To regulate these seasons according to latitude and times of migration, and to adjust them so that there may be reasonable opportunity of securing thirty days' shooting on any species at a given place.

To provide separate seasons for water fowl, rail, shore birds and woodcock. The woodcock seasons are made to conform as nearly as posible with the seasons for upland game under State laws, so that there will be no opportunity in close seasons to hunt quail or grouse under the guise of shooting woodcock.

To curtail hunting at the end instead of the beginning of the open season, in the interest of both the birds and the sportsmen.

To utilize all the protection now afforded by the close seasons under State laws and extend these seasons where necessary.

The probable effect of these regulations may be briefly stated as follows:

Uniformity in protection of migratory game and insectivorous birds in theh several States

Protection of birds in Spring while en route to their nesting grounds and while mating

Uniformity in protection of migratory birds at night.

Establishment of protected migration routes along three great rivers in the central United States.

Complete protection for five years for the smaller shore birds and other species which have become greatly reduced in numbers.

Reduction of the open season on migratory game birds, but in most cases not more than 25 to 50 per cent.

Now, is there anything in these provisions that appears "unconstitutional?" If this law is "unconstitutional," then so are the laws against stream-pollution, against the spread of epidemics, against illegal shipment of birds, and against the white slave traffic.

Are the selfish interests of game hogs and 5,000,000 pot hunters of all sorts of birds mainly insectivorous, to weigh against the constantly increasing cost of living to the whole population, that is to a great extent responsible for the $420,000,000 annual crop loss through the depredations of insect pests"

The defense of the most valuable birds of our continent is now up to the press and the American people at large. The officers on the firing line have done all that they can do for the promotion and the enforcement of our unrivalled and world's best bird laws. To-day (May 8) the Senate is obdurate ,and the outlook is very bad. The Spring-shooting game hogs of Kansas City and round about, for a radius eastward of 25 miles, are active and dangerous. Their champions in the Senate hat ethe law and wil destroy it if they can. All the 1,500 game hogs of Western Missouri care about is the privilege of slaughtering ducks and geese during January, February and March. And they call themselves "sportsmen!"

If the law does not get at least $50,000 for its enforcement in 1914-15, it will be dragged through the mire and discredited, and the pot hunters will go on slaughtering birds. The law IS CONSTITUTIONAL; but it would take at least a year to get a decision on it in the U. S. Supreme Court. That law is not a Congressional joke or a legislative football. Congress made it because the people demanded it en masse; and only fourteen men in Congress had the hardihood to defy their constituents and vote against it!

Now, fellow Americans, who shall rule—the game hogs, or the millions who want to kepe down the price of cereals, fruit and lumber by protecting the insect-eating birds?

Give your Senator your answer.

The Importance of Keeping Up Appearances

By HUBERT BLAND,

the Famous English Essayist.

The longer I live, and the more sharply I look about me, the higher do I value appearances, and the more fully and clearly do I realize the hollowness and the folly of the attempts of platitudinarian moralists to depreciate and to decry them.

It is true enough, of course, that, as Gilbert says, "Things are not always what they seem; that a certain amount of skimmed milk does, in fact, masquerade as cream." But, even so, if the skimmed milk were conscious, like unto you and me, and, feeling profoundly discontented with its unworthiness, did its best to put on the airs and aspect of cream, the effort would be greatly to its credit, I think.

It is not modesty to be content to appear to be what you are, unless you have the luck to be something superlatively fine—which is most unlikely. One might almost call it sheer vanity, peacockery. Self-complacence has never been accounted a virtue.

I have the deepest and widest sympathy with those in all conditions of life who try to keep up appearances, even when the try is a failure. They are a pathetic, but, at the same time, an ennobling spectacle. The pain-worn invalid, for example, who declines to give in to his ailment, who keeps his chin up and strives to strut with the swagger of health, is indeed and in truth doing his best to make the world a better place for other people

Yes, and he is doing something more than that. He is probably doing no little more than medical science could do for him toward the cure, or, at any rate, the mitigation, of his own complaints. The New Psychology teaches us that the best way to be well is resolutely and determinedly to seek to appear well. If you feel dourly on rising in the morning, for instance, on no account must you admit to yourself that you are dumpish; still less must you look dourly. On the contrary, you must slap your chest with vigor, asservate to the listening walls of your bedroom in stentorian tones: "I am well—I am splendidly well"; go down to your bath whistling the "Cock o' the North" or some other invigorating air, and the chances are that ere your ablutions are complete every trace of your dourliness will have gone

On the merits of such a course of treatment for depression, I am told, all the highest medical authorities are agreed. Could there be better testimony to the value of keeping up appearances?

Personally, I believe the principle to be of well-nigh universal application. In a sentence to try to appear to be something that you are not is the best of all ways to become that something, whatever it may be. The coward who affects courage will, in all probability, shed something of his cowardice. The fool who tries to appear clever will end by being at least much less of a fool than when he began

Do we not all know the plain woman who, by valiantly setting herself to imitate the airs and graces of a beauty, ends by attaining, if not beauty itself, at any rate most of the worldly advantages that beauty confers on its veritable possessor? Consider the wives of the richest men you know. Are they, at the same time, the prettiest women? Not a bit of it! But they are women who knew how to appear pretty at the psychological moment, as it were; who knew how "to make the best of themselves," as they themselves would put it.

The attempt at appearances is, at least, an indication of the possession of an ideal. The little cad who seeks to look like a gentleman, and to act like a gentleman, thereby ceases to be a little cad. Moreover, he proves that in the soul of him he holds gentlemanliness to be a higher and a more desirable state than caddishness. His endeavor may be vain, and in our thoughtlessness we may laugh at it; but I can't help feeling that a few tears should mingle with our laughter "Such mortal things should touch the mind," as Virgil has it.

Let me point my moral with a true story.

I once knew a woman author—and an uncommonly clever woman author she was, and is, for her abilities have received recognition now, and her name appears over her work in most of the high-class magazines here and in America. But for years, for some unexplained reason, she experienced the greatest difficulty in getting her manuscripts accepted.

As she herself told me, every morning's post brought back sheaves of them, returned sometimes with thanks, sometimes with none

At last an illuminating idea occurred to her. She took her courage in both hands, and spent a fearsome part of her slender capital in the purchase of a resplendent hat, a jacket that suggested almost wicked affluence, with a gown and gloves to match hat and jacket. Then she hired a brougham, the smartest that a West-End job-master could turn out, and she went and called on editors.

From that day her luck, as she called it, turned. But, of course, it was not luck; it was sheer management. Not only were her manuscripts accepted with enthusiasm, but prices rose steadily, and to-day she can visit the Bond street costumer's and the Oxford street job-master's without a qualm.

[illegible] invested in appearances, you see, and the investment turned out to be gilt-edged. Of course, there was something behind the appearances—one must admit that—but that something behind would have spelled poverty unto this hour had it not been for the appearances themselves!

Clothes, I take it, are appearances. Anyhow, they are that part of us which most saliently appears. They are, when you come to think of it, about all of us that does appear; and they are part of us, or should be. The men and women whose clothes are not part of them are men and women badly dressed.

Well, now, does anyone in his senses doubt the transcendent importance of clothes? Does any philosophic and thoughtful mind question for a moment their effect upon conduct and, therefore, finally, upon character? If you who read this article question it, put the matter to experiment. Go for a fortnight without brushing your coat, and never read another line I write if at that fortnight's end you do not make the dismal discovery that your soul is dusty and wants brushing, too. Do you fondly imagine that soldiers would fight as they do fight if the War Offices of the world were to dress them like dustmen or like convicts?

As it is, I have my suspicions that the insignificant khaki had something to do with our reverses in South Africa, that we should have done better to have stuck to scarlet and gold lace. Did you ever see a Hussar's hanging jacket of old time—that decorative, elegant, hampering garment—if it can be called a garment—with its sleeve hanging loose? It served no purpose but one, and that one "bluff." But the man who invented and fashioned that jacket was a genius, and knew men to the core of their beings. He knew that, clap that jacket on the shoulders of the veriest poltroon, and he would, with a laugh on his lips, ride into the jaws of death.

In other words, keep up appearances, by [illegible] means, but see to it that the appearances [illegible] keep up are worthy to appear.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

Sanford Marvin, a wealthy manufacturer of automobiles, has worn himself out by overwork. His son, Harry, and his adopted daughter, Pauline, love each other, but she wants two years of thrilling experiences seeing life before marrying Her reason is that she is ambitious to be a writer. Old Mr. Marvin asks to see what she has written While Pauline and Harry are in search of a magazine containing her story, Mr. Marvin opens the case of a mummy which has just arrived from Egypt Raymond Owen, his rascally secretary, helps lift off the front of the case, but leaves the old man to remove the mummy's bandages alone. Mr Marvin, during a fainting spell, sees the half-exposed mummy come to life, step out of her case, take a bracelet from her wrist and try to force it into his nerveless grasp, while her lips whisper a strange message from the remote past.

Restored to consciousness by Harry and Pauline, the old man believes it to be a dream until later he finds the identical bracelet on the mummy's skeleton wrist. He promises Pauline one year to see life and places her in the guardianship of Owen. A final heart attack gives him just time to write on the doctor's prescription blank a very brief will. Then he dies. A lawyer tells Owen that he would have permanent charge of Pauline's estate if something should happen to her before marriage. Hicks, a racetrack man, whispers a suggestion to Owen, but the secretary refuses to have anything to do with him, for the time at least. Hicks and Owen introduce a reformed pirate, who tells Pauline of hidden treasures, and they take passage to the island of Nassau to recover the treasure

A clock-work bomb is exploded on the yacht chartered to seek for the treasure, and Pauline and Harry (who had gone along as a half-breed cook) narrowly escape death

At the reception in honor of Signor Baskinelli, the distinguished musician, it is proposed that all the guests visit New York's "Chinatown."

A FLUTTER of polite alarm attended Signor Baskinelli's invitation

From the sheltered glitter of a Fifth avenue drawing room to Chinatown was a plunge a little too deep for many of those present.

But Baskinelli was insistent, and Pauline was his ardent and efficient recruiting officer. Quite a little troop train of limousines carried the invaders from the camps of the fashionable to the uncelestial haunts of the Celestials.

Baskinelli rode in the car with Pauline and Owen. He had cast off the dignity of the master musician and assumed an air of whimsical recklessness that suited him better.

Harry and Lucille were in the following [illegible]

"Oh, please stop fidgeting," exclaimed Lucille. "I'm as nervous as you are."

"I know," said Harry, "but I hate to have her alone with that little black snake for five minutes."

"Owen is with them"

"Owen is worse."

The machines drew up in Chatham Square, and the little scintillant procession that moved across to Doyers street—dainty slippers on blackened cobblestones, light laughter tinkling under the thunder of the "L," human brightness brushing past the human shadows from the midnight dens—made contrasts picturesque as a pageant in a catacomb

Pauline, on the arm of the chattering Baskinelli, led the way.

"Isn't this splendid?" she exclaimed. "I am sure you won't disappoint me, Signor Baskinelli. I hope you aren't going to show us a happy Chinese family at supper. Only the most dreadful sights amuse me."

"Ah, but we must not take risks," replied Baskinelli. "There are some beings in the world, Miss Marvin, so exquisitely precious that a man would commit sin if he placed them in peril."

Pauline stopped in the middle of the street.

"But only the worst and wickedest places," she admonished Baskinelli.

He leaned suddenly very near to her.

"Do you really mean that, Miss Marvin?" he asked.

"Indeed I do," she answered.

"Very well. But first we shall go to the new restaurant. It is yet too early for the worst and wickedest to be abroad—or, rather, to seek their lairs.

They climbed a brightly lighted staircase into one of the ordinary Chinese restaurants of the better sort which are conducted almost entirely for Americans, and where Boston baked beans are as likely as not to nudge almond cakes on the bill of fare and champagne flow as commonly as tea.

They gathered around one of the larger of the cheaply inlaid tables, and Baskinelli took command of the feast.

Harry sat in grim silence, watching Pauline like a protecting dragon Lucille was sick at heart and repentant of coming. The others chatted merrily among themselves. But by common consent Pauline seemed to have been surrendered to the attentions of the evening guest, who had become a midnight host.

He leaned toward her with an ardor that he did not even attempt to disguise from the others. "You are the most wonderful woman in"——

"Please make, it the universe," pleaded Pauline. "There are so many most wonderful women in the world."

"No, let us say chaos," he whispered. "The universe is governed by laws. Even the stars ride their rings to the lash of eternal order. The chaos of a man's heart can be ruled only by the charming uncertainty of woman."

The intensity of his words brought to Pauline again the same little twinge of alarm that she had felt just before she fled from him in the conservatory. Unconsciously she looked around for Harry. It was the last thing in the world she had meant to do. She was angry at herself in an instant, for his fixed, guarding gaze was upon her. She met his eyes and turned quickly to Baskinelli.

"Chaos? I've always loved that word," she flashed. "There must be so many lovely adventures where there are no laws."

"I said the chaos in a man's heart could be RULED—by a woman," said Baskinelli.

The impudence of this sudden love making moved her unexpectedly to defiance.

"Please LET it be ruled, Signor Baskinelli," she said, turning away from him.

"I offer a thousand apologies. I am a fool. You will forgive me?"

"This once."

He had sense enough to see that he had gone too far. He turned to the others as the soft-footed Orientals began to spread the mixed and mysterious viands on the table. He noted Harry's glowering eyes. He glanced at Owen. By the slightest movement imaginable, by the least uplift of his black brows, Owen answered. For the first time Baskinelli knew that the lovely quarry he pursued had a protector—and no mean, no weak protector.

But the arrival of the repast quickly covered the general embarrassment with a film of conversation. Not that the embarrassment was very serious. Everybody knew — everybody could see—Pauline and Harry had had a quarrel and that Pauline was flirting outrageously with Baskinelli simply for revenge—that is, everybody except Harry could see it.

"Pardon me, but is that what you call a graft investigation that you are making, Miss Hamlin?" inquired Baskinelli of Lucille.

"No, but the fool is so funny. There are so many queer things present, but unidentified," laughed Lucille.

"Like a reception to a foreign artist," interrupted Harry with a vindictive glare.

"Or shall we say like the conversation of an unhappy guest," said Baskinelli, smilingly turning to note the entrance of a little party of newcomers at the further end of the restaurant.

This Is from the Motion Picture Film of "Pauline" by the Famous Pathe Players.

During the Supper at the Chinatown Restaurant Signor Baskinelli Suggests to Pauline That They Visit the Chinese Joss House.

It was rather an unusual party. A dashing, well-dressed, fiery-eyed foreigner, the tips of whose waxed mustachios turned up like black stalagmites from the corners of his cavernous mouth, was accompanied by two nondescript figures, who seemed to be embarrassed more by the fact that they had been recently cleansed and shaved than by their rough red shirts and mismated coats and trousers.

The man of the tilted mustachios gave brief, imperative orders to the waiters, whose languid steps seemed to be quickened by his words as by an electric battery. The other two sat silent, like docile dogs in leash.

Only for an instant Baskinelli's eyes rested upon the group.

"And having tasted the food of the gods, how would you like to visit the gods themselves?" he asked.

Pauline agreed enthusiastically. You mean a joss house—a Chinese church, don't you?"

"Yes."

The joss house that most visitors see in Chinatown is the little one up under the roof at the meeting of Doyers and Pell streets—at the toe of the twisted horseshoe made by these tiny thoroughfares of black fame, where, in spite of all the modern magic of "reform," men still die silently in the hush of secluded corridors and women vanish into the darkness that is worse than death.

The little joss house is interesting in the same way that an Indian village at a State fair is interesting. Behind its gaudy staginess and commercial appeal it still holds something of reality from which the imagination can draw a picture of an ancient worship that has held a race of millions in thrall for thousands of years.

But it was not to the little joss house that Signor Baskinelli took his guests. In the little joss house the bells are pounded without respite, the visitors come and go at all hours of the day and night—save the few set hours when the joss sacrifices profit to true prayer. Under the painted eyes of the squat idol punk sticks are vended, and Fourteenth street shop girls giggle under the grave gaze of the silent priests.

Baskinelli took his guests to the joss house of the Golden Screens.

Save for its greater size and more splendid accoutrement, it was little different from the other. But it was walled, in its back alley seclusion, deep behind the outer fronts of Mott street, by a secrecy almost sincerely sacred.

The motor cars remained far behind across the square as Baskinelli led the party through the dismal streets and stopped before a dark doorway.

A dim light flared behind the door and a Chinaman in American dress admitted them.

"I am beginning to be REALLY bored," said Pauline.

"Wait; give the wicked a chance" said Baskinelli.

They climbed three flights of dingy, narrow stairs. The stairs were lighted with flaring gas jets.

"Wonderful," jeered Pauline. "Not even a secret passage or a subterranean den!"

The others followed her laughing lead up the stairs.

A Chinaman came out of the door on the second landing, stopped, started in innocent curiosity at the dazzling visitors and went down the stairs. Everything was as still and commonplace as if they had been in the hallway of a Harlem flat building.

The silence was not broken nor the seeming safety disturbed in the slightest by the soft opening of the first landing door, after they had passed—that is, after all but Owen had passed. No one but Owen saw the piercing black eyes and the tilted mustachios of the face that appeared for an instant at the door. And Owen did not remark the matter to the others.

There was a corridor, not so well lighted, at the top of the third flight of stairs. In the dim turns the women drew their skirts about them, a bit wary of the black, short walls.

The passage narrowed. They could move now only in single file, and even then their shoulders brushed the walls.

Only a far, dull glow from a red lamp over a door at the end of a passage lighted their way.

Baskinelli tapped lightly on the door.

It was opened by a venerable Chinaman in the flowing robes of a priest. He looked at them doubtfully. Baskinelli spoke three words that his companions did not hear. The priest vanished. Quickly the door was reopened and they stepped into the dim, smoky, stifling presence of the joss.

The choking scent of the punk always at the folded feet of the idol was almost suffocating. The place had other odors, less noxious and less sweet. Chinamen were lounging in the room as if it had been a place of rest. Three priests were on their knees before the joss, swaying forward till their foreheads almost touched the floor, their outstretched arms moving in mystic symmetry with their rocking bodies.

A great brass bell hung low beside the idol. But no priest touched the bell.

The joss itself was almost the least impressive thing in the room. It stood, or squatted, six feet high, on a block pedestal at the side of the room. The simple hideousness of the painted features served no impressive purpose, but as contrast to the exquisite decorations of the room.

Screens of carved wood, so delicately wrought that it seemed a touch would break the graven fibres, were flecked with inlay of pearl and covering of gold.

One of the peculiar features of the room was a suit of ancient Chinese armor—a relic that had been rusted and pit-marked by time, but now stood brightly polished beside the statue of the god. A huge two-edged sword of the Samurai was held upright in the steel glove.

By the dim light behind the idol the shadow of the sword was cast across the blank face of Baskinelli as he moved forward. He stepped back quickly. The shadow fell between him and Pauline.

Again the ancient priest answered a summons at the door. Again he parleyed for a moment—then opened it, but those who entered were the three swarthy foreigners who had been in the restaurant.

Baskinelli turned for just an instant to glance at the tall man with the tilted mustache. He resumed immediately his conversation with Pauline.

"Why do all the Chinamen run away like that?" she asked.

"It is the end of the service; you see the priests are going, too."

But there was a furtive haste about the departure of the Orientals. And there was a quavering in the manner of the oldest priest—the only one who remained—that seemed born of a hidden fear.

The old priest lifted one of the lamps from a wall bracket and set it on the floor beside the idol. He knelt near it and began to pray.

The three Italians waited only a moment, then followed the Chinese out of the room.

"It is so late—we ought to be going," pleaded Lucille.

Complete silence had fallen on the room, and her words, a little tremulous, had instant effect on the other women.

"What about it, Baskinelli?—better be going"" asked one of the men.

"Yes—yes. I beg only a moment. I wish to show Miss Pauline the"——

"You mean Miss Marvin, do you not?" blazed Harry, striding to Baskinelli's side and glaring down at him.

"I was interrupted. I had not finished my words. They are, at best, awkward. I beg"——

"You beg nothing," said Harry through clenched teeth. Then slowly, grimly:

"I want to tell you, you little leper, that if anything happens here to-night—it is going to happen to you."

He was so near to the musician that the others did not hear.

Baskinelli backed away. Pauline, with the swift, inexplicable, yet unerring instinct of woman, moved as if to seek the shelter of Harry's towering frame.

He did not see her. He had whirled at the sound of the opening of a door—a peculiar door set diagonally across a corner of the room behind the Joss.

Through the yellow silk curtains that hid the entrance came two Chinamen as fantastically hideous as the embroidered dragons on the tapestry.

"Put those men out; they cannot come in here; they are full of opium," commanded Baskinelli

"Stop; let them come in; we are going," said the mild voice of Owen.

The understanding look of Baskinelli met his. Baskinelli frowned and Owen smiled. They were playing perfectly their roles.

The two Chinamen shuffled into the room. The old priest arose in jabbering protest. They argued with him acridly. A few feet away one could see that their cheap linen robes covered the ordinary street garb of the Chinaman; that the ugly lines on their faces were painted, as on the face of the Joss.

Baskinelli was laughing. The others watched the argument in silence. Every one but the host of the adventuring party, and Owen, and Pauline, seemed a little nervous.

Suddenly the lamp on the floor went out. There was another at the farther side of the room, but its dim light made the scene more weird than darkness could have made it.

"Well, I thought we were going," snapped Harry's strident voice.

"We are," replied Baskinelli. "Miss—er—I am afraid to speak—Miss Marvin, shall we go?"

Pauline took his arm.

"Ah, but I have forgotten the most precious sight of the evening," suddenly exclaimed the musician. Only a moment—look here."

Interested, Pauline did not notice that Owen softly shut the door upon the receding footsteps of the others. Baskinelli guided her back to the little door behind the screen—the door from which the Chinamen had entered.

Baskinelli drew aside the curtain.

"There—that is one form of adventure."

Pauline looked through the curtain. A suffocating narcotic odor came to her. What she saw was stifling not only to the senses—but to the soul. She turned away.

"Polly!"

Harry's voice rang through the little choked room like a thunder blast.

"We are coming—we are quite safe," called Baskinelli, with the sneer tinge in his tone.

"Very well, then; hurry."

Harry's manner aroused Pauline's temper again. She purposely lingered.

The two Chinamen were arguing violently now with the priest.

Harry had closed the door and followed the others down the outer passage.

"Miss Marvin—Pauline!" called Baskinelli with sudden passion. "Have you a heart of stone? Can you not see me helpless in your presence? Do you know what love is?"

He stepped towards her and tried to take her in his arms. Woman though she was, she was stronger and far braver than he. She thrust him aside and fled through the door.

Baskinelli followed, protesting, pleading.

Strangely, as she fled through the narrow corridor, the low, flaring gas jets were extinguished one by one.

She groped in darkness

Baskinelli's pleading voice became almost a consolation, a protection

Her elbow struck something in the passageway. The something shrank at the touch. She heard a quick drawn breath that was not Baskinelli's. She knew that she was trapped. She tried to run. The tiny passage choked her flight. She plunged helplessly between invisible but gripping walls. She reeled and screamed.

"Harry! Harry! Come to me!" she cried.

There was the sound of a struggle behind her. She heard Baskinelli crying for help—but, oh, so quietly! She reached the stairs. The stairs were blocked by a closed door. The door was barred. But there was a light left burning by the door.

Her weak hands beat upon the wooden panels, helplessly, hopelessly. How should she know that there were two doors, locked and sealed beyond?

Her wild screams rang through the long passage, through the dark, above the shuffle and beat and cursing of the staged fight.

In the dim of the light she could see the figures of the three Italians grappling with Baskinelli's voice called to her reassuringly. It might well. Baskinelli was in no danger.

She placed her softly clothed shoulder to the door and strove to break it. She screamed again "Harry! Harry!"

Dull crashes answered. There was the crack and cleaving of splintered wood.

"Hold on! I'm here!" she heard.

She fell beside the door. Strong arms seized her. For an instant she felt that she was saved. But she looked up into the lowering face of a man with tilted mustachios. From the wide, thick lips came threats and curses.

From the outer passageway came the crashing of the doors.

She let herself be lifted, then, with sudden exertion of her trained strength, she broke the grasp of the man.

The door fell open.

Harry, bloody and tattered, stood there—alone.

"Polly?"

"Oh—yes—where are the others? They'll kill you—run!" she cried.

He ran.

He ran forward into the black corridor. A knife thrust, sheathed in silence, ripped his shoulder—gave him his cue. He had one man down and trampled. But another was upon him and yet a third.

A sharp pain dulled the pulsing of his throat. He felt a tickle down his bared and swinging arm.

He fought blindly in the dark.

"Polly!" he panted.

There was no answer.

* * * * * *

In the Joss House of the Golden Screens the two Chinamen, dazed with opium, set of purpose, were still arguing with the trembling priest.

The door fell open and a white woman—with bleeding hands—fell at their feet.

"Ha, she has come back!" cried one of the Chinese in his own tongue.

There was the sound of steps in the outer passage.

"Quick—inside!" breathed the Chinaman, pointing to the den.

They lifted Pauline. The old priest stopped them.

"Not there—not there!" he cried. "Any one would look in there."

They dragged her back. The priest hurried to the outer door and locked it.

There was the blunt, battering thrust of a body against the door.

"Open, or I'll break it in!" yelled the voice of Harry.

The priest opened the door.

In deferential silence he saluted the battle-grimed newcomer. Battered, panting, bleeding, Harry lunged at the man, gripped him.

"Quick—where is she? You'll die like a spiked rat. Where?" he roared.

The two other Chinamen were kneeling before the Joss.

There was a moment's silence, then a strange sound—like a cry heard afar off.

Harry strode to the little pedestal where the suit of armor stood.

"Where is she?—or I'll rip this place to cockles!" he thundered.

"We do not know what you mean," said the priest.

The two Chinamen began to jabber.

Other figures reeled from the room behind the curtains. But over all their clamor sounded again the faint cry—distant, but near.

In a flash Harry caught from the mailed glove the haft of the sword of the Samurai. As he rushed across the room the Chinese withered away from him. There was a crash as the great sword fell upon one of the windows. Through the broken pane Harry shouted for help. His voice was like a clarion in the silent streets.

He turned in time. Three Chinamen, with drawn knives, were upon him. He swung the unwieldy sword above his head. Its sweep saved him. He dashed at the Joss. Again he lifted the sword. A grasp and then a wail of fear sounded through the room.

He struck. The head of the statue thudded to the floor.

The Chinese rushed upon him. They were desperate now in the face of the violation of their god. But he was behind their god prying open the secret door to the hollow within the statue.

"It's all right, Polly," he said as he drew her gently forth.

He stood above her with his back to the wall swinging the sacred sword of the Samurai against the onslaught of fanatic men. They fell before him, but more came on.

His hands could hardly hold the mighty weapon. For more than half an hour he had been in fight. He was weakening. He braced himself and swung for the last time

There came a hammering at the door. It crashed in. Police clubs whistled right and left. The Chinese fled into their secret lairs.

* * * * * *

"And I guess THAT will be all," panted Harry in the taxi that took them home "I don't think you'll ask for any more adventures after this one."

"Why didn't you pick up the Joss's head?" replied Pauline. "It would have looked so nice and dreadful in the library?"

But the glory of her golden hair nestled upon his torn shoulder and he knew that he would go through all the perils in the world for happiness like this.

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

TO-DAY'S PRIZE OFFER

As you read this instalment of "The Perils of Pauline," printed above on this page to-day, you noticed that Signor Baskinelli pulled aside a little curtain and made Pauline peer inside—WHAT WAS BEHIND THE CURTAIN?

The details of that incident have not yet been written. That will be YOUR task. Read the instalment, study the situations, and write the explanation that you think best fits those situations.

One thousand dollars in money prizes will be given for the best explanation of what Pauline saw behind the curtain. Answers must reach this office not later than next Wednesday noon. Announcement of winners will be made two weeks from to-day.

Awards will be made according to the merits of the replies received, and those showing the greatest excellence in ingenuity, imagination, inventiveness and literary skill will be ranked in the order of merit.

This contest is open to every one without restriction and those who in our opinion send in the best answers will be awarded the prizes. No manuscripts will be returned.

Write your explanation in not over 200 words, write your name and address plainly, and send it

Next week another $1,000.

ELBERT HUBBARD
WRITES OF SEVEN NEEDED REFORMS

By ELBERT HUBBARD

USUALLY the man who first suggests a needed reform goes down to defeat, and the men who fought him to a finish take up his idea and carry it through to successful victory.

Before the people of the world today, and especially before the people of the United States, there are seven great tasks offered for our undertaking.

These have all gone through the stage of ridicule and indifference.

We have accepted them, at least in a mental way, and it now remains for us to push these betterments through to a successful conclusion.

We have the truth in our heads, but we have not yet quite got the mental technique. In other words, we haven't the habit.

These seven great reforms are:

First—Votes for Women.
Second—International Disarmament.
Third—Good Roads.
Fourth—Tree Planting.
Fifth—Children's Gardens.
Sixth—Oral Righteousness.
Seventh—Agriculture in All Public Schools.

* * *

Any person in America who has not enlisted on the side of three or more of these great reforms, and is not talking and working for them, should have his mentality rated in guinea-pig power.

There is a double value in working to bring about a great social betterment. Not only do we help bring it about, but in the process we evolve ourselves.

Some one asked Wendell Phillips what his recipe was for deathless fame. His answer was, "Choose an unpopular but worthy cause, and then live for it, fight for it, and die for it."

The seven reforms just named do not call for sacrificial victims. They do, however, call for earnest thought and persistent endeavor.

Alexander the Great died sighing for more worlds to conquer, but we shall never die from Alexander's disability.

Self-pity is the meanest of the vices. Self-pity is introspection.

The motto of Edward Everett Hale, "Look up, not down, out, not in, and lend a hand," is in order now as never before.

* * *

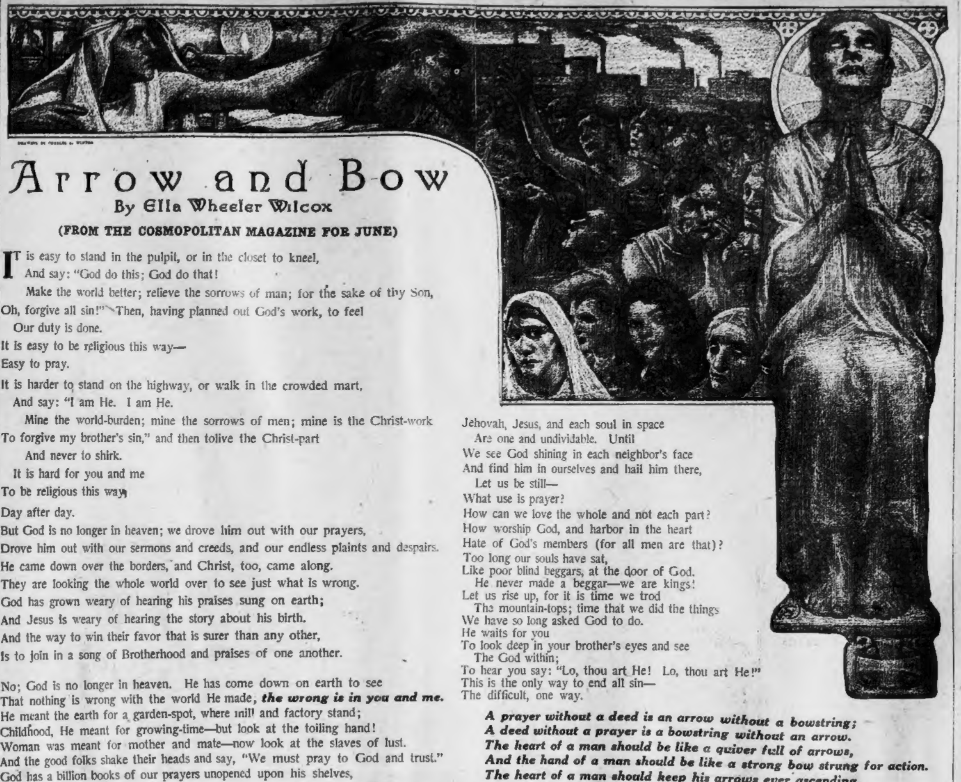
The most helpful sign of the times in which we live is the fact that these seven betterments are receiving attention and approval from pulpit, pew, newspaper office, schoolroom, shop and factory, with scarcely a dissenting voice.

Men and women appreciate them and know that they must come about.

The only opposition is the tug of inertia.

The world is surely moving, and moving in the right direction. The net result of these reforms will be the Health Habit and the Happy Habit.

And when, as a people, these two habits are acquired, we will be well out on the highway toward the Celestial City of Fine Minds.



DRAWING BY CHARLES A. WINTER

Arrow and Bow
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox
(FROM THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE FOR JUNE)

IT is easy to stand in the pulpit, or in the closet to kneel,
And say: "God do this; God do that!
Make the world better; relieve the sorrows of man; for the sake of thy Son,
Oh, forgive all sin!" Then, having planned out God's work, to feel
Our duty is done.
It is easy to be religious this way—
Easy to pray.

It is harder to stand on the highway, or walk in the crowded mart,
And say: "I am He. I am He.
Mine the world-burden; mine the sorrows of men; mine is the Christ-work
To forgive my brother's sin," and then tolive the Christ-part
And never to shirk.
It is hard for you and me
To be religious this way,
Day after day.

But God is no longer in heaven; we drove him out with our prayers,
Drove him out with our sermons and creeds, and our endless plaints and despairs.
He came down over the borders, and Christ, too, came along.
They are looking the whole world over to see just what is wrong.
God has grown weary of hearing his praises sung on earth;
And Jesus is weary of hearing the story about his birth.
And the way to win their favor that is surer than any other,
Is to join in a song of Brotherhood and praises of one another.

No; God is no longer in heaven. He has come down on earth to see
That nothing is wrong with the world He made, the wrong is in you and me.
He meant the earth for a garden-spot, where mill and factory stand;
Childhood, He meant for growing-time—but look at the toiling hand!
Woman was meant for mother and mate—now look at the slaves of lust.
And the good folks shake their heads and say, "We must pray to God and trust."
God has a billion books of our prayers unopened upon his shelves,
For the things we are begging of him to do, he wants us to do ourselves.

Jehovah, Jesus, and each soul in space
Are one and undividable. Until
We see God shining in each neighbor's face
And find him in ourselves and hail him there,
Let us be still—
What use is prayer?
How can we love the whole and not each part?
How worship God, and harbor in the heart
Hate of God's members (for all men are that)?
Too long our souls have sat,
Like poor blind beggars, at the door of God.
He never made a beggar—we are kings!
Let us rise up, for it is time we trod
The mountain-tops; time that we did the things
We have so long asked God to do.
He waits for you
To look deep in your brother's eyes and see
The God within;
To hear you say: "Lo, thou art He! Lo, thou art He!"
This is the only way to end all sin—
The difficult, one way.

A prayer without a deed is an arrow without a bowstring;
A deed without a prayer is a bowstring without an arrow.
The heart of a man should be like a quiver full of arrows,
And the hand of a man should be like a strong bow strung for action.
The heart of a man should keep his arrows ever ascending,
And the hand and the mind of a man should keep at a work unending.

Wedding Customs

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York Today."

IN this season of weddings—elaborate and simple—it is worth while to turn attention to some interesting and important customs.

The bride is fortunate who has a wedding veil of rare old lace which has been worn by her mother as a bride, or which is a precious heirloom in the family. But a veil of tulle is always charming in its simplicity and is so becoming that it never loses favor.

A wedding veil is a distinctive part of the attire of a bride who wears a white bridal gown. Artificial orange blossoms are the only allowable artificial flowers for a bride. If fresh flowers are used they may be the natural orange blossoms, or lilies of the valley, or white orchids, but the latter are seldom used, and as fresh flowers are apt to fade and thus present a disconsolate appearance, they had best be avoided. The traditional orange blossoms, in artificial sprays or wreaths, are always satisfactory.

The wedding gown may be of satin, charmeuse, crepe de chine, chiffon, moire, or brocade, or some dainty, filmy white material. Even organdy, of finest quality, may be chosen for a very youthful bride and if expense must be considered.

* * *

Always, it must be remembered, there is perfect dignity and propriety in the simplest wedding where the bride wears a plain travelling dress and with only near relatives present.

A strict rule of etiquette is that the bride's family shall pay all the expenses of a wedding, the trousseau, invitations, collation, everything connected with the wedding. The bridegroom is not permitted to pay for anything except the ring, the fee to the clergyman, a gift and bouquet to the bride, bouquets or presents to bridesmaids, and presents to the ushers and best man.

A bride who is a widow does not wear white, nor does she wear a veil. As a general rule she chooses pale gray, or mauve, with a hat.

A dress and hat suitable to be worn later for visiting, or similar occasions, may be worn by any bride for the ceremony, and changed for a "going-away" gown.

The Theatres ✤ Offerings of the Week ✤ Coming Events

More Playhouses Close Doors, but the "Misleading Lady" Promises to Remain

Some of the Theatres Cut Season Short, Says Young, in Review of the Year

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

With the performances at the Park and Gaiety theatres last night two more theatres joined the list of playhouses closed for the Summer. The season of rest and repairs has arrived. The closing of the Park last evening and the Hollis a week ago reduces the syndicate's operations in Boston to two houses—the Colonial and the Tremont.

The success of "The Misleading Lady" is likely to keep the Colonial opened for several weeks to come, and as "Adele" has apparently caught the fancy of playgoers with its tuneful music and amorous comedy there seems to be more than an even chance that the Tremont will keep open house right up to the hottest of hot weather.

With the closing of the Park it is to be observed that the present season at that house has been shorter than in other years, thirty-five weeks covering the entire period of its activity since September 1. Recognised as a theatre of long runs, the Park has this year spread its wares over many different kinds of entertainment, and has not been permitted to extend any engagement over six weeks. In all, there have been eight different attractions at the Park, with "The Conspiracy," "Stop, Thief," "The Argyle Case" and "Fanny's First Play," each remaining six weeks. Comparing these engagements with those of other years, it will be seen that the run of even the most successful of the season's plays has been greatly lessened.

The increased number of first-class theatres in the city has doubtless had its influence in cutting down the engagements of some of these attractions. The Hollis Street Theatre, which closed a week ago, finished its season with a record of thirty-two weeks, which, while not as extended as some of those of former years, was distinguished by the exceptionally high character of its attractions. The innovation of the season at the Hollis was the return to that house of musical plays, and the success of both "The Sunshine Girl" and "The Marriage Market" amply demonstrated the wisdom of giving the Hollis its full share of that type of entertainment. With only two musical plays as its allotment, the Hollis managed to utilize twelve of its thirty-two weeks for those attractions.

The season just ended has given the Hollis a long list of brilliant players—a list that cannot be exceeded by any other playhouse in the country. During the year there were seen at this house Maude Adams, John Drew, Billie Burke, Mrs. Fiske, William H. Crane, Annie Russell, Douglas Fairbanks, Amelia Bingham, Nazimova, Julia Sanderson and Donald Brian. The Gaiety Theatre closed its season with thirty-none full weeks to its credit. The stability of burlesque is shown in no better way than in the consistent run of its business—there is practically no variation from year to year.

The Eastern Wheel of burlesque, with which the Gaiety is affiliated, has behind it one of the most substantial theatrical organizations ever known, and each succeeding year finds it stronger than ever. Unlike most theatrical ventures, there are no thin spots in its makeup. The tendency to maintain a high standard of entertainment at popular prices, giving a fair value in goods for the prices charged, has unquestionably kept burlesque on the safe side of popularity. The success of the Gaiety Theatre, which merely reflects the success of the entire Eastern Wheel, is a pretty sound tribute to the sagacity of the men behind the organization.

IT IS THE LIFE—William Wood, manager of the Boston Theatre, said yesterday: "I would rather invent a new dance than be able to write a successful grand opera."

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

On with the dance! If you can't Tango—why, then Hesitate. It is the season of dancing, and the first big carnival of experts will take possession of the Boston Theatre tomorrow. If what the promoters say about the affair is true, it will put the entire city on its toes before the week is ended. The wave of modern dancing as entertainment for the eyes began with the Castle and continued to the performance by G. Hepburn Wilson at Mechanics Hall yesterday, and it will not stop with the carnival that is to draw you to the Boston this week, for there is already advance news that Joan Sawyer and her own particular band of light-footed artists will invade the Shubert Theatre next week. In the festival at the Boston this week it is promised that novelty will be the keynote. The chief attraction will be John Jarrott and Louise Alexander, both of whom have danced themselves into comfortable fortunes. Perhaps the most unique feature of the performance will be the appearance of Colonel Darling, aged seventy-eight, and Mme. De Laware, aged sixty-nine, who will attempt to show that modern dancing is an art for the old as well as for the young. There will be amateurs, too, to hold your attention. Entries are pouring into the box office in great numbers. Yes, indeed, it is the season of dancing. The one-step reigns supreme.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

LOOKING FAR AHEAD—"Sari," the Hungarian operetta, is announced as the first attraction at the Colonial next season. It will open at that house on August 24.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

From things that are serious to moments of dancing frivolity is the plan of operation at the Shubert, where E. H. Sothern and his classics will be followed next week by Joan Sawyer in modern dances. It is a long step, perhaps, but there can be no doubt of the popularity that will follow Miss Sawyer's artistic claims for the modern dance. One of the most brilliant and successful of the season's dancers, Miss Sawyer will bring to Boston the same charms and grace that have been captivating New York for many months. She will also have the assistance of her own company of specialists in this presentation of society dances.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

LUCID EXPLANATION—Ramsey Morris, press representative for E. H. Sothern, reports that he asked the manager of a one-night stand a few weeks ago how he found business. The manager replied that when the show was good business was good, and that when the show was "mediocre" so was the house.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

And now comes the moving picture to point the way to right living. Exhorters and writers who have devoted years of sincere effort in a crusade against human vices are beginning to realize that there is no more potent way to present their arguments than through the medium of moving pictures. It was this realization that brought about the production of "The Drug Terror," a six-part picture drama that graphically reveals the curse of drug taking. Many sincere and powerful articles have been written on the spread of the drug habit, but they have been read by a few of the serious minded and then laid aside and forgotten. Men and women familiar with the conditions have used their money and their influence in a sincere endeavor to stamp out this growing evil, but without avail. And now come the "movies," which at least appear to have taken a firmer grip upon the public mind than any of the former attempts to present the facts in a telling, effective way. "The Drug Terror" at the Globe Theatre is drawing interested audiences, not only because it is a picture drama that teaches a lesson, but because it provides good melodramatic entertainment as well. This film was founded and produced on facts supplied by the greatest authorities in the country on the results of indulgence in drugs and shows that even innocent school children are unconsciously drawn into the net. It was only by the backing of wealthy people interested in sociological reform that the picture was made possible. "The Drug Terror" makes a silent appeal for clean living—it shows the evils of drug taking in a way that will not be quickly forgotten.

BILLS AT THE PLAYHOUSES

Shubert Theatre.

For the second and final week of his engagement at the Shubert Theatre, beginning tomorrow night, E. H. Sothern's repertoire is arranged as follows: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and at Wednesday matinee, "Charlemagne"; Thursday and Friday nights, "Lord Dundreary"; Saturday matinee, "If I Were King," and Saturday night, "Hamlet." If Mr. Sothern desired any proof of his local popularity he received it last week when he presented to large and enthusiastic audiences three plays which have served him admirably in the past and which have apparently lost none of their power to attract and charm theatregoers. "If I Were King" will never grow old, "Dundreary" will continue to yield countless laughs and "Hamlet" will chain attention for all time. Tomorrow night will come the novelty of Mr. Sothern's engagement, "Charlemagne," produced with real success in other cities and now to be seen here for the first time. The writer of "If I Were King" and "The Proud Prince," Justin Huntley McCarthy, is its author. Scenically and in the matter of costumes it will be one of Mr. Sothern's most ambitious efforts, and it will have all the glitter and glow of spectacle and pageant.

Boston Theatre.

In these days of the dancing mania when everything is the one-step, the hesitation and the tango, tremendous interest attaches to the "congress of the world's greatest dancers and competitions for amateurs," which opens at the Boston Theatre tomorrow night. In many respects it may be termed a festival, for professional dancers from all over the world have been gathered for this one week exemplifying all styles of dancing from the so-called modern ballroom dances to the whirlwind Russian and South American creations. In addition to this there will be competitions for amateurs of New England at each performance under the auspices of the Dancing Teachers' Club of Boston, for which eight solid silver cups are offered.

Practically every well-known dancing act in the United States has been signed for this congress. The bill will be headed by Louise Alexander and John Jarrott, who have formed a business partnership for this engagement. Second in interest only will be the presence of Joseph C. Smith, the man who brought the tango to this country as well as the Danse des Apaches.

Then there will be Natalie and Ferrari, acknowledged champions of the Pacific Coast, who will give for the first time in the East their new creation, "The Tommy Atkins." Pretty Bessie De Voie and Dare Phillips, late of "The Doll Girl," will be on hand, as will also Emily Francis Hopper and Ellsworth Cook of the Hotel Astor, New York; Miss Billie Shaw and William George Seabury, proteges of the Castles and direct from Castle House; Colonel Darling, aged seventy-eight, and his white-haired partner, Mme. De Laware, aged sixty-nine, and Charlotte Davies, the model for the famous painting, "Miss Innocence," who will dance with a young Princeton man, Ernest Orr.

Cort Theatre.

"Phyllis" will begin its first full week at the Cort Theatre tomorrow evening. This lively musical play was written by James C. Gray and Harold Vicars, and serves to once more present Grace Freeman to the theatre-going public. The piece is modern, with pretty girls in fetching gowns and a score of lively musical numbers.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

"Waddy," "Mollie" and "Tony," Miss Oxford's wonderful trio of trained elephants, towards the purchase of whom the children of New England contributed $6,500 that they might become permanent inhabitants of the Franklin Park Zoo, will enter upon the second and last week of their engagement at B. F. Keith's theatre tomorrow. The surounding bill will be exceptionally attractive to the children. Bud Fisher, creator of "Mutt and Jeff," and the most famous of American cartoonists, will draw some original pictures. Fred J. Ardath and his rural "cut-ups" have a unique act called "Oh, Hiram," and the Great Leon, a Hindoo wonder worker, will also be seen. Muller and Staneley, two of the cleverest fun makers in vaudeville; Pauline Welch, a charming little singing comedienne, and DeWitt, Burns end Torrence in a novelty called "The Awakening of Toys," are included in the bill.

Castle Square Theatre.

It is because of its thoroughly American atmosphere that "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" has succeeded. Not merely is it American, but it is a play of New England life and character. It will be acted at the Castle Square Theatre during the coming week, and its comedy scenes will disclose the tribulations of Aunt Mary because of the fact that she is blessed with a scapegrace nephew. Especially funny is the scene in which Aunt Mary has "the time of her life" at a dinner party.

Majestic Theatre.

Tomorrow night "Within the Law" will enter upon its final week at the Majestic Theatre. Startling situations and emotional acting rank this play among the foremost of criminal plays. Jane Cowl, as the shop-girl who becomes a successful criminal, gives an admirable performance.

Globe Theatre.

The thrilling scenes and startling incidents of "The Drug Terror," which begins the second week of its engagement at the Globe tomorrow, have furnished the regular patrons of the photo drama with an entertainment after their own liking. The remarkable and varied glimpses of the underwork contrasted with scenes showing the wrecking of a happy home and the shattering of youthful hopes and ambition, ending with one of the most sensational and realistic fire scenes ever shown on the screen, have had the most satisfactory results from a box office standpoint, while the very material swelling of the audiences by the presence of noted physicians, clergymen and the men and women interested in the vital question of how to stamp out the drug evil, has had much to do toward making this a notable production.

Casino Theatre.

The burlesque attraction at the Casino Theatre this week will be the "Golden Crook" show, one of the brightest and best balanced burlesque organizations on the road.

BILLS AT THE PLAYHOUSES

Park Theatre.

Last night ended the dramatic season at the Park Theatre. As usual, the Park had maintained its reputation as the "house of long engagements" and nearly all of the attractions seen there had long visits in Boston. Works of a comedy nature were in the majority.

Tremont Theatre.

In the history of the season's musical shows there has not been one which has received a more overwhelming indorsement as "Adele" now entering upon its second week at the Tremont Theatre. The operetta has made its recent success in New York through the exquisite poetical beauty that is displayed in all parts of the performance.

Wilbur Theatre.

Tomorrow night will begin the fifth and last week of Doris Keane at the Wilbur Theatre, where Edward Sheldon's "Romance" is being given. It is a fact that Sheldon never intended anyone but Doris Keane to create the role of La Cavallini, and indeed, no actress could have been more happily placed.

Scollay Square Olympia.

Several unusual and interesting features will characterize the coming week's bill at Gordon and Lord's Scollay Square Olympia. "The Maid of the Orient," a miniature musical piece, will be one of the big acts. Billy Inman, a popular comedian, will appear in a new comedy Irish skit, and the Five Alarcons will appear in an interesting singing, dancing and instrumental act.

Scenic Temple.

The bill at the Scenic Temple for the coming week will be varied in character. The fifth instalment of "The Perils of Pauline" will be presented.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

S. H. Dudley will be seen at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week in a musical comedy with thirty people.

Colonial Theatre.

"The Misleading Lady," with Lewis S. Stone in the principal role, begins its third week at the Colonial Theatre tomorrow night. The original production and the New York cast which has played seven months at the Fulton Theatre will continue to present this funny play by Charles Goddard and Paul Dickey for a number of weeks to come.

Howard Athenaeum.

Violet Mascotte's "Ragtime Review Girls" will hold sway this week at the Howard Athenaeum, and J. Theo Murphy will put forth another bright burletta assisted by a beauty chorus. There will also be a vaudeville bill.

Plymouth Theatre.

"Under Cover" will take another step in its program towards establishing the longest run in this city. It is now on the eve of its twenty-second week and as popular as ever. The one striking feature of the play's astonishing success is the fact that it came here with hardly more than the ordinary mention of its arrival and from ordinary business at the start gradually rose to the highest popularity.

Loew's Orpheum Theatre.

The bill for the first half of the week at Marcus Loew's Orpheum Theatre will be headed by Sager Midgeley and company in the European farce comedy, "Early Morning Reflections." Elizabeth Cutty, a charming girl violinist, formerly of the six musical Cuttys, will give a violin song review.

Loew's St. James.

William H. St. James and company will make their first appearance in a Marcus Loew theatre in this city when he comes to the St. James this week as the feature of a big bill. Clarence Wilbur, the well-known comedian, who is a big favorite in Boston, will also be an added feature on the same bill.

Kinemacolor Pictures.

At the Tremont Temple the famous Kinemacolor pictures will begin a limited engagement this week. These wonderful pictures with their natural colorings were exhibited here several seasons ago with great success. The program for this engagement will comprise the very latest productions, including a three-reel production of the life of Nathan Hale, the heroic young martyr of the American revolution.

Joan Sawyer Dances.

Joan Sawyer, after six months at her own Persian Garden in New York, will appear at the head of her own dancing carnival company at the Shubert Theatre, Monday night, May 25, for a week's engagement. The visit of Miss Sawyer will mark the inauguration of a whirlwind transcontinental tour from coast to coast of this celebrated dancer, who for the past year and a half has danced continuously in New York, not once having the time to visit other cities owing to the great demand for her services.

Coming Events.

Joe Webber and Lew Fields will make their first joint appearance in Boston in exactly ten years at the Boston Theatre on Monday, May 25, when hey come to that playhouse in "Hokey Pokey."

Fanny Brice, late star of the Ziegfeld "Follies," will be an early attraction at B. F. Keith's Theatre.

John Craig has selected "The Man of War's Man," a military drama written by James W. Harkins, Jr., and Thomas E. Shea, for this week's bill at the Castle Square Theatre.

Bud Fisher in Action at Keith's

Funmaker Will Be Seen at Work in Boston This Week.

It is quite the proper thing in this prosperous day of Art—with a capital A—and artists, for the nationally-famous cartoonist to show himself to the general public and treat them to a demonstration of his work in process, as well as to show them what manner of man he is personally.

The vaudeville stage has welcomed many of these distinguished personages to the delight of thousands of all ages—men like R. E. Outcault, Winsor McKay, Walt McDougall, Bert Levy, Art Bowen, Rem-Brandt, and many others.

But seldom has there been a cartoonist who possesses the popularity and vogue enjoyed by Bud Fisher, the illustrious creator of "Mutt and Jeff," two of the funniest characters in pictorial fiction. Fisher's cartoons are one of the big features of the Boston AMERICAN, and they have won for him fame and fortune in a few short years.

"Did you see the latest mix-up of Mutt and Jeff?" is a common query almost any day, and certain it is that Bud Fisher has made more people laugh than any other living man. His cartoons put one in good humor and keep one there for a whole day—until the next cartoon comes out and renews the pleasure. And now it will be the pleasure of thousands of Bud's admirers to see the famous cartoonist himself at work at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week, and to see him create some new oddities of "Mutt and Jeff" humor.

Doris Keane on the "Stage Kiss"

Hamlet's advice to the players showed clearly what were William Shakespeare's views on acting. "To hold the mirror up to Nature," however, some actors believe should be done in a modified sense, and that it is entirely more effective to suggest the spirit rather than to exhibit actuality.

When the question, "Do stage kisses mean anything to the kissers?" was put to Doris Keane, the actress replied that she could conceive nothing more difficult than to play a romantic scene, involving a kiss, with a man for whom one naturally had a romantic affection. Under such circumstances the personal relations would be so poignant that it would be impossible to sustain the characterization.

Norumbega Park.

The final touches are now being made for the opening of Norumbega's eighteenth season. Already the telephone lines have been busy with anxious inquiries for the opening day. The floral and landscape gardening effects, for which Norumbega has become renowned, has been added to this year, and the nature lover will find some rare specimens of shrubs and evergreens, which the management has spared no expense to obtain. On Saturday the first performance in the open-air theatre will be presented afternoon and evening, the management having booked an excellent vaudeville bill for the opening week.

FINE BARBS WITH '101 RANCH' SHOW

Seven-eighths of the Arabian horses in this country will be here with the 101 Ranch, Real Wild West Show, on May 25. Leading the herd is the full-blooded "Mossoon," owned by Joe Miller, one of the owners of the exhibition. This stallion is a Kochlani, or pure breed Arab horse, and the pedigree of this steed can be traced to the stud of King Solomon. There are three breeds in the Arab herd with the exhibition—the Attechi, which is found wild; the Kadischi, a mixed breed, and the Kochlani, of which Mr. Miller's mount is recognized as the best specimen now in the United States.

Every lover of horseflesh has for years recognized and anticipated the treat the visit of the 101 Ranch affords, for, in the fullest sense of the term, it is certainly a horse show, with its employment of several hundred equines of international breeds and usages. The gamut of horseflesh, from the blue-blooded aristocrats of the ranch, trained to the syncopated measures of the tango, to the scraggly cayuse of the Indian, as well as the proud prancing steeds trained to pick their way across precarious mountain trails, to the stocky little polo ponies, for which the 101 Ranch is noted, are all paraded before the spectator.

101 Ranch Show.

Real Indians, real cowboys, real cowgirls, real bronchos will be with the 101 Ranch Real Wild West, which comes here on May 25 for a week's engagement. The Indian delegation is composed of simon-pure Redmen, each selected for some personal accomplishment or historical fact.

The cowboys are all from the ranch at Bliss, Oklahoma. The ropers are all medal winners of the largest frontier day celebration and Western stampede contests. The cowgirls come fresh from the ranch, while the broncho busters work Winter and Summer breaking the cattle on the ranch.

BIG BENEFIT FOR FAMILY OF SLAIN NEWSBOY TONIGHT

Governor to Be in Notable Audience at Concert to Aid Family of Louis Gold.

STAGE FAVORITES TO APPEAR

The sunshine of the smile of a crippled newsboy and the cheeriness of his greeting as he used to sell his papers on Boston's streets will fill the Majestic Theatre tonight. And every one in the vast audience which will undoubtedly pack the playhouse will feel it, for Louis Gold numbered his friends by the thousands.

Louis was a crippled newsboy. Two weeks ago he lost his life through a bullet fired by a woman's hand and intended for another. Louis was the innocent bystander—and he fell with a bullet wound in his neck. Several days later he died at the City Hospital. Tonight, through the untiring efforts of his friends, there will be given a benefit at the Majestic Theatre for his grief-stricken family.

And the benefit will be something notable. Governor Walsh will be there to speak. So will Mayor Curley. Another guest in the Governor's box will be Secretary of State Donahue. And besides these there will be a notable array of theatrical talent—stars from among the best of the shows now apearing at Boston theatres.

GET YOUR TICKET EARLY.

You will want to be there. If you haven't bought your ticket already, get it now. For the cause is most worthy—the support of a family of which the slain newsboy was the sole support.

Louis Gold's whole life was a golden lesson. Daily from early morn until midnight, he worked. He was the same from day to day. He was always smiling, always cheerful. And every cent he made he turned over to his mother for the care of the family. There is an invalid father, the heart-broken mother, and nine young brothers and sisters. It will be to help them that the money you spend for tickets to the benefit will go.

In the entertainment will appear Miss Jane Cowl and the members of her company, giving the first act of "Within the Law." This alone is worth ten times the price of admission—far more than that, just like any one of the other stellar parts of the benefit. The fact is that it is seldom Boston play-goers have a chance to see such a gallery of stars in the same evening.

There will be George Wilson, a prime favorite and most deservedly. You remember him—the old Boston Museum star. He is now appearing with the E. H. Sothern company. Like the other volunteers in the good cause Mr. Wilson consented to give his time and talent free to help the Gold family.

Another star will be Miss Grace Freeman, leading lady of the Phyllis Company, one of the most winsome and clever of actresses. There will be a number of others, altogether making up an entertainment well worth while. And then think of what material good you will be doing a family of eleven by going to the Majestic tonight. It is an appeal that touches the heart, and the entertainment will be one that will more than satisfy:

Rarely, indeed, has a better bill been staged. Here it is:

1. Orchestra, Majestic Theatre.
2. Address by Governor Walsh.
3. Address by Mayor Curley.
4. Miss Jane Cowl and the members of her company, giving the first act of "Within the Law."
5. Miss M. Harriett Joyce of Boston, contralto, "Jean of Arc," "The Slave Song" and "Annie Laurie."
6. Selections by the newsboys' band of Boston, twenty pieces: "The Palms," "A Melody of Patriotic Airs."
7. George Wilson, the old Boston Museum favorite, now with E. H. Sothern, giving Eugene Field reading, "John Smith of the U. S. A."
8. The Feist Trio.
9. Miss Grace Freeman, star of the Phyllis company of the Cort Theatre: "The June Roses," "A Little Bit of Irish."
10. George O'Donnell of the Adele company, a ballad: "The Clang of Joy."
11. Lorraine and Bold, sketch, "An Up-to-Date Flirtation," played in New England Sundays.
12. H. W. Fox and Carolyn Carr, recitations from the works of Dr. Drummond, one of Canada's famous poets. This act was given before the present King of England in Winnipeg a number of years ago.
13. The Bell Boy Trio from the Orpheum Theatre: "College Boy," "Rose of the Mountain Trail."
14. George Evers, black-face comedian from the Orpheum Theatre, talking act.

Nantasket Boats.

"Our new schedule, which started Saturday," announces General Manager Lane of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company, "will serve the public with practically a trip every hour throughout the day, which is undoubtedly the best service ever offered in the early season." In previous years the heavy travel did not start until along the first of June, but all records have been broken during the past months, a greater number of people having patronized this line than ever before. In early June the Betty Alden will be brought into service for the Plymouth trip. This popular steamer will continue to make its daily trips down the coast to the quaint little town of Plymouth which is known worldwide for its many points of historic interest. Due to the success of last year, the management has engaged the Lina Lewis Nautical Orchestra for the coming season. Vast improvements have been made during the Winter at Nantasket Beach, and many new attractions will await the Summer crowds visiting the beach resort.

The Lambs' Gambol.

Judging from the avalanche of mail orders for seats for the Public Gambol of the Lambs, which takes place at the Boston Opera House, Saturday evening, May 30 (Decoration Day), this year's visit of the Lambs will be the most notable one in the history of that remarkable organization from a financial as well as artistic standpoint.

John Philip Sousa's band of sixty will furnish the orchestral part of the entertainment, while in the "cast" of the various dramatic and musical numbers written specially for this occasion will be DeWolf Hopper, James O'Neil, William Courtleigh, David Belasco, Wilton Lackaye, William Collier, Burton Holmes, Digby Bell, Bruce McRae, Harry Woodruff, William Farnum, George Nash, Edward Abeles, Thomas Ross, Andrew Mack, Frank McIntyre, Frank Lalor, Nat Wills, Macklyn Arbuckle, Thomas Wise, Irving Berlin, Edwin Stevens, Brandon Tynan, William Elliott, Effingham Pinto, George Probert and Joseph Kilgour.

It has been decided to give but one performance here, and to play the matinee in Worcester.

"Successful, Not Great," Says Farrar

Famous Melrose Singer Makes $1,500 a Night ✳ Calls American Girl Best-Dressed in Whole World ✳ Says We Have No Art but What We Import

Talks of Her Struggles and Plans

GERALDINE FARRAR AS SHE REALLY LOOKS TODAY.

You are impressed with two things after a twenty-minute talk with Geraldine Farrar. One is that she is a veritable volcano of nervous energy and intensity; she is never quiet, never lounges about in the manner that has come to be regarded as typically womanly; restless—but not irritatingly so, for from the whirlpool of nervousness exudes a powerful and compelling personality—the personality that has brought the music-loving world in homage to her feet and that has done its part in elevating her to the topmost rung in the operatic ladder.

The other is that she is a level-headed, sensible American woman, with a great source of knowledge, gained through much study, travel and the ability to see with her mind as well as with her eyes; of opinion varied and interesting, and an almost uncanny frankness in expressing it. Farrar's opinion reminds one of the weather—"Very sorry if you don't like it, of course, but it cannot be changed." And at the end of the twenty minutes you know—whether or not you have ever heard her sing—that she is very much the artist—but you have revised your preconceived notions of what constitutes the "artistic temperament."

For Farrar, although undeniably temperamental—it is the Farrar temperament that establishes that perfect understanding with her audience—has not the "artistic temperament" in its popular conception; she seems to be immune from the numerous idiosycrasies that most artists have—or claim to have. The exaggerated mannerisms, the carefully cultivated marks of individuality, the air that seems to say, "Behold! I am the great artist!"—these are not hers; her only idiosyncrasy—if it can be called such—is restlessness—and you do not think of restlessness, but of power and the command of power.

TALKS NERVOUSLY, TOO.

Farrar talked of many things and expressed a willingness to talk of many others. She talked breathlessly, nervously punctuating her sentences with never-ceasing taps of a silk shod foot against the floor.

This talk was had with the famous Melrose singer just before she sailed for Europe after her successful season in this country.

And when she talked—to speak in the vernacular—she "said something."

The first thing she said proved her right to the title of "the artist without the artistic temperament;" that is, the artistic temperament as the ordinary person knows and recognizes it. She was asked:

"What has been your greatest ambition? What have you always wanted to do, or be, more than anything else in the world?"

It was a stock question; by all the laws of the "artistic temperament" it should have brought a stock answer. Surely Miss Farrar, being an artist, had always wanted to drive a locomotive; or an airship; or stand at the wheel of a vessel while it pitched and rolled in storm seas; or maybe she pined for the care-free, roving life of the gypsy, or cherished a desire to be a missionary in heathen lands—

She smiled.

"I have always wanted," she said, "to be a great singer!"

INSISTS SHE'S NOT GREAT.

The interviewer started to speak, but she answered it before he asked it.

"No," she said, "I am not a great singer! I am a successful singer, perhaps, but I'm not great! I fear I never shall be!"

It was to "Ah!"

Possessing a voice that has brought her the crown of queen of her art, a voice that has thrilled hundreds of thousands of all kinds of people with its glory and beauty, and a voice, incidentally, that brings her $1,600 in cold hard cash every time she sings—and she wants to be great!

Something of the sort was suggested to her.

"The ability to earn large sums of money does not constitute greatness," she said. "I do not consider men great because they have amassed huge fortunes; and I do not consider myself a great singer because I can earn $1,500 at each performance. I am only fortunate. Really I am only an ordinary singer; circumstances have conspired to give me what little fame I may have and the power to command a large salary.

"I do not think anyone is really great until he or she has done something that has never been done; or until he has done something better than anyone else has ever done it. That is the reason I do not think I am a great singer. There are many today who sing as well as I; there have been many in the past who were better.

"To be a great singer has been the only ambition I've ever had, and every time I advance a step in my art my standards of greatness are raised. When I was a little girl I thought I would be great when I could sing well enough to sing a solo in the church choir; and when I achieved that I thought greatness would be mine when I became a grand opera singer. This also have I become, and yet I have not achieved my ambition.

"The human voice has its limitations, and art cannot take it beyond them. In our mind we may see the heights to which we would climb, but it is a physical impossibility to reach them. We reach our prescribed levels and there we stay. Artists work continually in a useless effort to achieve the impossible in singing, and, although our dear friend the public at times would almost have us believe we have succeeded, we know that we have not, and that we never will.

"And that is another reason why I do not believe that I am a great singer, and that there are no really great singers. To approach my ideals of greatness one would have to achieve the impossible in vocal art."

"I believe that the American girl is the best dressed and best looking in the world," she said, "but one fad that has lately entered her life threatens to make her the worst looking. That is the fad that stamps as bad form any show of emotion, or any expression of life. If you do not believe that fad is here, go out on the street of any big city any sunny afternoon and watch the girls—typical American girls. They'll be as beautiful as ever, but it will be the cold beauty of an icicle or a snowbank. There is nothing alive and glowing in their expressions; there is no rapturous joy in their looks; no sign that they are alive, healthy and young and pretty. They cultivate carefully the look of a graven image, and are taught that to show any emotion other than a cold smile is bad form, and all the beauty and joy that the face can show and communicate have been ironed out by convention.

NO SPIRIT IN THEIR FACES.

"Why doesn't the American girl be alive and let her face show it? There is nothing more beautiful or inspiring than the face of a young girl who is filled with the joy of living; and there is nothing more discouraging or depressing than the face of a young girl who has allowed a fad to hide the beauty nature gave her and who drowns all her joy of life and of living in an immobile mask because to do so is good form!

"There is no American art," she said. "What art we have in America we import, for art here is a luxury and people have to be educated up to it, whether it be the opera, painting or sculpture. We have no art because we are too young as a people. It takes ages to produce art, and the commingling of different bloods and peoples. The time will come when there will be American art, but it will be found that it was produced by a mixed race, with America as the background. We Americans who have succeeded in art are blazing the way, and the work will be easier for those who come after us, and American art will arrive quicker by reason of our pioneer work."

Gossip of the Plays and Players

Got Her Chance and Won Success

Natalie Alt's skyrocket ride to fame, like that of most theatre folks who arrive sensationally, was something of an accident. Audrey Maple was first engaged for the same part in "Adele," and would have sung it except for a disagreement over her release from a contract she had signed with Arthur Hammerstein to continue with Emma Trentini and "The Firefly."

Enter then Natalie Alt. A year ago she had been given the small part of the princess in "The Quaker Girl," understudying the name part sung by Ina Claire. Two or three times toward the end of the run at the Park Theatre, she had sung the role and acquitted herself most creditably as both singer and actress. When a No. 2 "Quaker Girl" company was organized Miss Alt was given the title role, and in the West scored an emphatic success.

When Miss Maple decided to take no chances with the new production, Mr. Bickerton thought of Miss Alt. She rehearsed with enthusiasm, and now it is hard to imagine any one else singing Adele with more grace or charm of manner.

Co-Eds Lose Their Right to Be Kissed

CHICAGO, May 16.—"I kiss, I have kissed"—principal parts of the verb "kiss" yesterday.

"I kiss, I kist, I have kist"—principal parts of the verb "kiss" today.

That's what the Chicago Principals' Club did to a poor lonesome little verb while the attention of the nation was centred upon developments in Mexico City. The verb was found today in a pitiful condition. It now lies at the hospital for mutilated language in a serious condition.

"I lost my 'ed,'" the creature kept repeating over and over again. "I lost my 'ed. I don't remember anything after that."

Investigation brought the information that the Chicago Principals' Club had met and adopted circular No. 23 of the simplified spelling board. This does away with the final "e" in words like "carve" and "engine." It substituted "t" and "d" for the final "ed" in words like "aimd" and "kist."

FORTUNE WON BY JOAN SAWYER

And Two Years Ago She Was an Unknown Down in Texas.

The announcement that Joan Sawyer will inaugurate her transcontinental whirlwind dancing tour at the Shubert Theatre May 25 means the coming visit to Boston of one of the most extraordinary dancers of recent years.

Joan Sawyer is a Texas girl, who went to New York a little over two years ago, seeking fame and fortune on the stage. The best engagement she could get was a small part in musical comedy, but there her beautiful dancing attracted much attention. At that time the dancing craze was just beginning and Miss Sawyer devoted herself to studying the tango and the Brazilian maxixe. She perfected herself so well that she won instant popularity in the cabarets. From these it was only a step to the New York Roof Garden, where she danced for over six months, and brought back popularity and crowds to a place that had been on the decline.

Miss Sawyer made such a success on the New York Roof that she decided upon her own amusement place and secured the lease on an empty hall adjacent to the Winter Garden, at Broadway and Fiftieth street. This she had redecorated in oriental fashion, and she reopened it under the name of "Joan Sawyer's Persian Garden."

From the very first the keynote of the whole establishment was exclusiveness. This was maintained by restrictions which required patrons to be in evening dress.

Miss Sawyer danced two or three times a night in the Persian Garden, and visitors had the privilege of the floor at other times. The receipts and attendance jumped up so remarkably that Miss Sawyer is credited with having made a small fortune the past Winter.

West Meath Club Meets Tonight.

The last regular meeting of the County Westmeath Club will be held Sunday, May 17, at 8 o'clock, at St. Rose Hall, 17 Worcester street.

'GREAT DANCER MUST BE MODEST'

So Says Natalie, Who Comes with Partner to Boston Theatre This Week.

"Modesty is a necessary qualification for one who desires to become a really great dancer," declares Natalie, the little danseuse who comes to the Boston Theatre this week with her partner, Martin Ferrari, to show their version of the modern dances besides their own cycle of classic dances, which includes "The Dance of the Hour" from "La Giaconda," a solo number by Natalie, and "Tom Atkins," never done before in the East.

"One must also have a well-proportioned and healthy physique," she says, "as well as a cultured and artistic taste and dogged determination. One must have clean habits and a clean mind, too."

Natalie is an American girl, and proud of it. Ferrari was born in Odessa, Russia.

Natalie knows the ballets and all the old English and Continental dances, but Ferrari had hard work to persuade her to take up the modern kind in vaudeville.

"All my ambitions are bound up in the legitimate—the classic and character dances—but the public is dance-mad, and one must, of course, submit to the general desires," declares Natalie

Anna Gould Cannot Abandon Rome Case

ROME, May 16.—A report has reached here that the Duchess of Talleyrand (Miss Anna Gould of New York, whose first husband was Count Boni de Castellane) has complained through some American newspaper that she has lost faith in Rome justice, and therefore will abandon her case before the Vatican tribunal. Members of the Sacra Romana Rota received from the Duchess last week notice that she would withdraw her defence in Castellane's suit to have their marriage annulled. She will not be permitted to do so, for when a case is once begun in that tribunal it must go on to the end.
